Next Celebration To Be Even Bigger Quincy's First Night A Crowd Pleaser

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Saying that the city's First Night festivities last week were "an overwhelming success that exceeded all expectations," First Night Committee Chairman Michael Cheney said Tuesday plans are already underway to make Quincy's next New Year's Eve celebration even bigger and better.

Cheney, who expressed great enthusiasm over the success of last Thursday night's events, said he was confident that the second annual First Night in Quincy could be an improvement over the first.

"I talked to a number of people at the event," said Cheney. "It became very evident throughout the night where improvements could be made."

Cheney noted that one of the most important changes next year will be an increase in the amount of food served. He said while approximately 1,000 meals were served at one of last week's most popular events, an International Food Festival at the Quincy Center for Technical Education (Vocational School) Gym, having more food on hand next year would be a wise idea.

"I'd like to triple the amount of food next year," he said. "I'd also like to increase the number of street entertainers, so that people on the outside can be entertained while they're standing in line for food."

Cheney added that he would like to increase the number of corporate sponsors supporting First Night festivities, noting that a Sponsorship Outreach Program will begin next month.

Public Safety, New School Construction 1993 Top Priorities Sheets Declares City 'Economically Sound'

By STEVE KAVANAGH

Proclaiming Quincy "economically sound" during his mid-term address Monday, Mayor James Sheets said the city is now ready to bolster police and fire protection and begin new school construction.

Sheets announced that goals for the future include:

- Increase fire department personnel to the 1990 level.
- Expand the police department's Special Operations Unit.
- Expand the crime prevention program.
- Downtown retail development.
- Increased tourism.
- Creating a new governance structure for Quincy College.
- Creating a commission on families.
- Consolidating functions from various city departments including purchasing, personnel, maintenance, and inspections.

Reorganization and cutting the cost of government have been the keys to overcoming budget crisis' in recent years, Sheets said.

"The city of Quincy is solvent and economically sound. And as I prepare the fiscal year '94 budget for (Cont'd on Page 10) fiscally but we still have to be prudent. We have things on our agenda and I think we'll complete them. I think the mayor's leadership is excellent," Toland said. "If things are so good we should give some of the money back to the taxpayers or lower taxes," Cahill said. "We've raised taxes every year under the Sheets administration."

Cahill said several city departments are outspending their budgets just halfway through the fiscal year.

"We will have to dip into the free cash account and that will make things tight if there is an emergency," Cahill said.

Auditor Robert Foy confirmed that the Police and Public Works departments are spending at deficit levels.

"Overtime is up in the police department because of stepped up coverage and a shortage of patrolmen," Foy said. He also said the DPW was spending more than expected because of the recent storm.

"We should have enough money in free cash to take care of (police and DPW budget shortfalls)," Foy said. "Particularly if (Cont'd on Page 10)

City Councillor-at-Large Timothy Cahill criticized Mayor James Sheets plans to increase spending in the next fiscal year.

Otherwise, members of the City Council reacted favorably to Sheets' mid-term address Monday and echoed the mayor's feelings of optimism for 1993.

"I don't think we are out of the woods yet economically," Cahill said. "I don't think we can base our budget on rosy projections from the state of Massachusetts. We should still be cautious."

"The mayor does reflect the optimism of everyone that the economy is turning and the city is going to keep advancing inch by inch to a place where we want to be," said Councillor-at-Large Patricia Toland. "We have weathered the storm success of Quincy's initial First Night celebration is what makes him so eager to begin work on the second. He estimated that between 13,000 and 15,000 people visited the 16 indoor sites and three outdoor tents that were among last week's festivities.

"It was a very, very friendly atmosphere, and that's exactly what our objective was," said Cheney. "A family-oriented, non-alcoholic evening that could be fun for everyone.

"The crowd, from what I could gather, was equally divided between people who had never attended a First Night before and those who have gone to Boston's in the past. I heard nothing but positive comments about all of our events and most people stayed right up until the midnight fireworks at Faxon Field."

The success of the evening, Cheney said, was due mainly to the teamwork of those who helped organize and oversee the event.

"Everybody pulled together," said Cheney. "Our volunteers and coordinators from the First Night Committee, workers and officials from the various city departments, and all of the sponsors. Everybody did an excellent job."

He added that the media coverage of WJDA, The Quincy Sun, The Patriot Ledger and Continental Cablevision was also an important reason for the large attendance at the celebration.

Cheney said those who missed the festivities may get to see them after all, noting that Continental Cablevision is planning to put together two videos, one on last week's celebration and the other a promotion for the second annual First Night.

Regarding the next First Night celebration, Cheney said plans are being made to hold a second annual First Family Day at Faxon Field. The first such event, held last May 17, helped to offset the cost of First Night, according to Cheney.

Cheney also said a call to artists who wish to attend the second annual First Night "will be put out no later than April." He added that preference will be given to local artists.

Finally, Cheney said he will be taking suggestions from anyone wishing to offer any input on the upcoming First Night celebration.

"A number of public officials who observed the event made notes and will back with recommendations," he said, "but I'm also taking suggestions from the general public."

Those with suggestions or questions regarding the second annual First Night in Quincy can contact Cheney at Quincy City Hall, City Council Office, 1305 Hancock St., Quincy, MA 02169.

Wants Quincy College Governance Clarified Johnson Withdraws As Presidential Candidate At Eastfield College

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Expressing his strong desire to help institute a new governance procedure at Quincy College, President Dr. O. Clayton Johnson has withdrawn as a presidential candidate at Eastfield College in Dallas, Texas.

Dr. Johnson has been a strong advocate of clarifying the college's governance or "chain of command." Presently, Johnson reports to the school superintendent, a process some local leaders believe interferes with the needs of the city's K-12 school system.

Johnson and other clarification proponents want the college to be placed under a board of trustees which would implement and oversee college policies, thereby leaving the Quincy School Committee to concentrate on non-college education matters.

Johnson has been president at Quincy College since 1983. During his tenure, the college has doubled enrollment, not raised tuition in four years, opened a new campus in Plymouth and other satellite campuses, and diversified minority and international student enrollment to more than 20 percent.

Financially, the college has flourished, despite the recent recession. In fact, the college has been an economic beacon, not a financial burden, to Quincy. In his 10 years, Johnson noted the college has paid the city more thru $5 million to operate the school.

"These things have been accomplished but clarification of governance has not," Johnson said. "It's a complex problem that has not been solved. I find it's my responsibility to stay on until it's finished."

"Then I can make a decision on my future," he added.

In September, Councillor Tim Cahill proposed a home-rule petition which, if adopted by the city and state legislature, would place Quincy College under a board of trustees. The proposal has the support of several officials, including Mayor James Sheets.

Johnson said he made his decision to remain at the request of political leaders, board members, students, colleagues and personal friends. He expressed his personal desire to complete governance planning by March and begin new governance oversight on July 1.

Johnson met with Eastfield College officials three times, including two visits to the Dallas campus. Eastfield representatives travelled once to Quincy to meet with him.

Johnson said he was invited to return to Eastfield last month and meet with the college chancellor but decided to withdraw before making the trip. "I was not offered by job. I withdrew before that point."

"I was seriously considering it. The last six months have sort of led me to that," Johnson said.

Last fall, Johnson was suspended for five days without pay by School Supt. Eugene Creedon for allegedly threatening him. After a disciplinary hearing in November, the School Committee voted to suspend Johnson for two-weeks without pay for "conduct unbecoming" to an employee of the Quincy school department.

Johnson maintains he is innocent and is considering a civil rights suit against the school committee for racial discrimination. Johnson, the only black administrator in the city's history, is the only city employee not to receive a raise in four years.

In light of what has occurred over the past six months, Johnson said his family wanted him to take the Eastfield College position if it were offered.

"My family has been tormented by newspaper articles. They voted to go to Texas," Johnson is married and has four children, two grown children living in

'Saturday School' For Project 2000 Students

By STEVE KAVANAGH

Many 11-year-olds are concerned with paper routes, Little League and video games--not getting ready for college.

But that's exactly what some Broad Meadows Middle School sixth graders will be doing this spring.

Students who graduated from Snug Harbor Community School last year are part of Quincy College's Project 2000 which guarantees tuition to the college for those who graduate from high school in the year 2000.

The project also provides educational incentives to the sixth graders between now and 2000. A "Saturday School" program is planned for this spring for the sixth graders and will be held at Snug Harbor. The program will also be open to sixth graders from Snug Harbor who are enrolled in the advanced placement program at Central Middle School.

Beginning this spring, enrichment classes will be offered each semester which will last from eight to ten weeks. The classes will be instructive and entertaining and will attempt to build a "love of learning" and a sense that learning can be fun.

Suggested activities include science experiments, working with computers, exploring careers, guest speakers and local field trips (including a trip to Quincy College).

Dean Richard Pessin of Quincy College and Broad Meadows principal Gerald Butler have developed an outline for support programs for the Project 2000 students which includes the Saturday classes.

A middle school teacher will be hired to develop the lessons and teach the classes. Members of the college's student honor society will also work with the students. Quincy College will pay for the program.

Quincy College will also sponsor one field trip each semester for the students. Suggested trips include visits to museums and the theater, a whale watch, etc.

The college will also offer a free class at Snug Harbor for the parents of Project 2000 students.

"We are very excited and pleased with the college's investment in our young people," said Dr. Carol Lee Griffin, assistant superintendent of Quincy Public Schools.

Estimated $153,821 In Wire Permits

The Quincy Wire Department of Inspection issued 133 permits for an estimated cost of $153,821 in wiring during November, reports Wire Inspector Thomas Purpura.

During the month, there were 38 certificates of approval to the Massachusetts Electric Company and $3,825 in permit fees.

In addition, there were 261 inspections, 25 reinspections and 57 defects noted.

DON'T PAY MORE FOR LESS

When a landmark study reported that one regular-strength aspirin tablet taken every other day can help prevent heart attacks in some people, thousands of heart disease patients cheered. For those whose doctors have recommended aspirin therapy, it pays to keep a few consumer facts in mind. Aspirin is simply acetylsalicylic acid. It doesn't matter whether you buy it under a costly name brand or an inexpensive generic label, the medication is the same. Also, beware of products that offer half the usual aspirin dose, usually at many times the price.
If your doctor has recommended a half dose for any reason, an inexpensive pill splitter, available at most pharmacies, will deliver it handily.

P.S. Never take aspirin regularly without asking your doctor. Prescribing such treatment for yourself could be dangerous.

There is really no reason to pay more for a brand-name prescription or non-prescription drug when the pharmacologically identical, much less expensive alternative is available. If you would like

Council 'Seat Warmer'?

Councillor Patricia Toland appears to have the assistant City Clerk vacancy wrapped up and it will become official this month.

But it still leaves some speculation — and a little intrigue — over who will get to fill the council at-large seat she will be vacating.

Toland reportedly has lined up enough votes among her council colleagues to take over the $31,000 assistant clerk post. Five votes are needed.

She probably will be elected at the Jan. 11 City Council meeting.

Former Mayor-Councillor Joseph
LaRaia sometime ago staked out a claim for the seat if Toland got the assistant clerk's job.

But now there's talk of a possible "seat warmer" — someone who will fill out the unexpired term and not run for the seat this fall.

LaRaia feels he is the rightful one to take the seat as runner-up in last year's city election. He finished fourth behind Toland with Tim Cahill first and Michael Cheney second. LaRaia was 1,913 votes behind Toland.

LaRAIA

The vacancy would have au-tomatically gone to LaRaia if a resolve introduced by Toland more than a year ago had been passed. The resolve which called for a vacancy to be filled by the runner-up in the previous election was shuffled into a committee and never came back out to be acted on.

There are mixed feelings about the resolution. Some feel it has a drawback because it would automatically put into office a candidate who didn't make it with the voters in the previous election.

And, by giving a defeated candidate an office the voters would not give him, places him in an incumben-tial status for the next election.

Those in favor of the resolution argue it would eliminate behind-the-scene politicking. And, give the seat to a person who had the interest to run for it in the previous election.

Latest word around City Hall is that LaRaia is not alone in seeking the seat. Ron Iacobucci who has run for the City Council in the past, reportedly has some support.

Those leaning toward a "seat warmer" stress that it would leave it up to the people to make the call this fall.

TOLAND

One name being mentioned is Frank Kearns, popular community activist. Kearns is not seeking the seat, but he has support among some of the councillors.

KEARNS

If Kearns or someone else got the seat just to hold until the fall, it would mean an open at-large seat in this year's city election. A seat one or two of the present ward councillors would no doubt run for. Which, of course, would then open up one or two ward seats.

Ah, politics. Sure beats baseball.

TIME HEALS EVERYTHING. Or, so it seems.

Former Mayor Walter Hannon, Joseph LaRaia and Francis McCauley were among the guests at Quincy's mid-term ceremonies.

Long-time City Hall observers couldn't help note LaRaia and Hannon who slugged it out in one of Quincy's all-time mayoral campaign brawls in 1975, were sitting side by side Monday.

"Not too long ago," one observed, "McCauley would have had to sit between them."

WELL DONE: Councillor Michael Cheney was delighted with the success of Quincy's first First Night New Year's Eve celebration which he headed up. And, well he should be.

CHENEY

It was an ambitious undertaking and hardly a sure thing. The big question was: would it fly? Being this close to Boston could Quincy compete in the crowd drawing department? Quincy, it turned out, could, attracting thousands to Quincy Center. And, the nice part about it was that a good section of the crowd were Moms and Dads and children all enjoying a family fun night together.

No alcohol. No problems.

Cheney and his committee who put a lot of work into the project, deserve a "Well Done."

INCIDENTALLY, New Year's Eve coincidentally was also a "milestone" birthday for Cheney's wife, Tish.

"Boy," someone said to Cheney, "you sure know how to throw a birthday party."

Cyclist Plans Cross-County Trek To Help YMCA Youth Programs

By ROBERT BOSWORTH
How far would you go to help others?

Phil Dandrow of Milton, with the help and support of the South Shore Y.M.C.A. in Quincy, is going 3000 miles—by bike.

That's right. Dandrow, 32, president of the Lexington Chandler Group, a marketing firm, is planning to cycle cross-country solo from Quincy, Calif. to Quincy, Mass. this June to raise money for the Y's youth services and programs.

Dandrow, who recently discussed his trek with Mayor James Sheets, said he got the idea from Dr. Richard Shubert at Eastern Nazarene College during a dinner held at the college. Dr. Shubert, a member of the ENC Board of Trustees, told the gathering that everyone has a responsibility and an obligation to help others through community and volunteer service.

"Dr. Shubert basically said it's time for everyone to pay the rent. And I said to myself, yes, it is time," Dandrow explained.

In particular, Dandrow said he is concerned about youths using illicit drugs. He said adults should come together and offer youngsters other outlets, such as recreation.

"I think there has to be some alternatives offered to these kids," Dandrow said.

Throughout his trip, he said he plans to contact teachers and public officials and inform them of this effort. To increase awareness even more, Sheets said he will notify the U.S. Conference of Mayors to alert the mayor's of cities which may be on Dandrow's route.

Dandrow plans to cycle from Quincy, Calif. to Quincy, Mass.—3000 miles—in June to raise money for the South Shore YMCA's youth programs. Fell is chairman of the cycling event.

"We're at a crossroads and I really feel people have to get behind this sort of thing. It's going to come back and help all of us," Dandrow said.

He said he hopes his transcontinental trek raises $101,000 for the South Shore Y.M.C.A.'s youth programs. The figure is symbolic of the Y's existence; this year, the charitable organization marks its 101st year.

He said he will try to reach that goal through corporate sponsors and individual pledges.

Sheets described Dandrow as a positive role model for today's youth. "I think that it's so critical to make sure that the character of young people stays sound. There's just literally thousands of young people looking for role models."

"It gives young people a sense of mission beyond themselves."

Although he has not finalized a departure date yet, Dandrow said he will start his journey next June from Quincy, Calif., located in the northern part of the Golden State near the Sierra Nevada Mountains. He expects the first leg will be the most difficult.

"The biggest challenge will be early on with the Rocky Mountains and the desert. After that, I'll have the wind behind me."

Where will he go from there? "I plan to draw a straight line on the map," he replies with an hearty grin.

Dandrow, a cycling novice, is training for his two-wheeled excursion with the help of the South Shore Y.M.C.A.'s facilities and staff, notably fitness expert Dr. Wayne Westcott. As part of his conditioning program, Dandrow bikes about 50 miles a day.

"It's been very beneficial to me. It's a great way to get some exercise."

He figures he'll finish his journey in 30 days by riding approximately 100 miles a day.

And although he'll be the only one riding that bike, Dandrow realizes his trip would not be possible without the help and encouragement of the South Shore YMCA, namely Tricia Fell, executive director of South Shore Economic Development Corporation and the head of the cycling event.

"It wouldn't be possible without the whole team," he says.

Fell said the South Shore Y.M.C.A. will conduct a "name the trip" contest "to get people excited in it and involved in it."

Fell also said the Y is seeking volunteers to help coordinate the trip. Anyone interested can call her at 479-1111.

Quincy's Yesterdays

Crime Rise Concerns Temperance Worker

Dr. Anna Door Bryant, state superintendent for social morality of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, told members of the Wollaston branch that she was concerned about the rise in crime in America.

"We are told that there never was such an age of criminality and that the United States produces more criminals than any other country in the world," she said at the Wollaston Methodist Church.

"We feel that our courts of justice have lost their grip on things. Why are criminals so plentiful? We are not enforcing our laws as we should."

"A great many who should be restrained are let out on probation too many times and while they are out they commit crimes over and over again."

BEACH UNDERPASS SOUGHT

Mayor Thomas J. McGrath testified in support of a bill filed by Sen. Henry L. Kincaide to construct an underpass under Quincy Shore Reservation from the bath house to Wollaston Beach at Sachem St.

Sen. Kincaide told the hearing that from 14,000 to 20,000 people cross the four lanes of traffic is particularly dangerous for children and old people.

Waits of 10 to 15 minutes to cross the street are not uncommon, he said.

BUTLER POND RESCUE

Arthur C. Dunham, 23, of 56 Spear St., dove fully clothed into the waters of Butler Pond to rescue Peter Kondos, 3, son of Charles Kondos of Merrymount Rd. from drowning.

Dunham was driving by the pond in the rear of Central Junior High School when he heard the child screaming for help. He dove to the bottom, grabbed the boy and pulled him up. Both were covered with mud.

SEEKS EARLIER MAIL

Richard Rowles, superintendent of the Wollaston Post Office, appealed to the Boston Postmaster to provide more space for mail on the 8:56 a.m. train to Quincy.

Currently, the first direct mail of the day between Wollaston and Quincy was placed on the 10:53 a.m. train, which often did not arrive in Quincy until after 11 a.m.

John Q's Pasta Toss

When our nephew John Q. from New York (hairdresser to the stars) called us last week to say he was coming over to our home, the first thing I did was to fix my hair.

The second thing I did was to take some tomato sauce out of the freezer. When he arrived, knowing he loves "gnocci", my husband obliged by making the pasta for him.

As we sat in the kitchen with the sauce bubbling and the pasta in the making, John gave us one of his favorite recipes. I was surprised that a man who lives such an exciting life traveling all over the country meeting celebrities would actually have the time and inclination to cook. Today's recipe is a great way to serve linguine.

JOHN Q'S PASTA TOSS
 1 Lb of linguine (or a favorite pasta)
 2 cloves of garlic (chopped)
 1 small onion (chopped)
 1/2 pound fresh mushrooms (cut)
 1/2 pound or so of broccoli florets
 3 medium sized fresh tomatoes (preferably plum tomatoes)
 Grated romano or parmesan cheese
 3 Tbsp olive oil
 1/2 stick margarine or butter (optional)

In the hot oil and margarine, saute the garlic and onion. Add the broccoli and cook for a couple of minutes. Add the mushrooms and cut up fresh tomatoes and cook until done. (takes about 15 minutes in all). Toss over linguine and sprinkle with grated cheese. It's a delicious as well as a healthy entree!

Mary Ryan Quincy Hospital Employee Of The Month

Mary Ryan, R.N., a member of the Quincy Hospital staff in a myriad of positions for 10 years, has been named the hospital's Employee of the Month for December.

MARY RYAN

Ryan first worked with patients with respiratory problems on the old Hunting 2 and then moved to ICU. During this time, she took a training program which certified her to teach smoking cessation and stress management courses. She used this in her work with cardiac patients in the ICU, and was also able to run programs for employees in local businesses through the hospital's Occupational Health Service.

"Mary never seems to get overwhelmed," said Nursing Administrator Doris Sinkevich. "She has a level-headed, calm approach to things, which was a real asset in the ICU."

Ryan went on to become one of two members of the hospital's staff development team.

Along with co-worker Marie Marechi, she developed and taught the curriculum for the nursing technician program in 1988. She and Marie continued to train new nursing department employees, including nursing techs, clinical aides, LPNs and RNs. They also provide training for all employees in risk management—fire safety, back safety and infection control—as well as continuing education.

and CPR recertification for nursing staff.

Ryan said she enjoys teaching, and feels that she plays an important role in maintaining quality care standards in the hospital.

Over the past few months, Ryan has been working as nursing liaison to the hospital-wide computer conversion project.

In May, she will graduate from the University of Massachusetts with a master's degree in nursing education.

Ryan and her husband, George, have two daughters, Christine, 24, and Brenda, 22. They live in Quincy.

Sheets Declares City 'Economically Sound' In Mid-Term Address

presentation to the City Council, I do so with optimism and with hope," Sheets said.

He credited the Council with working together with his administration to find creative ways of cutting costs.

Sheets also trumpeted the city's most recent reorganization project - of the city employee health insurance program - which he said will save the city $1.5 million in each of the next two years.

The health insurance program for retired municipal employees was also restructured resulting in a savings of $1 million this year.

"Reorganization will continue to be the key to future budgetary success," Sheets said.

"We should remember that these economic challenges are fleeting and temporary. The truly lasting issues are quality of life issues. And, in 1992, we have made great progress," Sheets said.

The mayor also pointed to other highlights of his administration:

- The growth and success of Quincy Hospital.

- The city's expanded recycling program.

- Completed and ongoing sewer projects and flood control projects.

He also discussed recent developments which could boost Quincy's tourism industry including federal funding for the Quincy branch of the National Park Service which will pay for:

- Improvements to the Beale Estate on Adams Street.

- A visitor's center at Presidents Place.

- A trolley service between historic sites.

Sheets also said the burial sites of John Adams and John Quincy Adams and their wives will be open on the same schedule as the president's birthplaces and the Adams Mansion.

Also, Sheets expects Governor William Weld to sign legislation creating the United States Naval Shipbuilding Museum Corporation.

The museum will negotiate a lease with the MWRRA for a 5.5 acre site at the Fore River Shipyard where the U.S.S. Salem is expected to arrive in the spring.

Private funding will pay for enhancement of Constitution Common and McIntyre Mall near City Hall. The project includes the "Walk of Names" brick program and a new fountain as centerpiece.

Sheets said that recent physical improvements to downtown Quincy set the stage for expanding the city's retail mix. Sheets said the key to revitalizing the downtown area will be the development of 110,000 sq. ft. of new retail space at the Hancock Parking area.

"It is pure folly to believe that we can attract modern retailers to a vacant site, like the old Child World location, or into a downtown that looks shabby," Sheets said. "We must create new retail space which meets the requirements of today's retailers."

Sheets said the city will work with its business and labor partners in the Quincy 2000 program to develop the site.

"The Hancock retail project will be the first major project to feel the powerful impact of this new partnership. I am absolutely confident of its success," Sheets said.

Sheets said 1992 was a positive year for Quincy's educational system. Highlights included:

- Hiring of Eugene Creedon as Superintendent of Schools.

- Full accreditation of North Quincy High School.

- Plans for an addition to the Bernazzani School.

- Construction of an early childhood center.

- The growth of Quincy College.

In his conclusion, Sheets said that the city was able to endure deep cuts in local aid between 1990 and 1993 "through our creativity, our hard work, and our willingness to work together."

the weather cooperates and we have little or no snow and ice. On the other hand you never know. We could have an unusually cold winter with a higher than normal number of water main breaks."

Cahill said there was one glaring omission from the mayor's address.

"One thing that wasn't mentioned was the MWRRA and water-sewer rates and what the city will do to address the issue," Cahill said.

While Cahill warned about being overly optimistic, other councilors gave Sheets good overall marks for his performance.

"I think the mayor is heading the city in the right direction despite the bleak economy," said Ward 6 Councilor Bruce Ayers. "He is working on good schools, safe streets and hope for a bright healthy future. Quincy 2000 and other plans he has initiated are certainly leading us in that direction."

"The mayor has done a great job as has the City Council. The main thing is that we move ahead. We all want the same thing... to make Quincy a better place to live," said Ward 1 Councilor Peter Kolson.

"It's amazing what we have accomplished over the last two or three years, particularly last year," Kolson said. "There is a lot of optimism, a lot of hope, there is a great future in Quincy. What people receive for their tax dollar is enormous for the future that's ahead of us. We have all sorts of things going on and the services are still there."

"I think the mayor's address was upbeat," Phelan said. "I was happy with the comments he made about public safety and bringing it up to strength. I think the people need to feel safe in the city."

"He (Sheets) touched on a lot of important issues that both the mayor's office and the City Council have addressed over the past few years," said Ward 4 Councilor Thomas Fabrizio. "I thought his speech was on target. It reflected his experience as a city councilor, as mayor, and as an educator. The theme of both the mayor's and Councilor (Council President Charles) Phelan's remarks was that we're all working towards a better community and I think we'll continue to strive towards that."

Several of the councilors agreed that the Quincy 2000 plan could have a big impact on the city.

"I think (Quincy 2000) is going to work out and really take off this year," Phelan said.

"I'm pleased with the direction the mayor intends to move on a couple of different issues," said Ward 3 Councilor Larry Chretien. "With Quincy 2000, I think we'll see the fruits of that effort as early as this year."

Chretien was also happy that the mayor has made consolidation of city government a priority. Chretien introduced ideas on streamlining various city departments more than a year ago.

"The mayor has worked hard in his position on the School Committee. There are a couple of building projects and other things to see to it that everyone in Quincy gets the education they deserve," Chretien added.

"Quincy is moving forward. The mayor's address offers us positive hope of improving economic conditions in the city and the business climate which will serve to lower taxes for residents," said Councilor-at-Large Michael Cheney. "The mayor and City Council have worked together to improve the quality of life and to ensure that services are delivered at the cheapest possible cost."

Re-Elected Council President Phelan Praises Colleagues Sets Council Priorities

By STEVE KAVANAGH
City Council President Charles Phelan, Jr., congratulated his colleagues Monday for leading the city through tough economic times. Phelan's remarks followed his re-election as council president.

"When I came on the City Council five years ago in 1988, we were looking at an expanding economy and expanding state aid. In the years to follow, we faced the loss of state aid and one of the largest downturns in the economy in several years," Phelan said. "Many cities the size of Quincy faced severe cutbacks in services. Some even going bankrupt. In the same period of time, Quincy has maintained its financial stability and was still able to deliver vital services to its citizens."

Phelan pointed to some of the successes of his fellow councilors in the past year.

Peter Kolson, Ward 1 - leadership in fighting rising MWRA water and sewer rates; work to help residents recover from storm damage.

Ted DeCristofaro, Ward 2 - chairman of the Health & Hospital Committee which oversaw computerization at Quincy Hospital; guidance in helping Phelan as council president.

Larry Chretien, Ward 3 - success and expansion of Quincy's recycling program.

Tom Fabrizio, Ward 4

COUNCIL PRESIDENT Charles Phelan, Jr., tells his colleagues that Quincy has a bright future. "The financial stability of the city helped us to go through very difficult times," Phelan said during remarks at Monday's council meeting.

- leadership in negotiating the Home Depot project.

Bruce Ayers, Ward 6 - handling of the Tall Ships controversy during his first year in office.

Mike Cheney, At-Large - leadership in organizing the first "First Night" celebration.

Tim Cahill, At-Large - introduced a resolve to change the governance at Quincy College; fiscal conservative with taxpayer money.

Pat Toland, At-Large - leadership as Finance Committee chairman;

Quincy's representative on the Massachusetts Municipal Association board.

Phelan said the council's priorities in the coming years should be to work on:

• The Old Colony Railroad project.

'Walk Of Names' Bricks At Half-Way Goal

By MICHAEL WHALEN
Bricks for the city's "Walk of Names" project continued to sell extremely well throughout the Christmas season, according to a spokesperson for the company marketing the endeavor.

Georgia Peirce of P.R. Etc. said Tuesday that approximately 1,200 bricks, nearly half the company's ultimate goal of 2,500, had been sold as of Dec. 31.

"We were extremely busy the week before Christmas," said Peirce. "We received a number of interesting orders from people from out-of-state who were visiting for the holidays."

Peirce added that a special walk-up ordering booth, which helped boost sales, was in place in the City Hall annex during that same week.

City officials, who introduced plans for "Walk Of Names" Nov. 30, are relying on the sales of the 2,500 bricks to assure the funding necessary to start the brick plaza project next summer. Aside from preparing the site, no municipal money will be used for the project, which calls for a new brick plaza in the area of in front of the City Hall annex.

The dark red bricks, which will replace the present granite pavers, will be engraved with names from people of the past, present and future to form a "Walk of Names."

For a donation of $50, any Quincy resident, business or group can have a personalized brick with up to 15 characters each. Officials hope to begin construction on the project this summer and to have it completed in fall.

"Everybody has been extremely enthusiastic about the project," said Peirce. "We encourage people to get their orders in as soon as possible."

Order forms for the bricks can be obtained in the City Hall annex lobby. Bricks can also be ordered directly by calling 376-3676.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Someone once said:
"Faith is not a substitute for thought, but the bees for thinking." Faith is taking our doubts into consideration and rendering a verdict in favor of belief.

Because one has faith does not mean he cannot question or doubt. The person who has some doubts rolling around in his mind will be learning, experiencing and discovering new and better things. Doubts can cause one to come upon exciting beliefs and truths.

Faithful belief is an instrument of vast power ready for us to use. It is true that we can have almost anything we believe we can have. Something seems to happen to a man when he gets the idea of achievement into his mind and holds it there. Successful businessmen are usually those who over the years have firmly believed in their ultimate success. Inventors are men who press toward a goal, confident that they can achieve it. Columbus had faith that there was a new world beyond the western horizon. By his belief he laid hold on that new world.

"All things are possible to them that believe" ...

DeWolfe Offering Buyer Agency

DeWolfe New England is now offering Buyer Agency to those who seek home-finding assistance.

Richard B. DeWolfe, in making the announcement, said:

"This will be an additional contractual segment that will augment our traditional service which will continue to be available to those who prefer that approach.

"In addition, DeWolfe will offer complete cooperation to 'Realtor' Buyer Agents who wish to show and sell our listings. Our sellers will enjoy additional opportunities to expose their properties to buyers who are using Buyer Agents in greater numbers.

"In order to assure complete education and understanding of our new service and the contracts and disclosures which have been developed, we have adopted a policy which will require every DeWolfe associate, manager, relocation and mortgage personnel to attend training and obtain certification."

DeWolfe noted that for nearly five decades the process of buying and selling homes has remained virtually unchanged—the introduction of Multiple Listing Service being the only notable exception.

"The laws of agency and the concept of sub-agency have governed practices during this entire period seemingly without deceit or discord, yet definitely creating misunderstanding and some disappointment," he said.

"Consumers, corporations, regulators and lawmakers have taken special note of our industry practices and have pushed for both disclosure and a higher level of accountability in our conduct with customers and clients.

"The DeWolfe reputation has been built on adherence to the principles and values of honesty, integrity and fairness but today we need to offer even more. We are an industry leader and as such must respond to the needs of our public. It's time to change and change we will."

DeWolfe New England has a Quincy office at 835 Hancock St.

No All-Night Parking Without Permit

City Ordinance Article IV Sec. 67. All-Night Parking Prohibited.

"It shall be unlawful for the driver of any vehicle, other than one acting in an emergency, to park such vehicle on any street for a period of time longer than two hours between the hours of 1:00 am and 7:00 am of any day.

The above shall not apply to any vehicle bearing an all-night parking permit which has been issued by the Quincy Police Department. Said permits shall be valid for one year from date of issue, and shall cost $2.00. Said permit may be revoked for cause at anytime."

All-Night Parking Permit Agreement

- 1: The parking decal permits the owner of this vehicle to park in a designated area between the hours of 1:00 am and 7:00 am.
- 2: All other City ordinances with regard to parking regulations must be observed.
- 3: In the event of a snow emergency the parking permit is suspended and the vehicle must be removed from the street until plowing operations are completed. If the vehicle is not removed it will be subject to tow action.
- 4: If the owner of this car moves to a different address he will notify the Quincy Police Department immediately.
- 5: Violations of the above regulations will result in the revocation of this permit.

Winter Parking Schedule

Between October 15th and April 15th you must park your vehicle on the even numbered side of the street in an even numbered year ... and, park on the odd numbered side of the street in an odd numbered year.

Applications for all-night parking permits may be obtained at the Quincy Police Station. Once the application is filled out, the request is checked by the Traffic Bureau. An Officer will be sent to the address to check the need for a parking permit.

If in his/her estimation there is enough room in the driveway for the vehicle, the parking permit will be denied. Parking permits are not issued so that people do not have to jockey vehicles around in their driveways.

It may take up to two weeks before a parking permit request is granted, this gives the department time to check the address on several occasions to make sure there is a real need. Parking permits cost $2.00, one all-night parking ticket costs $5.00, it's a matter of simple economics, a parking permit is cheaper.

Basketball

Quincy Lands On Plymouth, 84-67

The Quincy boys' basketball team turned in one of its best performances of the season Monday to defeat Plymouth, 84-67, and improve its record to 2-4 (1-3 in the Old Colony League).

The Presidents played at Falmouth last night

(Wednesday), will host Barnstable Friday at 7 o'clock and will be at Silver Lake next Tuesday night.

In winning its second game in a row, Quincy was paced by junior forward Tom Malvesti, who scored 20 points and had eight rebounds.

Eddie Kenney had 13 points and four steals, Robbie Kane and Matt Dwyer 100 points apiece.

"We are starting to put everything together," said Quincy coach John Franceschini. "We have cut down on our turnovers and our fouls and are shooting much better."

Brockton Too Much For North Quincy

The North Quincy boys' basketball team met up with former Suburban League rival Brockton Monday night and it wasn't a happy meeting as the Raiders handed the Raiders an 80-64 defeat. North fell to 4-3.

The Raiders played Taunton last night (Wednesday), will play at Weymouth Friday and will be home to Bridgewater-Raynham next Tuesday night at 7 o'clock.

Sean Donovan had a season-high 26 points and Luke Sheets pulled down 12 rebounds, but the strong Boxers just had too much for the Raiders.

In its previous game North Quincy pulled out a 58-54 win over Stoughton in the consolation game for the Stoughton Holiday Tournament.

Sheets had 16 points, Donovan 10 and Bo Smith seven.

North trailed, 28-22, at halftime but Sheets, Donovan and Smith led the Raiders from behind.

5 Quincy Players On B.C. High Team

The Boston College High basketball team, coached by Quincy's Brian Buckley, has an all new look this season, having lost five starters and 10 players overall to graduation from last year's Catholic Conference championship team.

The Eagles, who finished 17-5 last year, have five Quincy players on the squad: Co-Capt. Matt Fennessy, a 5-9 senior point guard; Jay Schnabel, a 6-2 senior forward; Dan Donovan, a 6-2 junior forward; Jason Fennessy, a 5-11 junior guard; and Pat Bryan, a 5-11 junior guard.

Fourth-year coach Buckley has size but is unsure of how his team will perform.

"We have some big guys in the middle and Matt Fennessy can definitely handle the point guard position, but how we do under varsity conditions with our tough schedule is all up in the air."

The Eagles' schedule, one of the strongest of any Eastern Mass. school, in addition to the strong Catholic Conference games, includes Div. 1 South finalists Durfee and Brockton, powerful New Bedford and a strong North Quincy team.

North Girls Defeat Quincy

The North Quincy girls' basketball team is off to a slow start, but it defeated Quincy, 47-31, in the consolation game of the North Christmas Tournament.

The North girls improved to 2-4, while winless Quincy fell to 0-5.

The Quincy girls had a fine first half and only trailed, 17-16, at the half.

North came back after the intermission and a 12-2 run widened its lead to 29-18.

"We didn't play the greatest first half for the second game in a row, but again the girls came out and played a real good second half," said North coach Ken Panaro.

"We had a tough stretch at the beginning of the second half," said Quincy coach Bob Keuther. "They came out and scored six quick ones."

Center Joanne Curreri had 13 points to spark North, Regina Murphy had five points and Sara Stanton had a three-point play during the 12-2 spurt.

Christine Richmond had a three-point play and Kerri Connolly a breakaway layup to cut the gap to 29-23 for Quincy's last gasp.

North Boys Finish Season Strong

The North Quincy boys' soccer team, which showed steady improvement during a frustrating season, finished its season on a hopeful note, tying Bridgewater-Raynham, 1-1, and playing to a scoreless tie with Quincy.

"The tie against Bridgewater-Raynham was a tremendous game for us, as it was the first time any team from Quincy had not lost to an Old Colony League powerhouse," said North coach Bob Dano.

The tie knocked B-R out of contention for first place and Silver Lake took the championship. The game was hard-fought from the start with B-R scoring 30 minutes into the first half.

With eight minutes left in the game, North's Bob Johnston took a deflected ball and fed Dan Danaus, who scored the tying goal.

The Raiders played outstanding defense with goalkeeper Adam Calvert playing an exceptional game with help from MacDougall and defenders Brian Fitzgerald, Scott McCormick and Ed Mitton. Zai Costa and Bo Smith also played strong games.

The scoreless tie with Quincy at Veterans Memorial Stadium again featured outstanding defense by both teams.

Fitzgerald and MacDougall anchored the North defense with Neil Hutchinson creating several good offensive chances. Calvert earned his first shutout of the season.

The Raiders finished the season at 3-11-2 but prospects are bright for next season with several players returning.

Former Quincy High all-scholastic and Suburban League all-star end Sean Munroe was rewarded for his record-breaking season at UMass/Boston by being named to the NCAA Div. 3 all-star team.

Munroe, the favorite target of his former Quincy teammate Steve Austin, finished his impressive career by catching 10 Austin passes for 232 yards and an NCAA record five touchdowns in a game against Framingham State.

His 1693 receiving yards this year set an NCAA Div. 3 record.

Although not named to the all-star squad, Austin had a fantastic season, finishing with 2991 yards passing, an ECAC Div. 3 record. In the Framingham State game he threw eight touchdown passes, tying an NCAA Div. 3 record.

Trio Gives Quincy Needed Scoring Punch

By TOM SULLIVAN

When the season started, Quincy hockey coach Bob Sylvia said if the Presidents could get consistent scoring from Jeff Craig, Jim Schatzl and Sean McArdle, they could have a good season.

So far things have lived up to expectations as this trio has led Quincy to a 4-2-1 record, including a 5-2 victory over a big, strong Bridgewater-Raynham team last Saturday at the Quincy Youth Arena.

The Presidents played at Plymouth last night (Wednesday), will play at Falmouth Saturday at 8 o'clock and will host Barnstable next Wednesday night at 7:50 at the Youth Arena.

Quincy turned in one of its better performances to topple B-R with Craig scoring two goals and McArdle, Scott MacPherson and Dave Mullen one each.

Mark Gilmore had two assists and Mullen, Steve Barrett, Joe McPhee and Schatzl one apiece.

Goalie Mark Smith had another good night with 27 saves.

In their previous game the Presidents had to battle from behind in the final two minutes to tie Rockland, 5-5, at Rockland.

Quincy scored a goal in the first period but Rockland came back with three goals in the second. Quincy exploded for four goals in the third period but trailed, 5-3, with two minutes to go.

Schatzl scored with two minutes left to move Quincy within a goal and Craig scored the tying goal with 44 seconds remaining.

Schatzl had another goal and MacPherson and Steve Provost also scored for the Presidents.

Sophomore Smith had 21 saves and Anthony Farrell had a great game in goal for the Bulldogs as he came up with 35 saves, many of them of the spectacular variety.

Craig has 18 points on 11 goals and seven assists, Schatzl 14 points on five points and nine assists and McArdle 12 points on five goals and seven assists.

"These three boys are scoring as I hoped they would and they have done a fine job," Sylvia said. "The win over Bridgewater-Raynham was a big one as they have one of the biggest and toughest teams in the Old Colony League."

"Mark Smith is doing an excellent job in goal and Dan Morrell, Mark Gilmore and Dan Mann have played strong defense. Morrell in particular has been playing real aggressive hockey."

North Peppers Barnstable Net

The North Quincy hockey team's victory over Barnstable last Saturday was reminiscent of a Bruins game.

The Raiders peppered the Barnstable goalie with 43 shots while the Cape team had only 11 shots on North goalie Sean Connolly.

But, despite the huge difference in shots, North could just pull out a 3-2 victory over one of the Old Colony League's top teams. The Raiders improved to 4-1.

North Quincy hosted Silver Lake last night (Wednesday), will be home to Plymouth Saturday at 7:50 at the Quincy Youth Arena and will face Weymouth next Wednesday at 5:30 at the Pilgrim rink in Hingham.

Mike DesRoche continued his consistent scoring for the Raiders with two goals and an assist in the big win at Barnstable. Jim Sapienza scored North's other goal. Brendan O'Brien had two assists and Andrew Vermette and Sapienza had one apiece.

"This was another fine win for us," said North coach Tom Benson. "We should have scored more but their goalie, who has started for four years, was outstanding and had some tremendous saves."

"Connolly has been excellent in goal and John Gladuc, Vermette, Dave Pacino and Dennis Pateras have been playing outstanding defense for us."

Squirt Cs Win, Lose

Quincy's Squirt C hockey team won one game and lost two in a recent tournament in Northboro.

Quincy bowed to Ashland-Holliston, 4-2, in game two with Sean McCusker scoring unassisted and Sean Lefebvre scoring the

NOT-SO-DELIGHTFUL SQUEALING

When drivers notice high-pitched squeals coming from under their automobiles' hoods that grow louder upon acceleration, loose belts are probably the culprits. If the noise tends to subside, its underlying cause should not be ignored. Because belts are tied to the function of such critical auto components as the fan and alternator, their failure could lead to engine overheating or loss of power down the road. The air conditioner or power steering mechanism could also be similarly affected. Consequently, prompt attention to a loose or failing belt could prevent a breakdown or component failure. Better yet, it is a good idea to anticipate belt problems with regular checks of belt condition and tension. HINT: In general, belts should deflect no more than a half-inch when pressed at a point midway between pulleys.

Charles D'Aprix Hired By Board Quincy 2000 Director To Reach Out To All Segments Of Community

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

The newly named executive director of The Quincy 2000 Corporation promises to reach out to all segments of the community to help identify future programs and projects designed to rejuvenate the city's business districts.

In an interview with The Quincy Sun Tuesday, Charles F. D'Aprix said, "My first priority will be to reach out and solicit as many views from as many different segments of the community as possible."

"I will also begin to meet with community leaders, including the mayor, board members, merchants and other key members of the business community, to solicit their views.

"This type of work cannot be done in a vacuum. It demands involvement from every segment of the community. I'll leave no stone unturned," he said.

"To help gather ideas and views pertaining to economic revival in Quincy, D'Aprix said he plans to conduct a scientific poll or research survey.

Using results from the survey and information gathered from consulting with civic leaders, the director said he will identify programs and projects "that can be started at once."

Programs and projects may include incentives for facade improvements to local businesses and targeting parcels for development.

"It will definitely include marketing Quincy's assets," he added.

Quincy 2000 is expected to play an instrumental role in a plan to develop the city-owned Hancock Parking Area across from the Quincy District Court. D'Aprix said he endorses the plan "100 percent."

D'Aprix, 35, was selected executive director of the Quincy 2000 Corporation at a board of directors meeting held Jan. 8 at the Quincy

Residents Urged To Join Sewer-Water Campaign

Residents are being urged to join a letter writing campaign to try to secure federal funding to offset rising sewer-water bills.

Ward 1 City Councillor Peter Kolson introduced a resolve Monday that the city support the efforts of Mayor James Sheets and Congressman Gerry Studds towards refunding of the federal Clean Water Act to assist in the reduction of sewer-water bills in the MWRA region.

"This is where we can get money for the Boston Harbor cleanup," said Councillor-at-Large Michael Cheney. "Seventy percent of residents water-sewer bills can be paid by the federal government."

"This is our window of opportunity," Kolson said.

He asks that all citizens write letters asking for rate relief to Studds or President-elect Bill Clinton. Kolson said the letters may be sent to City Hall (Council office), 1305 Hancock St., Quincy, 02169.

"And I will hand carry them to Congressman Studds' office (in Quincy Center)," Kolson said.

"Now is the time to do it," Cheney said. "Once this opportunity passes we may not get another chance."

City Council Meeting Changed To Jan. 25

The City Council meeting scheduled for Jan. 19 has been postponed and rescheduled to Monday, Jan. 25 at 7:30 p.m. at City Hall.

Also, the council's Education Committee will meet Monday, Feb. 1 at 7 p.m. to discuss the addition to the Bernazzani School, the construction of a new school at the site of the former Lincoln School and a change of governance at Quincy College.

'Connector Road Needed, Would Cause More Demolition' Cahill Says Hancock Retail Plan Has 'Too Many Holes'

By STEVE KAVANAGH

City Councillor-at-Large Timothy Cahill this week criticized Mayor James Sheets' plan to develop the Hancock parking area in Quincy Center.

"There are so many holes in the plan... it doesn't make sense," said Cahill, chairman of the council's Downtown Economic Development Committee.

"I don't think the plan will work as proposed," Cahill said. "I think there are other developable sites downtown that are more feasible."

"I think it's a great project," Sheets said. "It's time we move forward to improve the character of the downtown."

The mayor said he is receptive to new ideas for downtown development from Cahill and others.

"We welcome any ideas Councillor Cahill has and anything we feel are workable we would work to incorporate," Sheets said.

Cahill said he would prefer to see development of the vacant lot at the former Kincaide Furniture site and the lot at the site of the former Strand Theater. He said city officials should be open to changing zoning ordinances restricting height and density downtown.

Sheets said those locations don't offer enough space and don't cure the problems of access or parking. Also, today's retailers want ground floor space, he said.

The mayor's plan calls for tearing down businesses on Hancock St. and Cottage Ave. which border the parking area.

"I think it's wrong to tear down viable businesses," Cahill said. "You could add without taking away from the tax base" by developing vacant lots instead. "We have to bring more people into the city."

"The fact remains we are going to use the Hancock lot," Sheets said. "It remains to be seen if we will take all the stores named in the RFP but we really need to open up Hancock St. to change the character."

Cahill said a connector road from Route 3 or the Southeast Expressway is necessary to make the plan viable. He said construction of a connector

Council Approves Pay Raises For Police, Laborers

The City Council approved pay raises Monday for police patrolmen, police superior officers, the personnel director and members of the Laborers Union, Local 1139.

The Council voted 7-1 in each case with Councillor-at-Large Timothy Cahill voting against all four raises.

"My problem with pay raises stems from a disagreement with this administration on how good the financial situation of the city is," Cahill said.

"I have no problem with people getting raises," Cahill said. "I would like to see those people get those raises when the city can afford it."

Other councillors disagreed with Cahill.

"For over two years no one (city employees) has got a pay raise," said Ward 5 Councillor Charles Phelan. "These raises are not exorbitant."

"We can't balance the budget on the backs of our employees," said Councillor-at-Large Michael Cheney.

"Not two months ago we were arguing over raising taxes and we said we had no control over fixed costs," Cahill said. "Well, here is an area we do have control over."

"As long as we are in a recession, I think we have to be careful," he said.

Toland Seen Asst. Clerk Despite Cheney Proposal

PATRICIA TOLAND
The State Ethics Commission has ruled that Toland must resign her council seat before she can be nominated for the assistant clerk position.

Cheney has said that the post can be filled on a part-time basis which would save the city money. The full-time job pays $31,300.

City Clerk Joseph Shea said his department has a smaller staff but more duties than similar size area communities. Shea said he would like to see the job remain a full-time position.

SPECIAL STOCKING STUFFERS—Newborn Dylan Reed of Quincy, far left, and two other infants, Brenton McTigue of Weymouth and Stephen Welch of Braintree, were born at the South Shore Hospital's new maternity center during the holidays. Before their "sleigh ride" home, they were slipped into stockings provided by Friends of SSH, the hospital's 700-member auxiliary. With the infants is staff nurse Janet Plausse.

Change In Work Hours Saves Former Quincy Woman From Massacre

A former North Quincy resident who luckily avoided being part of a gruesome murder scene in Illinois last weekend said Monday she will be afraid to leave her home until police catch the person responsible for the death of her co-workers.

Debora Barrett, 29, an employee of Brown's Chicken in Palatine, Ill., discovered Saturday morning that the two owners and five co-workers were found slain in a freezer compartment at the restaurant. The murders apparently took place the night before.

Barrett, who has been employed by the restaurant for about two months, used to work Friday evenings at Brown's until her hours were cut back to part-time status shortly after Christmas. The change in her work schedule may have saved her life.

Barrett said Monday the nature of the murders made her believe that the motive was more than robbery and that the killer may be a psychopath. Police are interviewing former employees of the restaurant, apparently looking for someone who might have had a grudge against the owners.

Among those killed Friday night were co-owners Richard Ehenfeldt, 50, and his wife, Lynn, 49; Rico Solis, 17; Michael Castro, 18; Thomas Mennes, 32; Guadalupe Maldonado, 48, and Marcus Nelsen, 31.

Palatine, Ill., is approximately 30 miles northwest of Chicago. Barrett and her husband, Bryan, moved there from Buffalo in August after he received a promotion from his employer, Kemper Insurance.

Crime Map Comes Under Council Fire

Ward 1 City Councillor Peter Kolson was joined by several other councillors Monday in criticizing The Patriot Ledger for printing a map which shows break-ins which occur in Quincy.

Kolson asked that the Ledger discontinue the map or print a crime map of all other communities served by the Ledger.

"People feel they are being singled out," Kolson said. "I think we have become the laughing stock of the South Shore."

"The map tells other people that there is crime in Quincy and not anywhere else," said Councillor-at-Large Michael Cheney.

Kolson said the map could give Quincy an image problem which could impact property values.

Ward 4 Councillor Thomas Fabrizio said in addition to the map being unfair the accompanying log of break-ins can be misleading in that it does not explain the disposition of each case.

"Why just Quincy?" asked Councillor-at-Large Timothy Cahill. "The Patriot Ledger stopped being a Quincy newspaper a long time ago."

Cahill said the map and log of break-ins is good in that "it let's people know what's going on."

"I don't disagree with the intent, but with the way it is done."

Ward 5 Councillor Charles Phelan and Ward 3 Councillor Larry Chretien also criticized the use of the map saying Quincy's crime rate is relatively low for a city of its size and proximity to a major city.

"I looked at the map and was surprised," Cheney said. "In a city of 88,000 I thought there would be a lot more crime."

The Quincy Sun frequently publishes a list of police log "Hot Spots" which provide the disposition of incidents and other details.

The Sun also publishes a "Crime Watch" column by Robert Hanna, crime prevention officer of the Quincy Police Dept., which offers crime prevention tips.

Memorial Fund Drive For Granite Workers Statue

The Ward 4 Neighborhood Association is conducting a Fund Drive to erect a statue in honor of the Quincy Granite Workers.

Johnson, Cahill In Opposition

Sheets Forming Task Force To Create Quincy College Board Of Trustees

Mayor James Sheets is initiating a five-member task force to create a new governance board for Quincy College.

However, Quincy College President O. Clayton Johnson and City Councillor-at-Large Timothy Cahill are both opposed to the creation of a task force.

Johnson said last week that the task force amounts to "stall tactics" by the mayor on the issue.

Cahill said the governance change should be handled through the City Council's Education Committee.

"We are the best forum because we've been outside the realm of the bickering," said Cahill, referring to numerous disagreements between Johnson and the School Committee in recent years.

Sheets' task force would include two School Committee and two City Council members and would be chaired by the mayor's administrative assistant Bernice Mader.

Sheets has asked Council President Charles Phelan to appoint Cahill and Ward 4 Councillor Thomas Fabrizio to the task force. Fabrizio is chairman of the council's Education Committee.

Steve Durkin, vice chairman of the School Committee said Sheets has asked him to appoint two members. Durkin said he has selected Linda Stice and has narrowed down the second choice to either Dan Raymond, Peg King or himself. He said he would probably make the second selection by today (Thursday).

Cahill proposed a home rule petition to the council in October calling for a Board of Trustees to govern the college instead of the School Committee.

"I brought this (to the council) on my own... not for someone else (current Board of Trustees). We need to do something before the college is seriously damaged," Cahill said.

The mayor's task force would also include eight non-voting members including, Johnson; Superintendent of Schools Eugene Creedon; Steve McGrath, city solicitor; Tom Walsh, president of the Quincy Education Association; a student government representative; a member of either the College Board of Trustees or College Courses

Incorporated; and two members of a community college association or related organization or organizations that are expert in college governance.

The two community college members would be paid consultants.

Cahill said meetings of the council's Education Committee would be open to everyone.

"We want input from the public. We meet at night in an open forum when residents can attend. Not during the day behind closed doors," Cahill said.

Sheets has recommended that at least one public hearing be held on the issue.

The mayor wants all city departments to identify and way in which they interact with the college so that any factors may in transferring control of the college may be worked out.

The mayor will order the task force to make a recommendation by April 1. His plan also calls for the City Council, School Committee and mayor himself to act on the proposal by May 1 and that a home rule petition be prepared by May 15.

Council Creates City's First Human Rights Committee

By STEVE KAVANAGH

"We are making history tonight," said City Councillor Michael Cheney after the council voted to create the city's first Human Rights Commission.

The council voted 7-1, with Timothy Cahill dissenting to establish the commission which will consist of appointees by Mayor James Sheets.

Cheney, who first proposed the commission last year, said Quincy's image regarding human rights has come full circle.

"Just a short time ago we (Quincy) were criticized," Cheney said referring to comments in the early 1980s by Alex Rodriguez, then director of the Massachusetts Commission Against Discrimination, that Quincy was "the most racist city in America."

Cahill said the city has an excellent record in the area of human rights and questioned the need for a commission.

"I question whether it's necessary. It is the role of ward councillors, councillors-at-large and community activists to help solve neighborhood problems," Cahill said. "Sometimes we can create more of a problem by creating a commission like this."

Cahill said he is worried people will use the Commission as a "crutch to get ahead" by making unfounded charges of racism.

Prior to the vote the council amended the Human Rights Commission ordinance to limit membership on the commission to Quincy residents only.

North Quincy Firm Would Relocate Here Or Nearby Super Stop & Shop Planned At Pneumatic Scale

By STEVE KAVANAGH
Stop & Shop Co. plans to build a Super Stop & Shop at the 10-acre Pneumatic Scale site, 65 Newport Ave.

Stop & Shop would close the supermarket at 141 Newport Ave. once the new store is completed.

Meanwhile, Pneumatic Scale Corporation is seeking to relocate in Quincy, possibly to the Jordan Marsh warehouse site in Squantum or the Boston Gear site in North Quincy.

A spokesman for Pneumatic Scale, James Lawson, said the company's first priority is to relocate in Quincy. Lawson said he met with Mayor James Sheets last week to discuss relocation sites.

"We are going to look within the city but at other locations as well," Lawson said. "The mayor would like to keep us."

Pneumatic Scale employs 335 full-time workers including 52 from Quincy. The property is split by Holbrook Road with a parking lot to the north and the plant and offices to the south.

Stop & Shop spokesman Terry Vandewater said that the current, 46,000 sq. ft., Stop & Shop at Hobart St. and Newport Ave., would be converted into retail use.

"We will put in some type of complimentary retail... something that would fit in well with the rest of the area," Vandewater said. "We will work very closely with the neighbors."

would be 74,000 sq. ft. and would have at least 400 parking spaces compared to 220 at the present store.

"Parking was really an issue, we're cramped at the present location," Vandewater said.

Other features of a "Super Store" would include expanded product lines and expanded in-store service departments such as bakery, seafood and pharmacy, Vandewater said.

Ward 3 City Councillor Larry Chretien said he wants to be satisfied on three points before he supports the project:

- details of the new supermarket.

- relocation plans of Pneumatic Scale.

- plans for use of the current Stop & Shop store.

"The neighbors will have input," said Chretien. "We have to look at what a new store would generate in terms of traffic."

The City Council voted Monday to amend a zoning ordinance to designate the council as "special permit granting authority" for certain projects which require a special permit. Converting Pneumatic Scale or Boston Gear into a supermarket or retail facility would fall under this category.

Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers said he has contacted Pneumatic Scale and has offered to be a liaison with Jordan Marsh. The size of the Jordan Marsh warehouse site, 1.3 million sq. ft., has made it difficult to market.

William Zielinski of Meredith & Grew, the Boston firm marketing the Jordan Marsh property, denied that Pneumatic Scale was negotiating for the site.

"I've never heard anything about that," Zielinski said. "We'll only make an announcement when a deal has been completed."

Pneumatic Scale's James Lawson said his company needs 300,000 sq. ft. of combined manufacturing and office space. Lawson said his company would prefer to move to a single floor, more modern layout.

Quincy Building Inspector Matt Mulvey said the zoning of the Jordan Marsh site could be changed to allow both light industrial use by Pneumatic Scale and retail use by others.

Pneumatic Scale has been at its present site on Newport Ave. for 95 years. The St. Louis-based company manufactures high-speed bottling and packaging equipment.

"We are not under pressure to move right away," Lawson said. He added that under terms of the agreement with Stop & Shop, Pneumatic Scale has up to 4 1/2 years to move.

Ward 5 Councillor Charles Phelan said Pneumatic Scale has been a good neighbor and he would encourage them to

TAKING CONTROL OF ENDOMETRIOSIS

Many women go through life believing that severe pain is just a normal part of the menstrual period, not realizing they may be suffering from a very real disorder: endometriosis.

When the mucous membrane that lines the uterus grows in other parts of the body, endometriosis occurs. The errant tissue builds up each month, breaks down and causes bleeding, just as normal uterine tissue does. However, when this cycle takes place outside of the uterus, the result is internal bleeding, degeneration of the cast off blood and tissue, inflammation of surrounding areas, and scarring.

While there is no cure for endometriosis, treatment can slow the condition down, alleviate pain, and protect or restore fertility. P.S. Endometriosis afflicts one out of ten women of childbearing years. If you experience severe pain each month during your period, consult your physician just to rule out the possibility of endometriosis. If you would like to learn more about this topic, or about how you can help prevent heart disease, call COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE at 472-2550. We are dedicated to the compassionate and caring practice of medicine. When treating patients, I always try to consider how I would like myself, my wife and children or my parents to be treated by a doctor. Office hours are by appointment at 101 Adams St., Suite 24 in Quincy. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals.

Shades Of 1959?

The two headlines on Page One in last week's Quincy Sun sounded like what could be the opening gun in this year's mayoral election:

Sheets Declares City 'Economically Sound'

And, below it:

Cahill: 'We're Not Out Of The Woods Yet'

Councillor Tim Cahill has been giving "serious consideration" to challenging Mayor James Sheets who will be seeking a third term this fall.

Was his "We're Not Out Of The Woods Yet" the opening salvo for a 1993 run?

Maybe. Maybe not.

Cahill is still in the thinking- about-it stage. He hasn't made up his mind yet whether to challenge Sheets or run for re-election as a councillor at-large.

Cahill disagrees with Sheets as to what direction the city is taking. Sheets sees it as moving ahead. Cahill thinks it's "just floating". Not going backward. But not going forward either.

SHEETS

But Cahill knows to take on Sheets this year would be an upward battle. On a popularity scale of 1 to 10 Sheets has got to be at least a 9 3/4s.

Now midway through his second term he has yet to get bogged down in controversy. He has been able to deal with the various city unions. He has the downtown area looking its best in years. The city has a healthy-looking image and one that projects "things are going to get better."

Frankly, most political observers think Sheets is unbeatable this year. Two years from now may be a different story. But this year, they don't think anyone short of George Washington could beat him. And, this year George might have a problem.

Cahill points to another George -- last name Bush - who was thought to be unbeatable and a re-election shoo-in not too long ago but becomes a former President Jan. 20.

Cahill no doubt would be a formidable challenger. He topped the council at-large field the last two elections. A lot of people like the way he speaks out on issues even though they might not always agree with him.

But Cahill has a concern he has to look straight in the eye before getting into a mayoral race this year. As a working businessman (owner Handshakes Restaurant) will he have the important needed time to conduct a long, hard, all-out campaign?

And that may be the deciding factor as to whether he runs for mayor or not.

If Cahill doesn't challenge Sheets, it is doubtful anyone else will. Unless a token opponent gets in just to see his name in the newspapers.

Sheets could very well be the first mayor in Quincy's history to run twice for re-election unopposed. Three mayors have done it once: Thomas Burgin (1940), Francis McCauley (1983) and Sheets himself in 1992.

And speaking of Quincy's history, perhaps Cahill should take a look at 1959.

That year a young (29) popular city councillor by the name of James McIntyre decided to challenge a veteran, popular Mayor by the name of Amelio Della Chiesa.

McINTYRE

It was a colorful, hard-hitting campaign and when the smoke cleared, Della Chiesa was still mayor by a margin of something like 2,100 votes.

McIntyre, some thought back then, should have waited for a better time. And that did come when Della Chiesa retired in 1965 and McIntyre came back to swamp Joseph LaRaia and win the office he couldn't win six years earlier.

Cahill is young (33) and popular. And some observers think he should let this year go by, seek re-election to the city council and train his sights for mayor on 1995.

But there's a problem with that, too.

By then-especially if Sheets decides to retire or move on to something else-Cahill could have a lot of company in a mayor's race.

Councillor Michael Cheney who has taken himself out of mayoral contention this year, might be ready in 1995. School Committeeman Dan Raymond is a strong possibility. Don't rule out Paul Harold. And don't forget Joe LaRaia.

Stay tuned.

Mike Bellotti will host an Appreciation Night tomorrow (Friday) 7 to 10 p.m. at Flanagan's, Parkway, for all who worked in his successful campaign for state representative. He stresses: "No Admission Price. No Speeches. No Politics. No Kidding!"

Hungry Children Need Help

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Now is the time to do something about the 200,000 children who are hungry, or at risk of hunger, right here in Massachusetts.

The legislature has just passed the Massachusetts Childhood Hunger Relief

Act, which invests $5.3 million in new dollars to our children's future.

This pragmatically compassionate bill brings together existing child nutrition programs, funds them at adequate levels, and makes them more accessible to hungry kids from poor families.

In addition to reducing Medicaid costs, the bill is designed to bring extra federal dollars into signing this bill into law Massachusetts in food aid without delay.

We are very proud of our legislative bodies for their action to put hungry children and poor families first in Massachusetts, and urge Governor Weld to demonstrate his strong support of child health and prevention programs by signing this bill into law without delay.

Hungry children are waiting.

New State Representative In The First Norfolk District

Bellotti: 'I Want To Be In Touch With My District'

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

With the last name Bellotti, one might think the city's newest state representative has been a frequent visitor to Beacon Hill.

After all, Michael Bellotti's father, Francis X. Bellotti, served as state attorney general from 1963-64 and lieutenant governor from 1975-1986. Amazingly, however, when the younger Bellotti was sworn into his first two-year term as state representative in the First Norfolk District Jan. 6, it marked only his second visit to the House of Representatives Chamber.

He first walked into the hallowed halls of the State House 18 years ago. The year was 1975 and the elder Bellotti took the oath of office as lieutenant governor. Michael Bellotti, and the rest of his family--mother Maggie and 11 sisters and brothers--proudly watched from the House of Representatives gallery.

"I remember sitting up there in the gallery. There were 12 of us and we took up the entire left side and I remember how in awe I was then--I was only 11 years old."

Eighteen years later, the younger Bellotti took his own oath of office as his family again watched proudly from the gallery. With his right hand raised, the feeling of being a state representative had finally sunk in.

"That's when it finally hit me--standing there and getting sworn in. It was the first time I met a lot of the other state representatives."

"I also realized it's my turn to make a difference now. I'm no longer watching from the gallery."

Of course, it was much more than Bellotti's name that helped him get elected last fall in an impressive political debut. His fresh face, friendly disposition and strong grass-roots campaign keyed his victories in the September primary and November final election.

Bellotti succeeds Michael Morrissey who held the First Norfolk seat 16 years. Morrissey vacated the seat to make a successful bid for the state senate seat held by Paul Harold.

Unlike other candidates, Bellotti did not run as an agent of change. Instead, he campaigned as an agent of public service, a basic political principal learned early in his life.

"Growing up, I learned you can make a difference. I really feel in politics you can have a positive impact on people's lives. As a state representative, I want to be regarded as someone who is very much in touch with the people of his district and one who understands the problems they face every day.

"I want to be known as a representative who has a common sense approach to government."

Two weeks into his first term, Bellotti is quickly out of the blocks. He has filed or co-sponsored nearly a dozen bills, most of which deal with the MWRA, a main campaign issue.

Specifically, the MWRA's bill are aimed at making the authority's spending more accountable and billing more equitable. Filed by Morrissey, the bills are co-sponsored by Bellotti, the city's two other representatives, Steve Tobin and Ron Mariano, as well as fellow freshman legislator Joseph Sullivan of Braintree.

One bill would instruct the MWRA to bill sewer customers based on usage, not population. Because billing is based on population, Quincy was overcharged approximately $1.5 million last year.

With a usage-based system, proponents say the city would pay a lower assessment to the MWRA which in turn would mean lower bills for ratepayers.

Another MWRA-bill, originally filed by Harold, would give the authority's Advisory Board control over the budget instead of its Board of Directors. The advisory board is comprised mainly of community activists and officials from within the MWRA's district.

"These bills would lead to more accountability and tighter spending restraints and in the end," Bellotti said, "savings for the ratepayer. Right now, they (MWRA) don't have to justify their own budget."

Bellotti acknowledged that passage of the MWRA bills is a long shot at best, in large part because the South Shore contingent is heavily outnumbered by non-MWRA district representatives. In the past, any effort to spread the burden of the Boston Harbor cleanup outside the MWRA's 43 communities has been thwarted by officials outside the district.

But, with a new session underway and 29 other new faces on Beacon Hill, Bellotti remains upbeat and optimistic.

"I'm going to do my best to work on these bills because this (the MWRA) was the most prominent issue in the campaign.

STATE REPRESENTATIVE Michael Bellotti, Quincy's freshman legislator, meets with House Speaker Charles Flaherty (D-Everett) in the speaker's office after being sworn in by Gov. William Weld Jan. 6 in the House of Representatives Chamber.

But, it's going to be tough."

Besides the MWRA, Bellotti has focused on other issues. He has filed a bill which would approve state funding to dredge the areas around Marina Bay and Squantum Yacht Club, including the channel basin and adjacent mooring area. The dredging is performed periodically for improved accessibility, navigation and public safety.

He's also co-sponsored a bill filed by Morrissey aimed at punishing anyone who knowingly and willfully obstructs, resists or interferes with a police officer, firefighter or any other public safety official performing his or her duty. If approved, the legislation would place convicted offenders behind bars for up to one year or fine them $100 to $250.

"We must protect our public safety officials. They're out there fighting for us on the front lines. We must have laws to protect them," the freshman legislator said.

Bellotti, who is single, will celebrate his 30th birthday March 21. A former manufacturing representative who co-owns a wholesale produce company with his brother, Tom, Mike Bellotti decided to make his first run for office last year.

"I'm 29 years old and I know first hand how politics takes its toll on families. This was the right time and age for me to run."

Bellotti is one of 30 state reps comprising the 1992 legislative freshman class. With 160 representatives, almost 19 percent are new faces.

As for committee assignments, Bellotti has asked House Speaker Charles Flaherty to be placed on the Transportation, Natural Resources and Health Care Committees. He said transportation is his first choice because of the Old Colony railroad restoration project and its impact on Quincy. The city is also home to four MBTA Red Line stations.

Whatever committee he serves, Bellotti has clear expectations for his first legislative session.

"I want to learn as much about the legislative process in the shortest amount of time possible and to learn even more about the needs of my district. I want to become focused on the best ways to meet those needs as a state representative."

"The MWRA and jobs are the biggest issues. For the MWRA, I want to bring it under control so that there's more accountability, change the rate billing system for sewerage and provide greater oversight of the Fore River pelletization plant."

A lifelong Democrat, Bellotti said both parties will need to work together to help stimulate the Massachusetts economy and provide employment opportunities.

"Even though the Democrats are in a position of power, more so now than before November, we still have to remember that we have to do whatever it takes to attract business and industry and that means working with a Republican administration."

As he embarks on his first journey in public office, Bellotti is heeding the simple advice from his father: "Always listen to people and let them know you care about their problems. And, even though you may not be able to solve every problem, you'll try your hardest."

Parking Hinted On Library Lawn

Colleagues on the City Council looked askance at a proposal by Councillor David J. Crowley to construct a parking area for 150 cars on the lawn of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Councillor Carl W. Anderson, who usually voted with Crowley in what had become known as the Anderson-Crowley Axis, announced his strong opposition to destroying one of the few "beauty spots" in the City.

"To profane this beautiful building by turning its spacious lawn into a parking lot would be a serious error," said Councillor Edna B. Austin.

Crowley noted that the "cold-blooded" Council did not hesitate to destroy "the birthplaces and hearthstones of Quincy citizens" for parking and "human beings deserve more consideration than a lawn."

The Council voted to send Crowley's proposal to City Solicitor Arthur I. Burgess, who gave a preliminary opinion that the city could take the lawn but library trustees also could sue for damages.

It was discovered at 1:30 am by Patrolmen Gordon Parry and John Malvesti, who also found two empty but still warm shells from a German luger pistol a short distance away on quarry St.

You're Not Alone If You've Been Conned

Have You Ever:

- Given your credit card number to a phone solicitor?
- Purchased land you haven't seen?
- Agreed to home repairs that were quick, cheap, and paid for up front?
- Bought stock on a stranger's suggestion?
- Sent money as part of a chain letter?
- Invested in a promising new company that quickly went out of business?

Last year, swindlers used scams to cheat consumers out of about 40 million dollars. Be skeptical of anything that sounds too good to be true or promises easy money. If you are the victim of a con artist, report it to the police immediately. Get the word out to help protect your friends and neighbors.

Think Smart, Avoid Cons:

1. If it sounds too good to be true, it probably is.
2. Don't trust strangers who offer you instant cash.
3. Get more information before buying "the sure thing."
4. Check out charities before contributing.
5. Don't give your credit card number to anyone over the phone.
6. Whenever you are asked to turn over a sizable amount of cash, be cautious. Why is cash necessary? Why not a check? Avoid large cash transfers. Consult with trusted friends or family before making your decision.
7. It is unfortunate, but homes have been lost as a result of signing a simple TV repair contract. Signing a contract is not a frivolous matter. The contract may be secured by a deed of trust on your home. It may include a provision that failure to pay on time will permit a judgement to be entered against you. Contracts can be sold to a bank or finance company for collections, although these institutions have no responsibility for the quality of the product delivered or work performed.
8. Be wary of any pressure that you must act immediately or lose out. There is no better insurance than dealing with reputable businesses or people.
9. Report scams to the police, and if asked do testify in court to help stop this type of crime.
10. If you have any questions about the reliability or legitimacy of a firm, contact the Attorney General's office of Consumer Affairs at 727-8400.

Cahill Says Hancock Development Plan 'Has Too Many Holes'

road could result in demolition of more stores on the west side of Hancock St.

"Not necessarily," Sheets said. "The connector could go through the old Kincaide site."

Cahill also said he fears businesses will be disrupted during construction and that there won't be enough parking downtown during the project.

Sheets said the project will begin construction on the existing parking lot and may first build the new parking facility.

"We would work to ensure adequate parking," the mayor said.

Sheets said retail space would be built in the present parking area before any existing stores are torn down which would allow present stores a chance to move into the new space.

"I can't see how you can keep businesses open and build without disruption," said Cahill, who offered an alternative at the Hancock lot.

"You could develop on the site (parking lot) and maybe face it the other way (towards Chestnut St. and McGrath Highway). That could work," he said.

Quincy 2000 Director To Reach Out To All Segments Of Community

Neighborhood Club, it was announced Tuesday by Thomas M. Galvin, Quincy 2000 chairman of the board, president and CEO.

He will begin his new position Tuesday, Jan. 19. Salary, which will be funded through membership dues, was not disclosed but is believed to be in the $50,000 range.

Both Galvin and Mayor James Sheets, who spearheaded the effort to create the private-public partnership, praised D'Aprix as the right man for the job.

"Mr. D'Aprix brings to the position significant economic development experience and a solid working knowledge of non-profit public/private economic development entities," Galvin said.

"He was chosen unanimously by our search committee out of 156 applicants and seven finalists for the position.

We are not only enthusiastic, but we are confident we have made the best choice."

Sheets said, "I'm pleased with Chuck D'Aprix because he has a tremendous marketing background. If you look at his experience, he's been a marketing person as well as a planner."

"I think he brings a wealth of experience. (The partnership) will move now by leaps and bounds because we have a full-time marketing person on board."

The mayor also said D'Aprix has strong interpersonal skills, essential to communicate effectively with the public and private sectors.

Before taking the executive director's position, D'Aprix served several months as a project director for the Economic Development and Investment Corp.(EDIC)/Boston, where he was responsible for attracting targeted industries to the City of Boston.

In 1989, he founded Economic Development Counsellors, a Boston-based organization which boasted a national and international client base. He remained there three years as part owner.

Previously, D'Aprix was manager of marketing and communications for Combined Properties, Inc., for two years. From 1984 to 1987, he was assistant executive director of The Lowell (Mass.) Plan Inc., a public-private economic development partnership.

A 1979 graduate of the College of Saint Rose, D'Aprix received a bachelor of arts degree in political science. He received a master of science degree in public relations from Syracuse University in 1984, and is working on his thesis for his master of science degree in management from Lesley College.

A resident of Brighton, D'Aprix plans to relocate to Quincy soon.

After The Quincy 2000 Corporation held its first organizational meeting in October, a search committee was formed to find an executive director. Besides Galvin, the committee included Thomas E. Broderick, South Shore Building Trades Council; Michael F. Kenealy, Key Realty; and Richard H. Meade, Quincy planning director.

"We had purposely comprised our selection committee to represent a diverse group of business and trade union people," Galvin said, "and we collectively feel Charles D'Aprix had the best qualifications to bring to the position. The directors and officers of The Quincy 2000 Corporation are eager to work towards setting our goals for the future of Quincy."

Galvin said the corporation has about 90 members from the public and private sectors.

Super Stop & Shop Planned At Pneumatic Scale

Ward 5 and the Boston Gear site.

Shaw's Supermarkets is reportedly interested in locating a supermarket at the Boston Gear site as well.

"We'll look at any proposal from anyone," Phelan said. He added that a supermarket or other retail development at the site would require a special permit from the city and that neighbors concerns would have to be addressed before he would support it.

Lawson said company officials have met with employees to discuss the potential move and that reaction has been "generally positive."

"The company has been very forward about presenting us with the initial information... They haven't seemed to hide anything. They've been up front," said Charles Colby, president of Local 444, Retail Wholesale Department Store Union.

Colby, a long-time Quincy resident, represents 160 union members. He said employees have experienced "anxiety" about relocating ever since speculation began last July about Stop & Shop buying the Pneumatic Scale building.

Colby said he does not feel that Pneumatic Scale was seeking a buyer. The company recently made significant physical improvements at the site.

"It's my understanding that the Stop & Shop offer was just too good to refuse," Colby said.

Colby said employees want Pneumatic Scale to relocate in Quincy.

"Both sites could be under consideration," he said. "I'm pretty sure Boston Gear has been looked at and pretty sure Jordan Marsh has been mentioned."

HCHP, Quincy Hospital Form Closer Ties

Harvard Community Health Plan (HCHP) and Quincy Hospital have established a special emergency care arrangement for members of HCHP's Quincy and Braintree sites.

Quincy and Braintree HCHP members needing emergency care after 9 p.m. when the Centers are closed may be referred to Quincy Hospital's Emergency Department (ED) where they will benefit from the most advanced technology and a staff of medical professionals specializing in emergency care.

The advantage of this type of arrangement is the continuity of care it provides for patients. A patient receiving authorization to use Quincy Hospital remains part of a coordinated system on the South Shore which ensures that information about the emergency visit is forwarded to the patient's HCHP primary care provider.

"The emergency care arrangement addresses the patient's concern for immediate medical treatment," said Ellen Zane, director of Quincy Hospital, "and we are very pleased to be working cooperatively with HCHP to assure their members access to high quality medical care and technology."

Successful communication links between Quincy Hospital and HCHP are crucial for assuring the best in emergency care. This emergency care arrangement expands the relationships already existing between HCHP and the orthopedics and the obstetrical/gynecology departments at Quincy Hospital.

Three Local Real Estate Firms Join HomeView Service

Three Quincy-based real estate services have joined HomeView, a broker-sponsored hi-tech home search service that is free to buyers.

Century 21 Annex Realty, 49 Beale St., Wollaston; Duhallo Real Estate, 273 Newport Ave., Quincy; and Marina Bay Real Estate Services, 500 Victory Rd., Squantum, are part of HomeView, considered the first major technology breakthrough in real estate since dial-up multiple listing services (MLS) were introduced 25 years ago.

As HomeView member brokers, the three local real estate services have their listings entered into HomeView's interactive digital-picture database. At a HomeView Center, Needham, buyers preview hundreds of homes in minutes using a touch-screen computer. The "fingertip tours" recreate the feel of a real visit—from the first sight of the house to browsing through rooms and touring the grounds.

After buyers select homes matching their criteria, HomeView arranges appointments with the listing broker for on-site home visits.

For more information, call Arthur Foley, Century 21 Annex Realty, 472-4330; Robert McAluffe, Duhallo Real Estate, 773-7363; or Sandra Fennelly, Marina Bay Real Estate Services, 847-1820.

Josephine Brillo Shea Re-elected To Norfolk County Retirement Board

Josephine Brillo Shea of Quincy was recently re-elected to the Norfolk County Retirement Board.

Elected to the board in 1989, Shea, 41, won a second three-year term by topping a four-candidate field. She polled 1,655 votes while her nearest challenger, John Fallon, a Stoughton firefighter, had 930 votes. Dot Walsh, a retiree, was third with 500 votes and Joan Millet of Norfolk County Hospital finished fourth with 159 votes.

The election was conducted by mail ballots and results were tallied earlier this month.

The board is comprised of three members: one elected, one ex-officio and one appointed. In addition to Shea, other members are Norfolk County Treasurer Robert Hall (ex-officio) and Tom Rorrie, Stoughton town treasurer (appointed).

The board oversees a $140 million dollar pension fund. There are currently 6,000 active members and 3,000 retired members.

Shea is employed as deputy superintendent of Administration and Finance for the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office. She manages a budget of more than $15 million and is responsible for the personnel issues of more than 270 employees.

JOSEPHINE BRILLO SHEA

During her first term on the board, Shea helped create the Norfolk Benefit newsletter which informs Norfolk County retirees and active members of retirement issues. Also upon her request, the board approved and initiated the Norfolk County Employees

Retirement Guide.

Many public retirement systems have used the updated and comprehensive manual and newsletter as models for their publications.

During her first term, Shea also proposed a comprehensive "Pre-Retirement Seminar" designed to help every member, active or retired, stay informed on retirement matters. The seminar features presentations on benefits and financial planning as well as assistance with legal estate and Social Security procedures.

During her second term, Shea said she will address an early retirement incentive program and make a recommendation to the board.

Shea is married to City Clerk Joseph Shea. They live on Heritage Rd.

Hearing Continued On Shooters Club Expansion

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The Quincy License Board Tuesday continued for one week a request from Shooters Club Cafe, 1585 Hancock St., for permission to expand their physical premises from 1,248 to 2,557 square feet.

Atty. Dennis O'Driscoll told the board the existing premises, located in the lever level of the Quincy Fair Mall, now consists of four billiard tables, a service bar seating 12 and four tables seating 16. The expanded cafe would add three billiard tables and replace the existing tables with seven booths seating 28, as well as six additional seats.

The expansion would also include men's and women's rest rooms, O'Driscoll said.

City Clerk Joseph Shea read a letter from the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association voicing approval of the expansion. O'Driscoll said Ward 3 Councillor Lawrence Chretien is also in favor.

Health Commissioner Jane Gallahue said because Shooters has an All-Alcoholic License, she wanted to clarify with the Alcoholic Beverages Control Commission (ABCC) exactly what kinds of food should be served at the cafe as a result of the expansion.

Shooters currently does not serve food on its premises other than prepackaged items such as potato chips and peanuts, Gallahue said. The cafe also receives pizza delivered from the nearby Hollywood/Hollywood restaurant in the mall, according to O'Driscoll.

The License Board decided at the end of last year that all requests connected to All-Alcoholic and Common Victualer Licenses would go before the board twice. The board agreed that the additional week would be enough time to contact the ABCC regarding Gallahue's clarification.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

No funeral director in the country would dispute the right of a family to specify "No visitation"—It is that is the way the family desires it. But, if asked, we are sure every funeral director would suggest visitation in most cases.

It has been proven through the years that visitation at the funeral home HELPS the family face the reality of death. It has been proven a family's grief is lessened by the visit of friends who show concern for the family at a time of death. It is only human to want to express feelings. And this applies to most people. It has been proven that shock and surprise, emotional release, loneliness, distress and anxiety are emotional moods that can be HELPED by the appearance of friends. Words are not necessary. Personal appearance is sufficient. Visitation is an act of kindness... These are only a few of the reasons why funeral directors welcome visitation prior to and during a funeral service...

North Runs Win Streak To 5

By TOM SULLIVAN

The North Quincy hockey team continued to roll last Saturday as it defeated Plymouth, 6-3, at the Quincy Youth Arena and improved to 6-1.

North Quincy faced a major test last night when it faced Weymouth at the Pilgrim Arena in Hingham, will host Bridgewater-Raynham Saturday at 7 p.m. at the Youth Arena and will meet Quincy in what should be one of the season's best games next Wednesday at 7:00.

North came out flying against Plymouth, which had been picked to win the Old Colony League title but it only 4-4, and rolled to a 5-1 lead after two periods.

Coach Tom Benson, who has many sophomores on his North squad, had a chance to use his third and fourth lines and give them some experience.

The game was a physical one and 22 penalties were called, but the Raiders kept their cool and outplayed the Blue Eagles throughout the contest.

"We have been playing well in every department," said Benson. "We are skating well, playing aggressive hockey, and getting off a lot of shots. Sean Connelly has been playing well in goal and the defense has been strong."

Mike DesRoche, who has 19 points on 12 goals and seven assists, had another good game with two goals and an assist. Jim Sapienza, who had also scored well, added two goals and an assist, and A.J. Carthas and Andrew Vermette had a goal apiece.

Vermette and John Gladu had two assists apiece and Carthas one.

Connelly had another excellent game in goal.

Earlier last week North blanked Silver Lake, 2-0, with Connelly having another outstanding game.

He had 19 saves, including some spectacular ones as North recorded its second shutout of the season.

"Sean played the way I expected he'd play and in the end he was the difference in the game," Benson said.

North played a physical game, kept the puck in the Laker end for the better part of the first period and dominated every phase of the game except scoring as Laker goalie Brian Cole turned aside several good scoring chances.

Dave Pacino scored North's first goal at 10:37 of the opening period with Lee Hughes having an assist.

The Raiders scored their second goal in the second period when DesRoche scored after making a pass from Brendan O'Brien.

The Lakers had three excellent scoring opportunities but Connelly came up with fine saves to rob Greg Owen and Mike Crowell.

Schatzl had another goal and Derek Mullen and Dan Morrell had the other goals.

Schatzl and McArdle had other assists as did David Cooper and Steve Miller.

Sophomore Mark Smith contributed to play well in goal and had 26 saves.

"I was very pleased at the way we fought back and tied the game," said coach Bob Sylvia. "It is very difficult to play Falmouth down there; they have a very noisy crowd. It was a physical game. Dan Morrell continues to play strong defense. He is very physical but doesn't play dirty; he just hits hard and he has been a standout all season."

Blocked Shot Gives Quincy 63-62 Victory

John Russell was the hero as the Quincy boys' basketball team squeezed Barnstable, 63-62, last Friday to improve its record to 3-5.

The President played at Silver Lake Tuesday, will host North Quincy Friday night at 7 and will be home to Taunton next Tuesday night at 7.

With Quincy leading by a point, Russell, senior center, blocked a Barnstable shot with six seconds left and the Presidents held on for the win.

Russell had his best game of the season with 14 points and 11 rebounds, Robbie Kane, who has had an outstanding year, had 14 points and five steals and Tom Malvesti had another stellar game with 11 points and nine rebounds.

Barnstable's Mike Fein kept his team in the game with 25 points.

"The boys played an excellent game and that was an outstanding defensive play by Russell," said Quincy coach John Franceschini. Earlier in the week the Presidents had a woeful night at the free throw line and it cost them a 61-57 defeat at the hands of Falmouth.

Quincy missed 21 of 35 free throws which proved fatal.

Kane had 14 points and Malvesti added 13 but the Presidents trailed, 39-31, at the half and never could catch up.

North Drops Squeaker To Weymouth, 45-44

The North Quincy boys' basketball team started off well but things haven't been going well lately and last Friday the Raiders dropped a 45-44 squeaker to Weymouth for their third loss in a row, dropping their record to 4-5.

North played Bridgewater-Raynham Tuesday night, will be at Quincy Friday night at 7 o'clock and will play at Plymouth next Tuesday at 5:30.

The Raiders trailed by six points with a minute to play and Sean Donovan scored a basket and Luke Sheets hit a three-pointer to bring them within a point but they couldn't pull out a win.

The loss was especially disappointing to North coach Ted Stevenson, who said at the start of the season he felt the Raiders would do better than last year.

However, they already have lost as many games as they did all last year when they were 15-5 and qualified for the Eastern Mass. Tournament.

Sheets had 15 points and Donovan 14 for North against Weymouth. Tri-Captains Sheets, Donovan and Bo Smith have been scoring consistently all season for the Raiders.

Weymouth's Mark Harrington had a big night with 16 points and 11 rebounds, while Alex MacPhee chipped in with 11 points.

Earlier in the week North lost another heartbreaker to Taunton, 78-75.

Donovan led the Raiders with 20 points and 11 rebounds while Smith had 17 points and Sheets had 16 points and 10 rebounds.

North couldn't stop Taunton's John Martin, who scored 31 points, while Keith Aldridge had 20 for the Tigers.

Swimming

North Boys Win Third Straight

North hosts Taunton today (Thursday) at 3:30 p.m. at the Lincoln-Hancock School pool. Next Tuesday the Red Raiders will be at Milford at 4 p.m.

Personal bests were turned in by almost every member of the North team in a meet which came down to the final relay with North taking second place to clinch the victory.

Jim Flaherty won both the 200 and 500 freestyles, Barry Canavan won the 200 individual medley and placed second in the 100 breaststroke, Mike Ploof won the 100 backstroke and took second in the 100 butterfly and Alan Morse

Walker Wins B.U. Freshman Award

Boston University freshman wide receiver Chris Walker, a former All-Scholastic football player at Quincy High School, has been honored for his play during the Terriers' 1992 season.

Walker received the Paterno Award as the most valuable freshman on the team.

The 5'11", 169-pound Walker finished the season as B.U.'s fourth-leading receiver with 18 receptions for 226 yards and a touchdown. His totals came in six of the team's 11 games.

He did not catch his first pass until the fifth game of the year, his first start, at Delaware. In that game he caught four passes for 81 yards and a touchdown. He also had five receptions against Rhode Island.

"Chris is an outstanding prospect for us," said head coach Dan Allen. "He had an excellent freshman season, and we are looking forward to his becoming one of the top receivers not just in the Yankee Conference but in Division I-AA football."

At Quincy High School, Walker was a standout receiver, averaging 23 yards a catch during his senior year. He was a Patriot Ledger All-Scholastic, an Old Colony League All-Star, and played in the 1992 Shriners All-Star Game.

QUALITATIVE CHANGE FOR THE BETTER

Anyone who believes that they do not build cars like they used to may want to take another look. For a quality comparison between old cars and new, take a look at the life expectancy of the engine, which is the heart of any car.

The average passenger car of the early 1950's could expect to travel about 45,000 miles before needing an engine rebuild. Some 40 years later, engine life expectancy has more than doubled to 100,000 miles, and more. What technological advances have made this possible? Today's engines utilize better positive crankcase ventilation, higher operating temperatures, and unleaded gas to reduce corrosive crankcase acids. Fuel injection has practically eliminated cases of raw gasoline washing down cold cylinder walls. In addition, engine oil is vastly improved.

HINT: Other factors contributing to the longer engine life of today's cars are improved materials and machining.

Call 843-1550, LEO & WALT'S SUNCOCO for an appointment if your car is showing signs of any problem. Our technicians are trained to get you back on the road safely by efficiently and competently handling the problems that may occur. For the best service in town, we're here at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree, 843-1550. "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer." Mon-Fri 6 am-9 pm, Sat 7 am-9 pm, Sun 9 am-5 pm.

Humane Societies Seek Donations For Homeless Cats

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Even someone covered with fur shouldn't have to live on the streets.

Five local humane societies are seeking donations to help control Quincy's rapidly growing population of homeless cats.

The organizations united in the effort are CEASE (Citizens to End Animal Suffering and Exploitation) in Somerville, All Paws Rescue in Hingham, Quincy Animal League, South Shore Humane Society in Quincy, and Animal Umbrella in East Arlington.

CEASE Assistant Director Debra Dennis said the number of Quincy homeless cats runs at least into the hundreds.

"Most people probably aren't aware of it, because cats are nocturnal animals and come out at night," said Dennis. "But it's definitely a growing problem."

All Paws spokesperson Donna Howard, who works in Quincy, said she estimates the number to reach into the thousands.

"It's an extremely serious problem that we need to solve," said Howard. "If we're not part of the solution, we're part of the problem."

City officials and animal rights activists met Jan. 5 at City Hall to discuss the matter, but Dennis said the city was unable to offer any financial assistance.

"The city doesn't have the money to support a program like this," said Dennis. "That's why we have to reach out to the community."

Asked why residents should donate their hard-earned money to a fund for homeless cats, the two women offered several reasons.

"It's mainly a humane issue," said Dennis. "These animals are suffering in the wintertime because they're not getting the food and care that they need."

"Most cats give birth to up to three litters a year, and less than half of these kittens make it past three weeks old. Many of them die from upper respiratory problems they develop in the winter cold."

Dennis added that the spread of rabies is also a constant threat.

"Rabies should definitely be a concern," she said. "Cats can sometimes get them (rabies) from fighting with skunks and raccoons, which are also nocturnal animals."

Both Dennis and Howard, however, stressed that there is no need for a rabies panic in the Quincy area, noting that most of the cats they have helped receive veterinary care are relatively healthy.

Howard said homeless cats also face the threat of being threatened or abused by children and other residents, which could end up being more of a problem for the people than the animals.

"A person who harms an animal—any animal—could face up to five years in state prison or a fine of up to $1,000, according to Massachusetts law," said Howard.

Howard said the cats can also be a financial burden on residents who attempt to show compassion.

"I know of people who are spending money from their Social Security checks to buy cat food to feed these cats," she said.

Howard added that overpopulation is a prime concern, noting that if homes could be found for the cats, the number of litters could be dramatically decreased.

Dennis said the five humane societies have been trapping the animals in cages and taking them directly to local veterinarians. The majority are then taken to a cat shelter on the same property as Kreshingham Kennels in Hingham. Those few that are very unhealthy, Dennis said, are "humanely euthanized."

"It's much more humane for them to die like that than to die out in the streets, which is a long, painful death," she said.

Howard said money from donations would be used to purchase additional cages for trapping the animals, as well as food, kitty litter, blankets, veterinary bills, and other expenses. The five organizations eventually want to start an Adopt-A-Kitten program, she added.

Donations should be made payable to Debra Dennis, 11 Egypt Ave., Scituate, MA 02066 (a P.O. box will be established at a later date). Those making donations are asked to write "Quincy Homeless Cats" on their checks and envelopes.

Volunteers are also needed. For more information on the homeless cats problem, call Dennis at the CEASE office at 628-9030.

For Outstanding Community Service Stephen Cantelli Sun 'Citizen Of The Year'

Stephen Cantelli, an innovative fifth grade teacher at the Lincoln Hancock School who believes in community education--outside as well as inside the classroom--is The Quincy Sun's 1992 "Citizen of the Year."

Cantelli, 42, a teacher for 21 years in the Quincy School System, was selected for the honor from among 28 nominees submitted by Quincy Sun readers.

A nine-member panel of judges made the final selection from the 28 nominees.

Established in 1985, the award honors an individual for outstanding community service or recognizes a special achievement annually.

Cantelli was nominated by his wife, Julie, but she didn't tell him she was doing it.

"I was surprised," he said, when informed that he had been selected to receive the award. "I didn't know I had been nominated. I'm thrilled at having been selected."

Sun Publisher Henry Bosworth congratulated Cantelli on his selection and the other 27 nominees.

"To be nominated is an honor in itself," he said. "The nominations come from those in the community who recognize and appreciate the work and efforts of dedicated people. But there can only be one recipient."

Cantelli is the eighth annual winner. Past recipients were:

- Anthony Siciliano, deputy director of Quincy Emergency Management (formerly Civil Defense).

STEPHEN CANTELLI, a fifth grade teacher at the Lincoln Hancock Community School, is The Quincy Sun's 1992 "Citizen of the Year."

- Ruth Wainwright, long-time community volunteer.

- Richard Koch Sr., leader in community and charitable causes who was honored posthumously.

- Martin Finnegan, coordinator of Project Impact, a Quincy schools program that helps youngsters to deal with substance abuse.

- Clara Yeomans, long-time environmentalist.

- Gerald Gherardi, active in many charities and service organizations.

- Frank Kearns, community activist and advocate for the city's elderly, homeless, needy and poor.

Cantelli and his wife live at 65 West St., West Quincy, with their three children, James, 11; Katharine, 10, and Andrew, 8. The oldest two children have been in their father's social studies class.

Cantelli has been an elementary school teacher all of his 22 years in the Quincy public school system--the last 10 at the Lincoln Hancock Community School. He started his career at the former Pollard School where he taught 10 years. He also taught a year at the Parker School.

"I strongly believe in community education," Cantelli says.

He practices what he preaches by bringing members of the community into his classroom to share their

Sheets Seeks Sewer Water Rate Relief On Capitol Hill

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

While attending the U.S. Conference of Mayors in Washington D.C., earlier this week, Mayor James Sheets met with key congressional leaders to outline a plan which the mayor believes will help reduce escalating water and sewer bills.

With a new presidential administration taking office, Sheets said there is a "window of opportunity" to secure federal aid for the $7 billion Boston Harbor cleanup project. Without relief, the mayor said rates could increase 21 percent this fiscal year and 31 percent next fiscal year.

"We can't allow that to happen," the mayor said in a telephone interview Tuesday. Without rate relief, a sewer bill for an average family of four could skyrocket to $2000 by the end of the decade.

The Sheets plan or strategy, showcased by the mayor to some Massachusetts congressmen on Capitol Hill, includes three components.

The first prong calls for reducing the cost and magnitude of the multi-billion dollar cleanup by shrinking the size of the secondary treatment program, lessening the MWRA's sewer and storm momentum is up. We have to stop that."

On Monday, the mayor pitched his plan to two top MWRA officials. On Tuesday, he met with Congressmen Gerry Studds, Joseph Moakley and Edward Markey. He planned to meet with Sen. Ted Kennedy and Congressman Barney Frank and Joseph Kennedy Thursday.

Sheets said MWRA Director Doug MacDonald is "committed" to scaling back portions of the cleanup project. The mayor said a reduction effort could save as much as $1 billion.

All of the congressmen represent cities and towns in the MWRA district. To implement cleanup reform and lower water and sewer rates, Sheets said it will take a well-coordinated regional effort involving officials throughout the MWRA district.

"The City of Quincy can't do it, the Town of Braintree can't do it, the Town of Weymouth can't do it. To get relief, we have to go to the federal and state governments."

"What I'm trying to do is get a commitment to

City Hopes To Keep Pneumatic Scale

By STEVE KAVANAGH

City officials are keeping their fingers crossed that the Pneumatic Scale Corp. will remain in Quincy.

Stop & Shop and Pneumatic Scale announced Jan. 8 that Stop & Shop will buy the Pneumatic Scale property on Newport Ave. and build a "Super Stop & Shop" there.

Last week, Shaw's Supermarkets announced it has agreed to buy 7 1/2 acres of property from Boston Gear. Shaw's wants to build a 48,000 sq. ft. supermarket at the site with an additional 27,000 sq. ft. of retail space.

The property is located in the Norfolk Downs section of North Quincy at Hayward and Hancock St.'s. The new store would employ 250 people said a Shaw's spokesman.

The sale of the Boston Gear property to Shaw's blocks Pneumatic Scale from moving there. The manufacturer of bottling and packing equipment employs 335 people and is one of the city's largest taxpayers.

A spokesman for Pneumatic Scale, James Lawson, said last week that the company will look to relocate in Quincy first.

Pneumatic Scale's current multi-story property includes 300,000 sq. ft. Lawson said a new site would not need that much space.

Lawson said his company will begin looking for a new home in the coming weeks.

"We intend to start that process soon," Lawson said. "We will set up a meeting with the city planning board in the next few weeks."

Lawson also said he has spoken to City Councillors Larry Chretien and Bruce Ayers.

"The city has mentioned a couple of sights which may be available," Lawson said. However, he would not reveal the sights. "That would be premature for me to say."

A possible home for Pneumatic Scale may be the former site of the Duane Construction Co. on Southern Artery. The property is owned by Twiss Development and Stop & Shop has the controlling interest.

The site is zoned as Planned Unit Development and the City Council would be the special permit granting authority for any proposal there.

"They would need a favorable recommendation from the Planning Board and a two-thirds vote of the City Council," said Quincy Planning Director Rich Meade.

Ward 1 City Councillor Peter Kolson said if such a proposal is made he would probably favor it.

"I would like to see a plan... if it's a one-story operation I wouldn't have any objection to it."

Shooters Club Cafe Expansion Approved

By MICHAEL WHALEN
The Quincy License Board Tuesday granted a request from Shooters Club Cafe, 1585 Hancock St., to expand its premises from 1,248 to 2,557 square feet.

The matter had been continued for one week in accordance with the board's new rule that all hearings having to do with All-Alcoholic and/or Common Victualer Licenses be reviewed twice.

The expansion, which has the support of Ward 3 Councillor Lawrence Chretien and the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association, received no opposition Tuesday or at the board's previous meeting.

The board did receive a letter in opposition, however, from Dr. and Mrs. Carl Goodman of 31A Revere Rd. The letter stated that there are several liquor establishments in that one block and that expanding one of them is not necessary.

"The plans for developing the Hancock Parking lot with stores like Toys 'R' Us and a nice shopping area will not mix well" with the liquor establishments in the area, the letter stated.

Police Chief Francis Mullen said he did not feel the expansion would cause any problems in the area.

The cafe's existing premises consists of four billiard tables, a service bar seating 12 and four tables seating 16. The expanded cafe will add three billiard tables and replace the existing tables with seven booths seating 28, as well as six additional seats. Men's and women's restrooms will also be added, according to Atty. Dennis

Toland 'Likely' To Resign From Council Next Week

By STEVE KAVANAGH
City Councillor-at-Large Patricia Toland will probably resign next week.

When asked Tuesday, Toland said it is "likely" she will announce her resignation sometime during the final week of January.

Toland's resignation from the Council is necessary before the Council approves her expected nomination as assistant city clerk. She must resign 30 days prior to beginning as assistant city clerk.

Toland said if all goes well she hopes to begin as assistant clerk March 1.

City Clerk Joseph Shea's office has operated without an assistant since October when former assistant clerk Shea replaced John Gillis who retired after 33 years of service.

She is one of just three women, along with Edna Austin and Joanne Condon, to serve as a City Councillor. Toland said it is "a disgrace" that more women have not been elected to the Council.

Toland said the main thing that attracted her to the assistant clerk's job is her love of the political process.

"I feel it's an exciting job. I love elections and politics," Toland said. "I get excited during elections and this is the office that makes them work."

Toland said she is qualified because of her political career and her experience as chairman of the League of Women Voters' voter service committee. In the late 1960s and early 70s Toland chaired that committee which helped stage candidate's nights.

"I think you need someone who is familiar with the whole process of running for office," she said. "I know I have an aptitude for this (asst. clerk)... I've been in nine elections."

Toland was elected to the School Committee in 1975 and won re-election in 1979. She stepped down in 1981 after winning a City Council at-large seat. Since then she has been re-elected five times.

The only bump in the road of her successful political career came in 1988 when she lost a primary race for State Representative to Steve Tobin.

During her tenure on the School Committee she served as Vice Chairman. As a City Councillor, Toland has been Council President and chairman of a number of committees including the important finance, ordinance and downtown development committees.

Over the years she has served as president of the Massachusetts Municipal Councilors Association and is currently Quincy's representative on that board. She also served as chairman of the Women's Elected Officials Association.

Toland was a school teacher in Randolph from 1953 until 1964. She left teaching to begin her family. She became a member of the LWV which increased her interest in politics.

It won't take long for Toland to get her feet wet as assistant clerk. A municipal election is scheduled for this fall.

8 Charged In Wollaston Credit Union Loan Fraud To Be Arraigned Today

The eight men indicted Friday for defrauding the Wollaston Credit Union in a $5 million loan scam will be arraigned today (Thursday) in Suffolk County Superior Court, Boston.

The former president of the credit union, a former vice president, and a Quincy attorney were among the men charged in the case.

Robert Dunphy of Hingham, president of Wollaston Credit Union from 1979 to 1989, is accused of using proceeds from fraudulent loans to fund his own real estate projects on Cape Cod.

John Bradley of Braintree, a former vice president for real estate lending at Wollaston Credit Union, is accused of approving the fraudulent loans.

Quincy attorney Louis Bertucci, whose office at 5 Beale St. is nearby the credit union, is accused of misusing loan proceeds to fund personal real estate ventures and of notarizing false statements for Dunphy.

Lawyers for Bradley and Bertucci said their clients deny the charges.

Others indicted in the case include Dunphy's brother, George of Abington; John Garvey of Braintree; Thomas Garvey of West Bridgewater; Arnold Friedman of Weston; and Robert Galardi of Swampscott.

The indictments charge that Dunphy and other defendants obtained loans for phony borrowers and used the money for themselves.

Assistant Attorney General Mark Smith declined to comment on why the case is being tried in Suffolk County.

Wollaston Credit Union has been supervised by regulators since Dunphy and the institution's board of directors were dismissed in November 1989. Regulators say that the credit union is now stable.

GET MOVING!

Lack of exercise has joined the ranks of smoking, high blood pressure and high cholesterol as a top risk factor for developing heart disease. The American Heart Association used to list inactivity as one of the "other contributing factors" to the disease, along with obesity, diabetes and stress. After reviewing years of scientific research, the AHA decided to switch lack of exercise to top-priority status. In addition, the association noted that inactivity is probably also a major factor in developing adult-onset diabetes, osteoporosis, and several types of cancer. The AHA now recommends that adults exercise 30 minutes to an hour at least three days a week, whether by jogging, walking or even gardening. P.S. Heart disease is the number one killer in the United States, claiming 500,000 lives annually.

Besides helping to prevent many serious forms of illness, including heart disease, regular exercise can relieve stress, speed up your metabolism, and help you sleep better. If you would like to learn what you can do to stay healthy and ward off the dangers of heart attacks, feel free to call COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE at 472-2550. If necessary, we will refer you to another medical professional. Office hours are by appointment at 101 Adams St., Suite 24 in Quincy, I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals.

A Molehill Mountain

The flap over selection of a new assistant city clerk sounds like it belongs in the "Mountain-out-of-a-molehill" department.

It has been editorially proclaimed elsewhere that the competition for the job be "open" to make sure that the front-running candidate — Councillor Patricia Toland — is the right choice.

Selecting the assistant clerk in the manner it has been done through the years — and in keeping with the city charter — now "smacks" of "cronyism" and "back room politics" it is editorially asserted.

At quick glance that sounds like a pretty lofty stand. And, besides, politicians are always fair game to kick around.

But, aren't a few little things being overlooked?

SHEA

As city clerk, Joseph Shea has the right — and authority — under the city's Plan A charter to recommend who he would like to have as his assistant subject to confirmation by the City Council.

Both the city clerk and assistant city clerk posts come under the jurisdiction of the City Council as does the city auditor.

The city council makes the final decision via confirmation.

In 1957, for example, City Clerk Allan Cole nominated John Gillis as his assistant after succeeding Donald Crane as clerk. The council confirmed Gillis' appointment.

Two years later when Cole died, Gillis was promoted to city clerk by the City Council. Gillis in turn nominated Thomas Burke to be his assistant and Burke was confirmed by the Council.

Gillis, incidentally went on to serve 33 years as clerk and did a pretty good job to say the least. The process worked then.

And it worked again in 1991 when Burke retired as assistant and Gillis nominated Shea to succeed him with confirmation by the Council. Shea did a good job as assistant clerk and now as clerk, Shea is nominating

TOLAND

Toland to be his assistant. Several other people asked to be considered and were. Shea selected Toland.

Shouldn't the city clerk be entitled to pick the person he wants as his assistant? A person who is compatible and one who will be his right arm in an important office that conducts the city elections, deals daily with the public and keeps the city's vital statistics?

And shouldn't the City Council have its say in who gets the job, seeing that it comes under the council's jurisdiction and directly affects the council?

Who other than the city clerk and the City Council are better qualified to decide who should be the assistant clerk?

Toland has been on the city council for 10 years and before that was a member of the School Committee. With her experience in the council and her overall knowledge of the city, she should have no problem carrying out the duties of assistant city clerk.

The assistant clerk — like the city clerk — should be someone familiar with Quincy.

Opening the competition up sounds good and in these sad economic times, it no doubt would bring an avalanche of applications from job hunters everywhere.

You might get a few who look like world-beaters on paper, at least. Ask them to come to City Hall for an interview and you might get: "Could you tell me how to get there?"

Maybe that's stretching the point and argument for a local person. But someone with long-time knowledge of the city and the people living here would seem to be a more valuable assistant clerk than just someone job-hunting.

The city clerk and the City Council have the right to make the choice and shouldn't be accused of back room politics or cronyism.

Just as a mayor has the right to pick his executive and personal secretaries, and other key office staff members.

What if he had to "open" those jobs up to everyone in the world?

Mayor James Sheets, now midway through his second term, might still be pouring over applications and resumes.

He picks who he wants. The city clerk and City Council have the right to pick who they want.

Let's get on with it.

Solid Waste Problems Remain Unchanged

Editor, The Quincy Sun: We write today to urge all Massachusetts residents to remember some simple facts about Question 3 from last fall's ballot.

Our statewide grassroots "person-to-person" campaign faced $6 million worth of negative and misleading advertisements financed primarily by Exxon, Dow Chemical, Union Carbide, and other known polluters. Unfortunately, the truth about Question 3's environmental standards for packaging, and its list of thousands of endorsing organizations, often got pushed aside.

The defeat of Question 3 leaves our solid waste problems unchanged. Massachusetts still burns and buries two billion pounds of packaging trash every year, wasting money and natural resources. One of our top environmental and economic priorities must be to reduce environmentally unsound packaging and to create better markets for the recyclable materials collected in cities and towns throughout the state.

In closing, please remember that the severe trash dilemmas that face our state have not gone away. Our efforts for environmentally sound packaging and more recycling will continue. We urge you to join us.

A Thank You From The American Red Cross

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

The American Red Cross-South Area would like to extend a loud and clear "thank you" to all who gave in contributions, time and handiwork for the 1992 Holiday Assistance Program. Without people like you, we would never accomplish our goal in serving the community.

The holidays were brightened for over 1,600 youngsters in Head Start, homeless shelters, and crisis centers, as well as our American Red Cross food clients who received filled Christmas stockings, toys, and knitted goods.

Your heartwarming response and continued support of programs sponsored by the American Red Cross enables us to better serve your community--the South Shore Area. This was an especially difficult year for many, but because of the wonderful response from the public, we were able to accomplish our goal.

We wish you all a most Happy and Peaceful 1993.

experiences and talents with his students. And, by taking his students out of the classroom into the community getting them involved in projects that keep them interested and makes going to school fun and meaningful for his students.

For example, this will be the sixth year his class will plant a large vegetable and flower garden on school grounds and donate all the produce to Father Bill's Shelter.

Last year, he and his class won top honors nationwide from the Scholastic News in its "Kids Care About Their Community" contest.

The class was honored for repairing the badly damaged gravestone of Quincy Civil War veteran James Ryan who lost his life at age 17.

Cantelli reunited the Ryan family and held a special service for the young veteran at St. Mary's Cemetery and the Common St. home where he lived as a boy. Cantelli donated the $1,000 contest award to the New England Shelter for Homeless Veterans in Boston.

Cantelli is chairman of the Quincy Granite Memorial Statue Committee. His classes have studied Quincy's famed granite industry and are raising money to erect a stone monument in Southwest Quincy in memory of the many granite workers who once lived in that area and worked the Quincy granite quarries.

Cantelli is working with state legislators on legislation his class initiated last Spring proposing a state holiday to be known as "John F. Kennedy Youth Service Day." His class successfully lobbied before the House Judiciary Committee for initial approval of the bill.

Cantelli helps promote multi-culturalism in the schools by teaching Spanish to his class. He has also voluntarily tutored children and adults in English and has helped as an interpreter for Quincy Hispanic residents.

Promoting the performing arts in Quincy, Cantelli each year, directs and produces a show for the Lincoln Hancock community. Last June, his students performed in a play he wrote about the Quincy granite industry. The play was so well received he has been asked by families of former granite workers to repeat it.

On Veterans Day, Cantelli organizes a party for Quincy men and women veterans and Gold Star Mothers. His students make posters, write letters and learn about the sacrifices of Quincy's veterans. On Memorial Day, his classes decorate veterans' graves with flags and flowers. The students also bring Christmas gifts to veterans at a Boston shelter.

Cantelli has organized and has run in an annual kids two-mile race through the streets of South Quincy with money raised going to Father Bill's shelter.

Listed in Who's Who in American Education, Cantelli was selected to serve as an educational consultant for Family Circle magazine. Back-to-school articles written by him for parents of fifth-graders appeared in the September, 1992 issue.

Cantelli helps direct and teaches in the Lincoln Hancock after-school program providing after-school recreational activities on a regular basis for approximately 100 children.

He works for the Quincy Recreation Department during the summers, taking youngsters on "history hikes" of Quincy and Boston.

For 12 years, he has volunteered to serve dinner once a month at 1000 Southern Artery.

A former co-chairman of the Ward 4

Neighborhood Association and former member of the Board of Directors of the Quincy Neighborhood Housing Association, he was honored last May as the Southwest Quincy Person of the Year.

Cantelli also teaches seventh-grade middle school CCD class Monday evenings at St. Mary's in West Quincy.

In nominating her husband, Mrs. Cantelli said, "My husband has been a wonderful and dedicated teacher in Quincy for the past 21 years. I can think of no finer friend of the young people in Quincy than he. I hope you will consider him as Quincy's Citizen of the Year."

Quincy's Yesterdays

Fuel Rationing Said To Hurt War Effort

Health Commissioner Dr. Richard M. Ash said that rationing of fuel oil in Quincy was hurting rather than helping the war effort by creating a near epidemic of colds, bronchitis, pneumonia and other ills.

"Fuel oil rationing has been carried to a dangerous point," he said. "The health of our people depending on fuel oil for heat is being impaired to an alarming degree."

"Anyone knows that an individual cannot keep in good health or perform necessary work when the body is numbed with cold. For good health the temperature should be at least 70 degrees."

Dr. Ash said ill health brought on by cold houses may be keeping war workers away from their jobs.

"If our people are not physically well, we can leave our planes unbuilt and our battleships on paper," he said.

DONAVAN NAMED COMMISSIONER

James A. Donovan, superintendent of streets for many years, was named to succeed Ezekiel C. Sargent as commissioner of public works, completing Mayor Charles A. Ross' house-cleaning of department heads.

The only major office-holder left over from the administration of former Mayor Thomas S. Burgin was Health Commissioner Ash.

Ross said Donovan would continue for the duration of the war to oversee the Street Department as part of his DPW duties, thus saving the superintendent's salary of $3,350 a year.

FATS, CANS UNCOLLECTED

Housewives who had been collecting tin cans and fats for more than a month for the war effort were outraged when the trucks failed to arrive to pick them up on the appointed Monday.

D. Foster Taylor, chairman of the salvage committee, sharply criticized what he called a lack of cooperation on the part of the Highway Department. DPW Commissioner Sargent blamed inclement weather.

"We had 21,000 calls to make and we just could not make them all," he said

Dell's Magic Breakfast

What about making breakfast at night? My friend Dell's recipe for a delicious breakfast does just that. It's a family favorite of hers according to her daughter, Karen. And a lot easier than trying to cook bacon and ham while making eggs "over easy" and toast.

Dell's Magic All-In-One Breakfast

1 pound bacon
1 half pound ham (thick sliced and cut up) about 2 tablespoons scallions
1 half pound fresh mushrooms (or canned equivalent) slices of bread to line a 9 x 13 baking dish

1 medium green pepper (cut up) some oil or margarine for saute
12 eggs (beaten)

Saute the onion, mushrooms and green pepper. Set aside. Cook the bacon (cook mine in the microwave) and ham. Beat the eggs and set aside.

In a slightly greased baking dish, line it with slices of bread. Add the bacon, ham and onion mixture. On top of that, pour the beaten eggs. Bake in a 350 degree oven uncovered for 45 minutes. Cool for a few minutes and then cut into squares. Serve with a side of homefries if desired. This recipe feeds from 6 to 8 people depending on the appetite!

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

We are all fortified by traditions. They play an important part in our lives. Traditions provide patterns on which we can depend and they give us security, a sense of belonging.

A tradition is more than just something that has been handed down. It comes from the heart. A tradition is something that you believe in deeply and would like to see handed down to your children.

Granted, in our hectic way of life today, some of the traditional ways of doing things cannot help but to be changed. However, some of them can.

Traditions are important to all of us and most of them have helped us to grow, and even make us think a little more. So I ask you, before changing, or even eliminating your traditions, consider how much they have affected you and what you have learned from them. It might just change your mind...

Sheets Leads North Over Quincy, 57-49

The Quincy and North Quincy boys' basketball teams have had disappointing seasons, but North's Luke Sheets saw it that the Raiders, following three heartbreaking losses, returned to the win column last Friday night, defeating Quincy, 57-49.

North improved its record to 5-6, while Quincy fell to 3-7.

North Quincy played at Plymouth Tuesday, will host Falmouth Friday night at 7 o'clock and will be at Barnstable next Tuesday night at 7.

Quincy played Taunton Tuesday, will be at Weymouth Friday at 7 and will be home to Bridgewater-Raynham next Tuesday at 7.

North Quincy had lost to Taunton by three points, Weymouth by one and Bridgewater-Raynham in triple overtime in its three games preceding the Quincy game.

Sheets had his best night of the season as he scored 25 points, leading an inside assault that burned the smaller Presidents throughout the game.

"We just decided to pound the ball inside and try to get their center (John Russell) in foul trouble," said North coach Ted Stevenson.

"We gave up a few too many thirds tonight, but I was happy with the way we played. We really needed this one after three tough defeats. We haven't made the big plays lately and tonight we did."

Quincy, whose offense is built around the outside shooting of Matt Dwyer (12 points), Robbie Kane (eight points) and Joe Kelly (15 points), failed to get any inside game going.

North Quincy center Jason McLeod, a 6'8" transfer from Oregon, scored 11 points, grabbed 12 rebounds and had eight blocked shots.

He also did some fine passing as he was often stationed at the foul line to draw Quincy's defense away from the hoop and as a result, he often found Sheets and Bo Smith (eight points) in mismatches underneath for easy baskets. Sean Donovan, one of North's high scorers, had nine points.

"When you play against a team like that, your defensive rotation has to be sound," said Quincy coach John Franceschini. "Our rotation broke down in the second half. You have to play man-to-man defense because they are a fine passing team and if you double someone they will find the open man."

Quincy held its own in the first half as Dwyer hit two three-pointers to give his team a 16-13 lead. But the Raiders came back with a 8-4 run behind Sheets' two turnarounds to take a 21-20 halftime lead.

A 6-0 run to start the second half put North ahead to stay, although Quincy cut the lead to 31-29, but North scored the next eight points to clinch the win.

Earlier in the week Bridgewater-Raynham hit six straight free throws in the third overtime session to defeat North Quincy, 59-53.

Sheets sent the game into overtime with a basket with seven seconds left in regulation.

B-R's Matt Hammond hit a three-pointer with 11 seconds left in the first overtime, sending the game into a second overtime tied at 45.

McLeod had his best game of the season for North, scoring 28 points and taking down 15 rebounds.

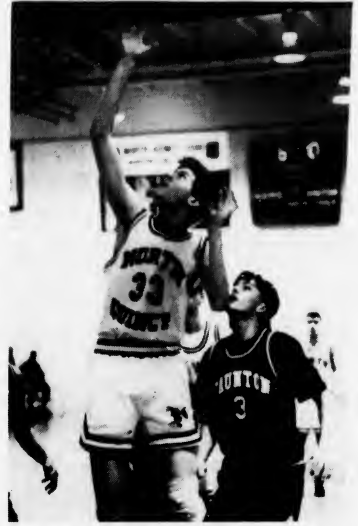

Quincy lost to Silver Lake, 89-77, despite 20 points by Kane and 15 by Dwyer.

Eric Anthrop paced the Lakers with 22 points, while Scott Madden chipped in with 16.

NORTH QUINCY'S Sean Warren goes for two points against Taunton as teammate Luke Sheets moves in during recent OCL action. The Raiders lost, 78-75.

RED RAIDERS' Luke Sheets lays in two of his 16 points in a recent heartbreaking loss to Taunton, 78-75. Sheets also had 10 rebounds for North.

North Girls Win, 57-30

The North Quincy girls' basketball team has had an up and down season, but the team evened its record to 5-5 with its second win over rival Quincy, 57-30, last Friday night.

The North girls had previously defeated Quincy in the consolation round of the North Quincy Christmas Tournament. The teams will meet again Feb. 11 at Quincy.

North Quincy faced Plymouth Tuesday, will be at Falmouth Friday and will be home to Barnstable next Tuesday at 7 p.m.

Winless Quincy played at Taunton Tuesday, will be host to Weymouth Friday at 7 and will be at Bridgewater-Raynham next Tuesday.

Senior Regina Murphy had 12 points, eight blocks and six steals to spark North over Quincy. The team also got 10 points from senior Julie Ramos.

Peg Connolly had seven points for Quincy, which trailed, 32-20, at the half and fell farther behind during the second half.

Wrestling

Quincy, North Have Shot At Top

The Quincy and North Quincy wrestling teams continue to do well in the Old Colony League and wins last night (Wednesday) would pit the Presidents and Red Raiders against each other next Wednesday night at 7 o'clock in a battle for first place.

The meet will be at Quincy's Center for Technical Education gym.

Quincy faced Bridgewater-Raynham and North met Weymouth last night. Saturday Quincy will face Norwood and Xaverian at Canton at 11 a.m. and North will wrestle at Boston College High at 10 a.m.

Quincy, which lost its first three meets of the year, continued on the comeback trail last Saturday with a 48-24 win over Hingham to even its overall record to 5-5.

North Quincy also topped Hingham, 46-26, to improve its overall record to 6-2.

For the Presidents, freshman Rich Testa (103) recorded his first varsity win with a pin.

Junior Jon Bonsignore (119) also won his first

The surprise of the season has been the performance of sophomore heavyweight Mike Feeley, who improved to 7-0 in dual meets with his pin against Hingham.

For North Quincy James

O'Connell, Billy Chiu, Jamie Karvelis, Frannie Bellotti, Paul Delaney, Jeff Pillard, Chris Hamel, Rick MacVarish and Andy Schwendenman all pinned their rivals against Hingham.

By JOE HERN

"Never say die" was the lesson of the most recent Sacred Heart North Quincy Basketball League games. Two teams staged disciplined comebacks to claim close wins with seconds to spare. In all, three games were decided by one basket.

Rookie girls (8-10): The Celtics bested the Lightning Bolts, 14-10, with Jackie "Chief" Suprey hitting the rainbow shots for the Celtics while Rose "Bud" Zerrigan insured the win with excellent defense. Melissa Spezzano played well for the Bolts, Nora Hanna produced clutch baskets and Jillian Manning was unrelenting on defense.

The Hip Hoopsters hopped over the Dazzling Dribblers, 9-8, in a game decided at the wire. Melissa Doyle and Lauren Doyle combined for the Hoopsters' baskets while Kelley Doherty sparked the defense. Anne Marie Moynihan pulled down several rebounds, Julie Cummings made good passes and Tanya Higgins played strong defense for the Dribblers.

The Dalmations defeated the Mighty Midgets, 14-8, with Caroline Francis leading the defense and Danielle Doherty playing solidly for the Dalmations. For the Midgets Casey Ridge played good defense and did some excellent ball handling, Casey Dooley rebounded and scored well and Monita Chiu rebounded well and played tight defense.

Rookie boys (8-10): The Duke Blue Devils handed the Hawks their first loss, 24-16. Led by Pat Jaehning and Ryan Graber, the Blue Devils broke a 14-14 tie after three quarters and wore down the undermanned Hawks with a 10-2 run. Phil "Sprint" McGillicuddy, the Hawks' designated long-distance carrier, provided 12 points for the Hawks, most on long jump shots. Timmy Nelson played a strong floor game and "Rookie of the Year" Tommy Cabral played super in the first game of what promises to be a stellar career.

The 76ers toppled the Bulls, 23-16, on the combination of Tom Buckley, tough undereath, who scored the key baskets, Jeff Narbone, with his big rebounds and good hustle and Jack Liuzzo, who led the offense without neglecting the defense. Pat Alessi, Derek Keezer and Joslin Alder played well for the Bulls.

The Magic knocked the wind out of the Hurricanes, 20-17, with Raymond Chu making the key passes, Mike Paul playing smart defense and Adam O'Hara pulling down the rebounds in a tough defensive game going down to the wire. Chris Ham set the pace for the Hurricanes, Greg Shields moved the ball well and Joey Hern dove fearlessly after the loose balls.

The Trail Blazers topped the Celtics, 24-18, led by the triumvirate of Chris and Terrence "no relation" Doherty and Eric Ridlon. Gabriel Ho played fine defense for the Blazers, Mark Maher launched some fine shots and Bela Kobiella did some outstanding rebounding.

College girls (11-12): Providence claimed its first win by beating Notre Dame, 20-15. Led by the scoring of Kim Lavery, the defense of Kate Lavery and the solid play of Leona Ma, the Friars jumped out to an 8-0 lead. The Irish clawed back to within three points in the fourth quarter but Providence wouldn't be denied and held on, icing it with a buzzer beater. Dorothy Cronin made key baskets for the Irish, Suzanne Milburn was wherever the ball was and Jeannie Sheahan played her usual strong defensive game.

Georgetown defeated B.C. in a game that saw Melissa Puleria playing a strong all-around game and Meghan Newton and Laura Murphy also playing well. Liz McNally, Barry Koch and Stephanie Collins played solid games for the Eagles.

College boys (10-11): The Hurricanes dropped a 20-18 decision to the Fighting Irish in a game decided with three seconds left in overtime. Eric Stoekel made pin-point passes for the Irish, Dan "Havlicek" Louie stole the ball and Don Kavanagh made good shots.

In another squeaker the Blue Devils came from behind to edge the Tarheels, 24-22. Mark Repoff made key baskets for the Devils aided by the rebounding of Nils Erickson and the defense of Bill Tam. Chris Licardi was a hot shooter for the Tarheels, Brenda Donovan was solid on defense and Rick Loughmiller rebounded aggressively.

Pro girls (13-14): The Skeahan Squad defeated Army, 31-26, in a game featuring great offensive and defensive plays. Army was paced by Kerry O'Donnell's 10 points, Erin McVeigh had six and did some nice rebounding and Anne Glavin had four points and played strong defense.

Pro boys (12-14): The Oilers topped the Celtics, 42-35, in a battle of the undefeated. The Oilers were keyed by three Dennis Ready hoops and a big basket by Ryan Deshler. Tom Bowes kept the Celts close with 14 points and Robbie Bowes' aggressive defense held the explosive Sean O'Toole in check. Adam Radzevich had seven points for the Celts.

The Kings squeaked by the Warriors, 28-27, to claim their first victory in a thrilling last-second triumph. Bill Nelson, Pat Cummings and Jason Gibson played well for the Kings. Bill Manning controlled the Warrior offense, Dan LeBlanc was tough on the boards and Jon Green played zealous defense.

Quincy's Mite A hockey team, sponsored by Northland Seafood, defeated South Boston, 5-3, and also topped Canton, 7-4.

In handing South Boston its first loss since December of 1990, Quincy was led by Scott MacDonald's two goals. Matt Holt, Steve McGonagle and Charlie Sorrento had a goal each. Steven Goff, Shawn Dooley and Mark Gibbons had assists. Matt Gregory was outstanding in goal.

FRESH FILTER FACTS

Auto technicians often tell customers that replacing the oil filter at the time of an engine oil change is well worth the slight additional cost. Since before the 1930's, when oil filters hardly existed, automotive manufacturers have come to realize the decided benefit that oil filters bring. While they may not filter out varnish, sludge and other microscopic contaminants (the job of oil additives), oil filters effectively rid engine oil of dirt particles. It is dirt particles in the 10- to 20-micron range, along with carbon and tiny particles produced by engine machining and component wear, that damage the engine's moving parts. Once the oil filter has trapped these destructive particles, it is rather foolhardy not to remove them along with the oil filter when changing engine oil. HINT: A clean air filter is critical to keeping airborne dirt particles from entering the engine.

North Loses To Weymouth, Ties B-R

By TOM SULLIVAN

The North Quincy hockey team, after having a five-game win streak ended with a hard-to-take loss to undefeated Weymouth, escaped a second straight loss Saturday when Dave Pacino's goal with a minute left gave the Raiders a 4-4 tie with Bridgewater-Raynham.

North is now 6-2-1 (3-2-1 in the Old Colony League).

North faced Quincy (6-3-2) last night in what shaped up as one of the year's top games, will host Falmouth Saturday at 7:50 at the Quincy Youth Arena and will be home to Barnstable next Wednesday at 7:50.

North got off to a great start against B-R, taking an early 3-0 lead but that was all the Raiders could do until the late tying goal.

"I was very disappointed in the way we played," said North coach Tom Benson. "We started out strong but just stopped playing after that. It was just very disappointing after a tough loss to Weymouth."

The Raiders have been playing without Joe Carinici, who separated his shoulder, and he is expected to be out of action for another two weeks. He had been playing excellent hockey and has been missed.

Mike DesRoche, tied for the league lead with 25 points, scored North's first goal unassisted and scored the second with Brendan O'Brien and Jim Sapienza assisting. Sapienza scored the third goal with O'Brien assisting.

O'Brien and DesRoche assisted on Pacino's game-tying goal.

Weymouth goalie Scott Young was the difference in the win over North Quincy earlier in the week.

Young had 34 saves, many of the spectacular variety including some point-blank shots.

North Quincy outplayed us in all facets of the game, except goaltending," said Weymouth coach Tim Murphy. "Goaltending was the key to victory and Scott Young saved us. He had an outstanding game."

"We need to cash in on some point-blank shots, but missed chances were the difference," said Benson. "We should have been up two or three goals going into the third period. On the plus side, we are finally realizing we can play with the Weymouths and Plymouths."

North's many missed opportunities included missing three open net shots.

Young made big saves on Kevin Boylen, A.J. Carthas and O'Brien early in the game before the Wildcats took a 1-0 lead. They made it 2-0 at 4:10 of the middle period. They increased their lead to 3-0 at 9:19.

North came back and Sapienza scored a power-play goal at 10:51 of the period after a great rush from his own zone and Boylen made it 3-2 with Carthas assisting.

North nearly tied it but Young made a great pad save on Andrew Vermette's shot and Weymouth made it 4-2 on Larry Anzalone's second goal.

The Raiders made it 4-3 when DesRoche knocked in his own rebound but Young made two more big saves stopping O'Brien and DesRoche with 1:20 left, clinching the win for Weymouth.

Weymouth's Scott Young was the difference

The Quincy hockey team had a six-game unbeaten streak snapped last Saturday when it lost to Silver Lake, 5-3, dropping its record to 6-3-2 (3-2-1 in the Old Colony League).

The Presidents faced North Quincy (6-2-1) last night (Wednesday) in what shaped up as one of the big games of the year, will face unbeaten Weymouth Saturday at 7:40 at the Pilgrim Arena in Hingham and will be at Bridgewater-Raynham next Wednesday night at 8 p.m.

Quincy jumped off to a 2-0 lead against Silver Lake on goals by David Cooper (assisted by Jamie Schatzl) and Mark Gilmore (assists for Sean McArdle and Steve Miller).

The Presidents scored in the second period on a goal by Steve Provost (assists for Miller and McArdle), but the Lakers scored twice and Quincy held a 3-2 edge going into the third period.

While the Presidents were being blanked, Paul Toler tied the game and Dan McLeod scored midway through the period to put the Lakers ahead. Sophomore Kevin Perry scored an empty net goal when Quincy coach Bob Sylvia pulled the goalie.

The Lakers' Brian Cole, one of the best goalies in the league, stopped 33 Quincy shots, 13 in the final period. Quincy sophomore goalie Mark Smith made 23 saves.

"We certainly had our chances, especially in the third period, but we just couldn't beat Cole," said Sylvia.

Silver Lake keyed on Quincy's top scorer, Jeff

Craig (25 points) and for one of the few times this year he was held without a point.

Earlier in the week Quincy edged Barnstable, 2-1, on Dan Morrell's goal with 11 minutes to play.

Cooper had scored the other Quincy goal early in the game. Craig assisted on both goals.

Smith had another fine game in goal, stopping 24 of 25 Barnstable shots. The Barnstable goalie was also outstanding, making several excellent saves.

"Injuries and illness have plagued both our girls' and boys' squads and have prevented the teams from pulling out several close meets," coach Jeff Hennessy said. "It looks like Heather Rendle will miss some or all of the rest of the indoor season and she would have made a difference."

organize on behalf of the ratepayers. It's really going to take a joint effort by the authority and the federal and state governments, said Sheets, who also attended the inauguration of President Bill Clinton and Vice President Albert Gore Wednesday.

In the long term, Sheets said Congress and President Clinton should adopt an 80-20 percent federal government assistance program for water projects. Under such a program, the federal government would finance water projects essentially 80 percent while the remaining 20 percent would be paid by state and local governments.

similar program was dismantled shortly before a federal court ordered the state clean up Boston Harbor. As a result, the cleanup is being financed largely by ratepayers in the 43 municipalities in the MWRA district.

Sheets was expected to return to the city Thursday evening. He said he will arrange a meeting with MacDonald and Boston Mayor Ray Flynn on rate relief in the near future.

City Hopes To Keep Pneumatic Scale

Kolson said. "I would like to keep them (Pneumatic Scale) in Quincy," Kolson said. "It means jobs and it means taxes."

Kolson also said the company would generate traffic just twice a day as opposed to a retail use.

Another possible scenario, which has been repeated by more than one city official, would have Pneumatic Scale obtain a parcel of land from the MWRA at the Fore River Shipyards.

"We want a modern, single-story facility," said Lawson. "If a piece of the shipyard property could accommodate us, we would certainly consider it."

City officials may try to ensure that Pneumatic Scale stays in Quincy. Stop & Shop must get a special permit from the city to convert the Pneumatic Scale site to retail use.

City officials could use the leverage of the special permit to block the Stop & Shop deal if Pneumatic Scale is unable to find a Quincy location.

Lawson said he welcomes the help of the city in locating a new site. "There are not a lot of manufacturing sites in the city," he said. "It's a question of finding the right equation to benefit everyone concerned."

Shaw's also will need a special permit to convert the Boston Gear site to retail use.

An amendment to the city's zoning ordinance concerning special permits was introduced to the City Council's Ordinance Committee during the Jan. 11 council meeting.

The amendment would transfer control of the special permit from the Zoning Board of Appeals to the City Council. The amendment could be approved at a future council meeting. In last week's Quincy Sun it was incorrectly reported that the amendment had been adopted.

The proposed Shaw's store would about the MBTA tracks and a 375-car parking lot would extend out to Hancock Street. Boston Gear is situated on a 10 1/2-acre site and would maintain its offices on the remaining three acres. Boston Gear moved its production operations from the Norfolk Downs site in September of 1990.

Shaw's officials will meet with neighbors to address concerns about the project, including traffic concerns, before seeking a special permit from the city, said Shaw's spokesman Brian Leahy.

Leahy said the proposal calls for demolition of the front portions of the existing Boston Gear structure. He said 200 construction jobs would be generated by the remodeling.

Club Expansion Approved

O'Driscoll. Health Commissioner Jane Gallahue, who recently visited the establishment, agreed.

"I was satisfied with what I saw there," she said.

Gallahue added that research she had conducted since the board's Jan. 12 meeting showed that Shooter's has a General All-Purpose Alcoholic License, which means the establishment is not required to serve food.

Although Shooter's is not equipped to serve hot foods, it does allow patrons to order food from the nearby Hollywood/Hollywood and Taso's Pizza restaurants, Gallahue said. Shooter's also has a vending machine on its premises and makes available prepackaged foods such as peanuts and potato chips.

Shooters Club Cafe is located in the lower level of Quincy Fair Mall.

West Quincy Blaze

THREE-ALARM FIRE destroyed the home of Stanley Trask at 24 Woodcliff Rd., West Quincy, Jan. 20 at 9:30 a.m. Fire department officials said the blaze began in the basement as trash was being burned in a fireplace. Flames spread into the walls then up through to the roof. Firefighters had to evacuate as the roof and floor began to collapse. Trask, 84, and his wife were treated for smoke inhalation. Damage was estimated at $150,000. Deputy Chief Joseph Jackson recovered some special family items including the couple's wedding picture.

QUINCY FIREFIGHTER Steven Sweet is examined by Norfolk-Bristol Ambulance EMTs Debra Downey and Brad Newbury after he was felled by smoke inhalation while fighting a three-alarm blaze at 24 Woodcliff Rd. Sweet was one of three firefighters injured battling the stubborn fire.

Neighborhood Meeting Feb. 4

Residents Protest 700-Foot Tower

About a dozen residents showed up at City Hall Monday to protest a 700-foot telecommunications tower which was erected a few weeks ago near Ricciuti Drive in West Quincy.

Neighbors are concerned about possible health hazards and also say its an eyesore which hurts property values.

The issue was discussed at a Conservation Commission meeting Wednesday, Jan. 27, at 7:30 p.m. at City Hall.

Ward 4 City Councillor Thomas Fabrizio said he has scheduled a neighborhood meeting for Thursday, Feb. 4 at City Hall. The Conservation Commission issued a cease-and-desist order to Frank DiRico of Quincy, owner of Industrial Communications and Electronics of Kingston, owner of the tower. The order states that no further work is to be done on the tower until further notice.

DeRico has said he plans to install up to 24 antennas on the tower and may also mount microwave dishes on the structure.

Fabrizio said the Conservation Commission is attempting to obtain a court order to back up their own order. Fabrizio said DiRico has ignored the Commission's order.

Nearby residents have complained that they were not notified that they were had been proposed.

"We are notified when a telephone pole is being put up but not when a 700-foot tower goes up," said one woman.

The Zoning Board of Appeals is required to notify any residents living within 300 feet of any proposal that requires a special permit. The ZBA did hold public hearings on the tower but neighbors were not directly notified because they do not live close enough to the site.

Fabrizio said he is opposed to the tower and will work to have it removed or reduced.

Two Developers Call Project 'Doable'

Hancock Lot Retail Project Drawing Interest

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

The city's proposal to develop the Hancock Parking Lot has generated considerable interest from developers with at least two saying the project is "doable," city officials said Tuesday.

The city's plan to develop the Hancock Parking Lot has generated considerable interest from developers with at least two saying the project is "doable," city officials said Tuesday.

According to Planning Director Richard Meade, 9 or 10 developers have requested a copy of the RFP (Request for Proposal) and have indicated they will likely submit bids before the Feb. 16 deadline. He said two of those bidders are certain the project can work and will submit bids detailing the specifics of their own concept of the project before next month's deadline.

"I know of 9 or 10 bidders who have requested a copy of the FRP and I know of at least two (bidders) who have said yes, 'this is a doable project' and this is what well do," meaning specifics," Meade said.

"There are people out there who want to work with us and that's a good sign. It's part of the positive attitude that's been generated by the downtown improvements."

Mayor James Sheets said he is pleased with the response.

"It (the project) is extremely important for the future of the downtown. If you're going to attract retail, you need a good retail mix. To do that, you need to add retail space.

"It's exciting to have that many people looking at it. We also think it's a doable project."

Sheets said the city does not have a plan to develop the Hancock municipal parking lot across from the Quincy District Courthouse but merely an undefined concept of a large retail complex. He said the precise design of such a complex will be determined by the bids received.

"We don't have a plan. We have a concept. The bids are asking for plans. We're not sure what we'll get," the mayor said.

Sheets informed The Quincy Sun of the city's intent to develop the 5.5-acre lot a week before his Mid-Term Address Jan. 4.

Toland Leaves Council, Seen Asst. City Clerk

By STEVE KAVANAGH

Patricia Toland resigned from the City Council Tuesday after more than 17 years in elected office.

She said she hopes to continue to serve the citizens of Quincy as assistant city clerk.

Toland, considered the leading candidate for the assistant clerk's post, said she is hopeful that she will be nominated and approved for the job.

"If it's to be than I hope to serve there in a way to benefit the citizens of Quincy," Toland said.

Councillor-at-Large Michael Cheney has proposed that the assistant clerk's position by made part-time. Cheney has also said the Toland may have violated state ethics regulations when she asked fellow councillors to support her for the assistant clerk's job.

Toland said she would "possibly" still be interested in the job if it becomes part time. "I haven't thought about it," she said.

Toland, a Wollaston resident, is the first City

PATRICIA TOLAND

Councillor to resign during a term in office since Paul Harold left in 1978 after being elected state Senator.

"It's been a joy and a privilege to serve, I'm now in my 18th year," Toland said. "It's been a wonderful opportunity and I thank the people of Quincy for giving it to me, they've been very generous."

Toland served six years on the School Committee after being elected in 1975 and is in her 12th year on the Council.

"The important part of government is listening to people and carrying out their wishes," Toland said. "I think I've always tried to do that."

She said some of the council's accomplishments of which she is most proud include:

- The development of President's Place in Quincy Center. Toland was chairman of the Downtown Development Committee when the project was designed.

- "I feel very proud. I had an impact on that design," she said.

- The construction of a new wing at Quincy Hospital. Toland was chairman of the Health and Hospital Committee when the bond for the project was issued.

- "We had a lot of controversial meetings... but the project finally went forward," she said.

- The development of Marina Bay.

"There was nothing there when I came to the Council. Now it has grown into a full-fledged, bustling community, it's an addition to the tax base and a place where people enjoy spending leisure time."

- City beautification. Toland was chairman of

McArdle Family New Owners Of Hancock Tobacco

By MICHAEL WHALEN
From now on, it's going to be all in the family at the Hancock Tobacco store, 1500 Hancock St.

"All five of our children are working there," said Nancy McArdle of Quincy, new co-owner of the store with her husband, Joseph McArdle Jr. "And so is our daughter-in-law."

The store, which was taken over by the McArdles Jan. 4, is being managed by their son Michael. In addition, sons Joseph III, Frank and Sean, daughter Marie Davis and daughter-in-law Dawn (Joseph III's wife) are all participating in the new family business.

The McArdles are lifelong residents of Quincy and have been active in the Quincy Elks. Mrs. McArdle said both her husband and Michael are past Exalted Rulers of the Elks and Frank is currently a Loyal Knight.

She added that the family will continue Hancock Tobacco's "fine tradition of quality service" and plans to offer new items to the public in the near future.

"We're going to be selling hats, t-shirts and sweatshirts, baseball cards and lots of other little novelty items, as well as paperback books," she said.

The store, which was formerly known as Caradonna's, has been located at its present site on the corner of Cottage Ave. for more than 40 years. The McArdles obtained the business from previous owners Benjie Beberman and Dick DiSalvio.

By STEVE KAVANAGH
The Quincy College Governance Committee will hold its second meeting today (Thursday) to tackle the question of how the school should be directed in the future.

The Committee began its task last week when it held its first meeting.

Committee chairman Linda Stice, a School Committee member, said she anticipates the Governance Committee will have a recommendation ready for Mayor James Sheets and the City Council by April 1.

"I think we (committee) were all happy to see that we have much more common ground than we realized," Stice said.

Public input is welcome at the committee's meeting today at 11 a.m. at City Hall, Stice said.

The committee will meet again next Thursday at City Hall at 3:30 p.m. Meetings will be posted and are open to the public, Stice said. A public hearing will also be announced.

The college is presently governed by the School Committee and Superintendent of School Eugene Creedon.

Critics of the current system say the school has grown too large and needs its own governing board and that the administrative duties involving the college take away time Creedon and the School Committee should be focusing on the public schools.

A new system could have Quincy College President O. Clayton Johnson report to a Board of Trustees instead of Creedon. Under the current system the college's Board of Trustees serves in an advisory capacity and assists with fundraising.

Stice said the committee's purpose is to recommend a new form of governance at Quincy College "and to refine what the continuing relationship between the college and city should be."

"We'll recommend who should comprise a new Board of Trustees and how they should be selected," Stice said.

Some of the committee's work has already been done, Stice said. A task force has already reviewed the teachers' contract.

"We went over what relates to the college and what doesn't," Stice said.

Teachers at Quincy College are municipal employees and members of the Quincy Education Association, the same union as teachers in the Quincy Public Schools.

QEA officials have expressed concern regarding tenure, pensions and other issues in the event of a change of governance.

Task force members included Ivan Smith of Quincy College, Mary Pace and Tom Walsh, president, both of the QEA, and School Committee members Peg King, Dan Raymond and Stice.

"We cleared up where the contract needed revision to be 'college specific,'" Stice said.

The Governance Committee, created by Sheets, includes 13 members. They are, Stice and Steve Durkin of the School Committee; Johnson and Quincy College Director of Admissions Lori Tomassetti; Walsh and Creedon; Quincy College student government president Sean Chisholm; Charles Sweeney of the Board of Trustees; the mayor's administrative assistant Bernice Mader; City Solicitor Steve McGrath; Sheila McIntyre of College Courses, Inc., a group of private citizens which helped found the college and helps support the school financially; and city councillors Tom Fabrizio and Larry Chretien.

City Councillor Tim Cahill was asked to be on the committee but declined. Cahill said the matter should be dealt with through the council's Education Committee which discussed the issue this past October.

Cahill has proposed a home rule petition calling for a new governance system at the college. He and Johnson have criticized the new committee and called it a stall tactic by Sheets.

Once the committee makes a recommendation it must be approved by the mayor, City Council and the state legislature.

Morrissey, Mariano Concerned Over Future Development At Fore River Shipyard

In a letter to the executive director of the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority, Sen. Michael Morrissey and Rep. Ronald Mariano expressed their on going concern about the future development at the Fore River shipyard.

The Quincy legislators asked Doug McDonald that any future contracts or awards to current or future tenants be made with the knowledge and advice of the City of Quincy and Town of Braintree, the two municipalities which border the shipyard site.

"The re-development and re-use of the shipyard property is one of the highest priorities," Mariano said.

Morrissey added, "We must work to get the property back on the tax roles and productive again."

Both legislators expressed their concern that future development or use of the property should not adversely affect the Quincy Point and East Braintree area. The recent contract award to Fore River Shipyard & Iron Works, Inc. to dismantle six Navy destroyers caused some immediate concern to local residents, Mariano said.

"The project is expected to employ 45-50 union shipbuilders but more long range planning and development must be coordinated and identified so that we maintain a stable shipbuilding workforce," said Mariano, whose district includes the shipyard property.

Morrissey was critical of the MWRA's failure to inform residents and local officials or be able to adequately answer initial questions and concerns over the recent contract and uses at the shipyard.

"Simple communication and information sharing by the MWRA will go along way to better community relations and alleviate fears," said Morrissey. The MWRA is one of the largest industrial and business property owners in Quincy and they are obligated to local residents and residents to help safely redevelop that area to compatible industrial use, he added.

Cahill Sells Restaurant, Ponders Mayoral Run

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Citing both personal and political reasons, City Councillor Timothy Cahill has decided to sell his Quincy Square business, Handshakes Cafe.

The Quincy License Board Tuesday granted Cahill's request to transfer the Common Victualer License of the cafe, located at 1354 Hancock St., to Paul Bast of Braintree.

Cahill, 34, who has owned Handshakes for 10 1/2 years, told the board he felt confident leaving the business in Bast's hands.

"Mr. Bast has a lot more experience than I had, and probably will ever have, in the restaurant business," said Cahill, who added that "I feel that I'm leaving him with a good business."

Cahill also thanked the board for its past support.

"I especially want to thank the Health Department, which is the department I deal with the most, for always being very fair with me over the years," he said.

Cahill said Bast plans to keep the operation of

TIM CAHILL

Handshakes as is, noting that all employees who wish to continue working at the cafe will be kept and no physical changes in the structure of the business are planned.

Following the meeting, Cahill said there were several reasons that factored into his decision to sell the cafe, one of which is his belief that politics and business do not mix well.

"One of the things that has hurt my business over the years has been my involvement in politics," he said. "I think Handshakes should be judged as a restaurant and not by its owner."

Cahill, whose name has come up of late as a potential mayoral candidate, stressed that he did not sell Handshakes so that he can oppose Mayor James Sheets in the November election. He added that his decision to run for mayor will not be made until the end of February.

Cahill also noted that his reasons for selling were "not purely political."

"I've been doing this (working in the food industry) for almost 11 years," he said. "I've been in it long enough, and basically now I'm looking to get off and doing other things."

"Business has been very good to me, and I've been very lucky. I just felt that the time was right."

Cahill said he has no immediate plans on what he will do next, other than a two-week February vacation in Florida with his family, but added that he is not worried about income.

"My main priority is to support my family," he said. "Certainly there's a risk involved (in selling the business), but I've always been a risk-taker and hopefully I will be for the rest of my life."

Employees Lobby Council To Keep Nursing Home Open

More than a dozen employees of the Presidential Convalescent Home, Old Colony Ave., Wollaston, lobbied the City Council Monday night to help keep the financially troubled nursing home open.

The home has been ordered closed next month by a judge. Presidential owes back taxes to the city and also has other debts.

Workers asked the council to explore the possibility of the city forgiving the interest and fines incurred on its back taxes to give a new owner a chance at reviving the business.

City Solicitor Steve McGrath said the home has a potential buyer who is awaiting approval of a small business loan.

$4,000 Approved For Germantown Sports

The City Council voted Monday to extend the Snug Harbor Youth Activities program by approving $4,000 from the city's UDAG block grant account.

The program currently features after school basketball leagues for Germantown elementary and middle school boys and girls at Snug Harbor School.

Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson said he would like to expand the program to include volleyball, weightlifting and other activities.

"The extension of the athletic program is something that is very worthwhile," Kolson said.

Telephone Directories Can Be Recycled

Delivery of the NYNEX Yellow Pages and NYNEX White Pages for Boston is under way in Quincy and residents will be able to recycle their out-of-date telephone directories.

Quincy's recycling center, at 55 Sea St., accepts telephone books year round and is open 24 hours.

Quincy is one of the 12 communities in Greater Boston to offer directory recycling.

"NYNEX is working to develop recycling markets for out-of-date directories," said John Balaguer, director of Environmental Issues for NYNEX. "As new markets are found, NYNEX forms public-private partnerships with local recycling officials to create a long-term, sustainable effort to collect and recycle telephone directories in their community recycling programs."

Delivery of the Boston directories to area homes and businesses will be completed March 9.

Medically Speaking

WHAT CAN YOU SAY?

When visiting someone with a serious health problem, it is natural to feel uncomfortable. What should you say - or leave unsaid? Most patients truly appreciate visits from friends and family, which can even help them tolerate great pain because they know others will be there to stand by them. Follow the patient's lead on what to discuss. After offering the initial "How are you feeling," let the patient air pent-up anger or guide the conversation away from the situation at hand. Most will drop clues about the type of visit they would like. Beyond that, be honest about your own feelings. If you are scared, say so. Your greatest gift is your presence and genuine concern. P.S. Check with friends, family or medical personnel to see if a visit would be appropriate, and don't stay too long when you do visit.

Before bringing your children along on such a visit, it's a good idea to sit down with them both to address their questions and concerns and to outline for them some guidelines for appropriate bedside behavior. For more information on this topic or on the prevention and treatment of heart disease, call COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE at 472-2550. We focus on treating the patient, rather than the disease. Office hours are by appointment at 101 Adams St., Suite 24, in Quincy. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals.

Let College Fly On Own

Quincy College, you might say, is a little like the kid that outgrew his britches.

Everyone could see him growing but didn't think or do much about it until suddenly one day — oops — it was quite obvious he was too big for them.

And now, it seems quite obvious that Quincy College, one of the fastest growing colleges in the state, is in need of a better governing fit.

The newly created Quincy College Governance Committee, headed by School Committee woman Linda Stice as chairman, is off to a good start looking for that right fit.

The college is presently—and has been since it opened 35 years ago—governed by the School Committee and the superintendent of schools.

Its president is more like a high school principal than a college president. The president answers to the school superintendent and the School Committee.

That's the way it was set up when the college was in its infancy and it worked fine then and for a number of years.

But critics feel the college has outgrown this governing system and that a needed change is long overdue.

Looking at a few figures would seem to strengthen this argument.

In 1958, the college opened with a total enrollment of 35 students.

The first commencement class had something like six or nine graduates.

Today, the college has 3,688 students —3,298 in Quincy and 390 at the new Plymouth campus.

Last year's graduating class numbered 534. Times certainly have changed since 1958.

The college, many feel, should have its own governing board and the School Committee and superintendent of schools should concentrate on the elementary, middle and high schools.

The college, and the schools, would be better off, and better places of learning.

It would give the superintendent of schools more time to supervise the schools and the School Committee more time to oversee the quality of education.

The college president, under one proposal, would report to a new Board of Trustees instead of to the school superintendent and School Committee.

How that board would be selected and what the future relationship between the college and the city are questions the committee is seeking answers for.

Another matter is determining the status of the Quincy College teachers who are municipal employees and members of the Quincy Education Association—the same union to which the public schools teachers belong.

It looks like a well-rounded committee with a variety of input. In addition to Stice, the members include in alphabetical order:

Sean Chisholm, Quincy College Student Government; Councillor Larry Chretien, School Supt. Eugene Creedon, School Committee Vice Chairman Steve Durkin, Councillor Tom Fabrizio, Quincy College President Clayton Johnson, Bernice Mader, administrative assistant to Mayor James Sheets; City Solicitor Steve McGrath, Sheila McIntyre, representing College Courses, Inc. which help found and helps to finance the college; Charles Sweeney, former School Committee member and a member of the college's President Board of Trustees that serves in an advisory capacity and Thomas Walsh, president of the Quincy Education Association.

The Governance Committee hopes to make its final recommendations to Mayor Sheets and the City Council by April 1.

There may not be complete agreement among the committee members as to what to do and how to do it.

But we hope the final recommendations—whether they are unanimous or not—are given full consideration and, hopefully, implementation.

Quincy College is not a high school. It is a fast growing college and should be treated and run like one.

It should come out from under the wings of the School Committee and superintendent of schools and allowed to fly on its own.

It's not a kid anymore.

QUINCY WAS WELL represented at President Clinton's inaugural and at the various balls and other whirl of social activities in Washington.

The Quincy group included:

Mayor James Sheets, Senator Michael Morrissey, City Council President Charles Phelan, Councillors Bruce Ayers and Ted DeCristofaro, School Committee member Ron Mariano, Fr. Jack Ahern of St. Ann's Church and Bill O'Connell, Morrissey's campaign manager who worked with the inaugural committee.

Sheets got invited to a party at Senator Edward Kennedy's home. Ayers got a chance to see Kim Basinger in person at a restaurant.

Needs Help In Locating Robert F. Huson

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

I need the help of your newspaper to locate a resident of the Quincy general area who served with honor in World War II.

Specifically, I am trying to locate Robert F. Huson who fought for his country in Belgium and Germany during the "Battle of the Bulge" and beyond. He served in the U.S. Army, Battery "C" 924th Field Artillery Battalion, 99th Infantry Division.

Robert F. Huson's last known address is 234 Norfolk St., Wollaston, Massachusetts.

Anyone with any information pertaining to Mr. Huson can contact William "Frank" Kyser, 3226 Cawein Way, Louisville, KY. 40220-1934, phone (502) 458-5931.

Any help in locating this Massachusetts native will be deeply appreciated.

William F. Kyser
3226 Cawein Way
Louisville, KY 40220-1934

P.S. The Great State of Massachusetts should be very proud of her sons, like Robert, who served and fought with the 99th Infantry Division who made history in the "Battle of the Bulge." Also, all veterans, no matter what outfit, who fought in that ugly battle of 1944-45 should never have to worry about not going to heaven; they have already served their time in hell. Amen.

Pleased That Fountain Will Remain At Cemetery

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

I was pleased to note in The Quincy Sun, Nov. 25, that Mayor James Sheets has decided that the granite fountain will remain at the Wollaston Cemetery.

At the time when I came to Quincy in 1903, the fountain at Quincy Square performed a very useful service. There were no automobiles and the only public fountain for the horses was at Quincy Square. The design included one side for horses and the opposite side of the fountain for the public, with a cast iron cup chained to the basin. It never had a water spray. The location at the Wollaston Cemetery blends with the granite memorials by skilled granite cutters of the times gone by.

The sculpture will be moved to a new location not yet decided for the safety of the children. A good location would be at the entrance to the Pine Hill Cemetery from Willard Street, which would be a peaceful location. Quincy was once known as the Granite City. The entrance to the cemetery from Willard Street needs an up-to-date.

The sculpture is a product of granite from Ward 4 and will serve as a symbol for the granite quarries and the works of the past.

Third 'Welcome To Quincy' Sign Installed By Partnership

The Quincy Partnership has installed the third hand-crafted "Welcome To Quincy" sign near the President's Golf Course on West Squantum St. at the Quincy-Milton line.

The Partnership also has placed a new sign near the Cathay Pacific restaurant at the entrance to Quincy from the Neponset Bridge. The state had previously installed a similar sign at the rotary located on the Quincy side of the Fore River Bridge. Over the last several months, events have been held to help raise funds for the sign installations. The Partnership's goal is to raise a total of $15,000 and install nine more signs at the principal entrances to the city.

"The signs read, 'Welcome To Quincy, 1625' to mark the original settlement of what is now Quincy by Captain Richard Wollaston," said Thomas M. Galvin, member of The Quincy Partnership and a vice president at Bostor Gear in Quincy. "Hassan Sign Company of Cohasset has done a wonderful job hand-carving the signs into solid mahogany, using 23K gold leaf on the lettering. Everyone in Quincy can be proud to see these signs on display."

Installation has been coordinated by Quincy Department of Public Works crews, and as the frozen ground thaws the remaining signs will begin to appear.

The next Quincy Partnership fundraiser planned is a pre-Valentine's Day "We Love Quincy" dance, to be held Feb. 11 at The Atrium, Presidents Place, Quincy Center, from 6 to 9 p.m. A $25 donation per person includes music, food, and a cash bar. Tickets can be obtained from Maureen Rogers at the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, 479-1111.

THE THIRD "Welcome To Quincy" sign funded by the Quincy Partnership on West Squantum St. at the Quincy-Milton line. Shown here are Ed Keohane, chairman, Quincy Partnership; Tom Koch, executive secretary to Mayor James Sheets; and Tom Galvin, member of the Quincy Partnership.

Flood Relief Project Moving Ahead

Relief is in sight for many residents who have been troubled by flooding.

Public Works Commissioner David Colton and engineers from Weston & Sampson Engineering, Inc., presented plans to the City Council Monday for drainage improvement in the Montclair-Wollaston and Squantum-Houghs Neck areas.

Preliminary design work has been completed to correct flooding and drainage problems in sections of Wollaston and Montclair and work will begin in October and is scheduled for completion in October of 1994.

The project will focus on four major areas, Elmwood Ave. and Harvard St.; Brook and Belmont St. and Newport and Wilson Ave.'s; Farrington St. from Holbrook Road to Wilson Ave.; and Eddie and Hilda St.'s near Adams St.

Other areas which will also be addressed are Weston and Wayland St.'s; Marlboro St. between Elm and Waterston Ave.'s; Burgess St.; and Harriet Ave.

Work will include installation and/or replacement of additional drain pipes, larger pipes, pumping stations, tidegates and catch basins.

Television testing will also be done in some areas to search for pipe defects.

Estimated cost of the project is between $1.6 and $1.8 million.

In Squantum, a new seawall will be built along East Squantum St., a drainpipe will be installed to alleviate flooding between houses on Heath and Deerfield St.'s, and work will be done to prevent flooding around Essex St. and other areas.

One of two measures will be taken around Essex St. A natural berm will be built up near the shoreline at the edge of the marsh or a dike will be constructed across the marsh between Landsdowne and Essex St.'s. A tidegate will also be installed in conjunction with the dike.

If the dike is built, the marsh area involved would be removed and restored at the Rock Island marsh in Houghs Neck. The berm project would cost an estimated $350,000 while the dike project is estimated at $250,000.

Cost of the seawall is estimated at $150,000.

The permitting process for the dike project could take up to a year.

Mayor James Sheets is expected to put together a bond proposal for the work before the end of the winter.

Quincy's Yesterdays

Mayor Della Chiesa Narrowly Escapes Helicopter Crash

Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa and helicopter pilot Lt. Cmdr. Gerald Achin narrowly escaped a crash when their aircraft hit an air pocket while taking off from the roof of the new Supreme Market in Parkingway.

They had just delivered the first load of milk from Charlestown to the store but the television cameras had missed the original landing so they were asked to take off and land again.

The helicopter was a few feet off the roof when it dropped down suddenly, missing wires and trees by a few feet near the Granite St. entrance and narrowly missing the Granite Trust Building en route up.

"For a few minutes I thought we were goners," said Della Chiesa. "The pilot's face was white and mine was probably whiter. I don't know how we escaped. That pilot sure knows his business."

$52 MILLION CONTRACT

The U.S. Navy awarded a $52,429,000 contract to the Fore River Shipyard for construction of three frigates but General Manager Sam Wakeman said it will not mean an increase in the 2,500-man work force.

However, he added, there will be no further layoffs from the drafting room staff, which had lost some 100 jobs in the past four months, since it will take a year to prepare drawings and working plans.

PROM SITE QUESTIONED

The School Committee took under advisement a request by the senior class at Quincy High School to hold its prom at Hatherly Country Club in Scituate instead of the Quincy Masonic Temple. "The general atmosphere in the temple isn't ideal for an informal affair of 400 boys and girls of high school age," said Carl Scrivener, spokesman for the Prom Committee.

"We have hesitated to see the prom held outside Quincy at a distance of 12 miles," said School Supt. Dr. Paul Gossard.

NO END TO SERVICE

Edmund J. More, general counsel for the New Haven Railroad, said there are no plans to discontinue passenger service on the Old Colony Division despite $3.8 million in losses since 1947.

Petition Drive Continues For Sewer-Water Relief

City Councillor Peter Kolson has renewed his call for residents to protest skyrocketing sewer-water bills.

Residents are urged to write letters to President William Clinton and members of Congress asking them for rate relief by restoring the federal Clean Water Act which would help fund the Boston Harbor cleanup and pay 70 percent of residents sewer-water bills.

Kolson said he has received many letters, all of which have the same theme, "Please help, I can't afford it."

He has also begun a petition drive and collected nearly 700 signatures in just one day. Kolson has distributed petitions to other City Councillors and posting them in businesses and other locations around the city.

"It's going well. People can't wait to sign them," he said. "I'd like to collect a couple of thousand signatures."

Kolson will present the letters and signatures to Mayor James Sheets next week and will hand deliver them to Congressman Gerry Studds' Quincy Center office.

Letters may be sent to: City Council Office, City Hall, 1305 Hancock St., Quincy, 02169.

Marie's Kitchen

By MARIE J. D'OLIMPIO

John's Stuffed Apricots

It seems that no matter where I am or what I am doing, the conversation always turns to food.

While sitting around the breakfast table Sunday, my brother John (the ultimate cook) was talking about a dinner party he had recently and how he devised a new way to serve stuffing. Instead of serving the usual applesauce with the roast pork that his wife Anita had cooked, he served the stuffing inside an apricot for a more tasteful and prettier presentation.

JOHN'S STUFF APRICOTS

1 stalk of celery (cut up fine)
1 tablespoon chopped onion a couple of tablespoons of cooking sherry

1 teaspoon Bell's seasoning
1 cup of stuffing mix (soaked) half cup to one cup of water 1 jar of apricots (or canned) oil or margarine for the saute salt and pepper (if desired)

In hot oil or margarine, saute the celery and onion. Add the wine, water and soaked stuffing mix and cook until blended. Then add the rest of the ingredients (except the apricots) and cook for a couple of more minutes.

After it has cooled for a few minutes, fill half the apricot with the stuffing and then cover with another apricot half. It can be used with any kind of meat.

This recipe serves eight persons.

Lions Club Offering Wilfred Nolan Scholarship

The Quincy Lions Club is accepting applications from high school seniors for the Wilfred A. Nolan Scholarship.

The scholarship will be awarded either in a single amount of $1,000 or multiple amounts totaling $1,000.

The Lions Club Scholarship Committee will determine the recipient based on the following criteria:

•Active community interest and a demonstrated desire to assist others, particularly the disadvantaged.

•Academic ability. Visually impaired and/or learning disabled students will be shown special consideration.

•A letter written by the student expressing reasons for being considered for the scholarship.

Letters and other information should be submitted by March 1 to George Smith, Jr., Scholarship Chairman, Quincy Lions Club, 16 Anderson Road, Wollaston, 02170.

Correction

A step was inadvertently left out in the "Dell's Magic Breakfast" recipe in Marie D'Olimpio's "Marie's Kitchen" column in last week's edition of The Quincy Sun.

Those following the recipe should note that the line, "Beat the eggs and set aside," should be changed to "Beat the eggs, add 1 1/2 cups of milk, and set aside."

SNUG HARBOR SCHOOL donated wreaths to the Salvation Army. Students made the wreaths and brought in change which was applied to the wreaths. A total of $180 was donated. ### Our Policy On Engagement Photographs And Wedding Announcements

The Quincy Sun will continue to publish photographs with engagement announcements as it always has.

The Sun will also continue to use in wedding announcements the names of all members of the wedding party including maid of honor, best man, parents, bridesmaids, ushers, flower girls and ringbearers, etc.

We invite engaged couples to submit their photos with their announcements and when submitting their wedding photo to include a complete listing of the wedding party.

Black and white photos are preferred. The Sun can convert most color photos to black and white for publication but the photo loses some clarity in the process.

We suggest that when you have your engagement photo taken, you request the studio to send a copy to The Sun with the reminder that The Sun is continuing its policy of publishing engagement photos.

The Sun also publishes articles and photos of wedding anniversaries beginning with the 25th anniversary.

And, as in the past, there is no charge.

Crime Watch

By ROBERT HANNA
Crime Prevention Officer
Quincy Police Department

Crime Prevention Tips For Senior Citizens

Help make your community a safer place to live and don't let fear of crime restrict your activities. Being alert to your surroundings, installing good locks on doors and windows, and taking common-sense precautions while inside and outside your home can reduce opportunities for crime.

To give yourself that extra margin of security:
•Use Direct Deposit for pension and Social Security checks.

•Don't display large amounts of cash in public.
•Be wary of talkative strangers when the conversation turns to money. Read every news paper report on con games and be ready to say no if someone comes to your with a get-rich scheme.

•Travel with friends when you leave home to go shopping, to the bank, or doctor.

•Get to know your neighbors and keep their phone numbers handy for emergencies.

•Work out a "buddy" system with a friend to check on each other's welfare daily.

•If you're alone, don't advertise it. Use only your first initial in phone books, directories and apartment lobbies.

•If you must carry a purse, hold it close to your body. Don't leave your wallet or purse on a counter or in a shopping cart unattended.

•If you are threatened by physical force, don't resist. Remain calm and observe the assailant so you can give an accurate description to the police.

•Organize or join a Neighborhood Watch program or a Window Watch program to keep an eye out for unusual activity in your neighborhood or complex. A neighborhood where people are active and involved is always a safer, better place to live.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

SCOTT DEWARE

Abraham Lincoln once said that people are about as happy in this world as they make up their minds to be. Plant that seed in your mind and give it every opportunity to grow and bear fruit.

It is only human to feel discouraged at times, but you should never think of giving up - in many cases the low moment is the beginning of better things.

Here are a few rules for getting out of a depressed state of mind: Never make an important decision when you are mentally low ebb. Decide upon policies when you are in normal state of mind, never when you are feeling low.

Suggest to yourself that a depressed state of mind is a temporary matter. Things will look different a few hours hence.

Make sure your trouble is not physical. A badly digested meal, or several hours lost sleep the night before, may turn a bright world into a place of gloom...

Because you have occasional spells of despondency, don't despair. The sun has a sinking spell every night, but it rises again all right the next morning...

Hockey

Quincy North Win Long-Time Coming

By TOM SULLIVAN

Whether or not the Quincy hockey team qualifies for the state tournament for the first time in more than 10 years, the Presidents achieved one of their objectives last week when they defeated North Quincy for the first time in five years, 6-4.

However, last Saturday was a loser for both teams as Quincy lost to undefeated Old Colony League leader Weymouth, 7-2, and North was defeated by Falmouth, 3-1.

Following these games Quincy's record was 7-4-2 (4-3-1 in the league) and North dropped to 6-4-1 (3-3-1 in the league).

The Presidents played Bridgewater-Raynham last night (Wednesday), will host Plymouth Saturday night at 7:50 at the Quincy Youth Arena and next Wednesday night will be home to Falmouth at 7:50.

The Raiders played Barnstable last night (Wednesday), will play Silver Lake Saturday night at 6:40 at the Hobomock Rink in Pembroke and will be at Plymouth next Wednesday night.

Sophomore David Cooper led Quincy over North Quincy with a hat trick and an assist. Jeff Craig, tied for the league scoring lead with 28 points, had two goals and an assist and Sean McArdle had the other goal. Jamie Schatzl had two assists and Scott MacPherson and Mark Gilmore one each.

For North Quincy, Joe Carinci, Lee Hughes, Jim Sapienza and Andrew Vermette had the goals and Dave Pacino, A.J. Carthas, Bob Flannery and Brendan O'Brien had assists.

The teams were tied at 1-1 after one period with Cooper scoring first and Hughes tying it up.

"It was an even-Steven type of period," said Quincy coach Bob Sylvia. "There weren't many shots because I think it was a feeling out period for both teams. But this finished the way a Quincy-North game should."

The game was a typical Quincy-North contest with a lot of hard but clean hitting as the officials let the teams play with few penalties being called.

Quincy had a 13-5 edge in shots but it was North that took a 2-1 lead in the second period when Carinci converted Carthas' pass and beat Quincy sophomore goalie Mark Smith.

McArdle soon tied it with MacPherson assisting and, with time running down, Quincy took command with two goals in 51 seconds. Schatzl fed Cooper for his second goal and Craig scored with Schatzl and Cooper assisting.

In the final period Quincy extended its lead to 5-2 when Craig scored his second goal. Sapienza scored with less than six minutes left and Vermette moved the Raiders to within one with a power play goal.

With 22 seconds left Cooper scored into an empty net to complete his hat trick.

In Saturday's loss to Weymouth (9-0-1) Quincy started well and trailed only 3-2 after one period but was blanked the rest of the way while the Wildcats added two goals in the second period and two more in the final session.

"We had a good start but we just couldn't keep up with them," Sylvia said. "They have an excellent team and were too big and fast for us."

Steve Provost scored Quincy's first goal with McArdle assisting and Schatzl scored the second, his 26th point (tied for third in the league) with Gilmore getting the assist.

"It wasn't one of our better games, but the boys kept battling all the way," Sylvia said.

Mike DesRoche scored North Quincy's lone goal against Falmouth, his 26th point (tied for third in the league) with John Gladu and Brian Fitzgerald assisting.

A bright spot for the Raiders was the performance of sophomore Mike Manganaro in his first start in goal.

"Mike did an excellent job for us and couldn't be faulted for Falmouth's goals," North coach Tom Benson said. "He had several tough saves."

LEE ANN RYAN of Squantum "high fives" her team captain, former Pittsburgh Steeler Rocky Blier, at the Jim Beam Basic Dream Team game held recently in New Orleans. Ryan was one of 12 winners selected in the contest which allowed football fans the opportunity to join former pros on the field. Ryan's team won, 26-24.

Swimming

North Defeats Taunton

Roche and Mike Ploof won and Jim Flaherty won the 200 and 500 freestyles.

Alan Morse won the diving, Ploof won the 100 butterfly and Roche won the 100 breaststroke.

North lost to Milford, 98-97, in a meet not decided until the final event.

Barry Canavan won the 200 individual medley, Ploof won the 100 backstroke, Flaherty won the 200 freestyle, and Morse won the diving.

The 200 freestyle relay team of Ploof, Roche, Canavan and Delorey also won.

INFLATED EXPECTATIONS

Where automobiles are concerned, there seems to be one kind of inflation with which car buyers can live—the inflation of an air bag.

This is one safety feature that the car buying public seems to have accepted quite readily. According to many, this type of passive restraint system has the advantage of being out of sight and out of mind (until it is needed), as well as being effective, it must be pointed out, however, that to be truly effective, air bags should be used in combination with buckled lap/shoulder belts.

This buckled-in strategy owes itself to the fact that air bags are most effective in head-on collisions, but offer very limited protection from side impacts or rollovers. By the 1995 model year, 90 percent of new cars are expected to have driver and passenger-side air bags.

HNT. According to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, air bags will save an estimated 2,400 lives between 1990 and 1996.

The technicians at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO will do their part in making sure every system in your car is properly maintained. Here at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree, 843-1550, we look forward to meeting you and giving you the same level of personal attention we give our own. "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer." Sunoco and most major credit cards honored. Open Mon-Fri, 6 am-9 pm, Sat, 7 am-9 pm, Sun, 9 am-5 pm.

Hancock Lot Retail Project Drawing Interest

Essentially, the project calls for 110,000-square feet of new retail space in the parking area located behind Hancock St. and across from the Courthouse.

He has said he hopes the new complex would attract several well-known major retailers, including perhaps Toys-R-Us, the nation's leading toy seller. To make room for the new complex, the mayor said the project may involve razing stores along Cottage Ave. and Hancock St. which abut the parking area.

Demolishing any buildings would have to be part of the accepted bid. If that happens, Sheets said the city would work with owners in the affected buildings and help them relocate, perhaps into the new complex.

Because of widespread local media coverage on the project, Sheets said the bid deadline was extended to Feb. 16 from Jan. 25. "We began to get more inquiries and people were asking for more extensive information. It (the bid extension deadline) was simply done to get a higher number of quality responses," the mayor said.

After bids are accepted Feb. 16, Sheets will appoint a committee to examine the RFPs. Among those who will review the bids are Bernice Mader, the mayor's administrative assistant; Public Works Commissioner David Colton; Traffic Engineer Jack Gillon, Meade and Charles D'Aprix, the executive director of Quincy 2000, the public-private partnership charged with revitalizing the downtown.

After the bids are received, the committee will compile a "short-list" of viable developers and interviews will then take place, perhaps within a month to six weeks, depending on the number of RFPs. Once that is complete, the committee will make a recommendation to Sheets.

"We could make a recommendation to Mayor Sheets within a month. It's a priority and we will move on it as a top priority to get a recommendation to the mayor," Meade said.

After a recommendation is made, the mayor will make a decision on which bid to accept. Among the factors in the bid selection will be cost, size of the project, and specifics proposed by the developer, he said.

The mayor also said the city has two main options before the project can begin: whether to sell the city-owned lot to the developer or lease the property. Either arrangement would need the approval of the City Council.

Sheets said he hopes to the design work on the project is completed by the end of the summer. He eyes a construction startup of fall or next spring.

"It's going to be fast-tracked. I'd like to have a design by the end of the summer then begin doing things. I'd like to see a plan that includes everything."

Officials have also pledged their cooperation with city residents and business owners in the vicinity of the project area, if and when construction begins.

"We would want to work with them. They will be involved," Meade said.

Councillors pledged that they would help in whatever way they could so that employees would not lose their jobs and that residents would not be disrupted.

"This is causing tremendous anxiety among residents and employees," said Councillor-at-Large Patricia Toland.

Employees have taken pay cuts in the past several years to help keep the 32-year-old nursing home operating.

the council's Beautification Committee.

"Beautification of the city has always been an ongoing interest of mine. I love what Mayor Sheets has done (Cleaner, Greener program) and what Mayor McCauley did with the Adopt-an-Island program," Toland said.

Mayor James Sheets praised Toland, a former council colleague, for her dedication and service to the city. Sheets served with her as councillor of Ward 4 before being elected mayor in 1989.

"Pat has always been sensitive to education and things of beauty in our city, whether she was serving on the school committee, working with her on the council or working with her as mayor.

"She has embodied the spirit of what makes Quincy great. She will be missed as an elected public official."

Toland has also been praised for her work as chairman of the council's Finance Committee. Council President Charles Phelan announced that he will appoint vice-chairman Timothy Cahill as new chairman.

Toland said the poor economy in recent years has made some aspects of her council job unpleasant.

"It's very hard every time you vote on the tax rate... We've had to put a sewer-water tax on people and nobody enjoys doing that," she said. "It's difficult for people and we realize that. When you're hitting people in the pocketbook... that's hard. But bills have to be paid and we have to make the tough votes sometimes."

There has been much speculation on who the City Council might choose to succeed Toland. However, the seat may be left open.

Both Councillors Peter Kolson and Cahill agreed that the seat may be left open until the election in November. Both men said it is not as important to fill an at-large seat as it is a ward seat.

"We may leave it open. If we were to vote, as of now I'd vote for the fourth runner up (from the last election)," Cahill said.

"If it were a ward seat you would have to find it," Kolson said. "But an at-large seat, that's a different story."

Former mayor and councillor-at-large Joseph LaRaia finished fourth in the last election.

Kolson said he understands LaRaia has called all the city councillors to express his interest in the seat. Kolson said others interested are Ron Iacobucci and Denis Tardo, both unsuccessful candidates in the past.

4 New Classrooms At Bernazzani In Fall

By STEVE KAVANAGH

If all goes according to plan, students at the Bernazzani School will be welcomed back next September to a building with four new classrooms.

Superintendent of Schools Eugene Creedon updated the City Council on plans for the school's addition and on construction plans for the Early Childhood Center at the site of the former Lincoln School. About 25 parents attended Monday's meeting.

Thomas Koch, executive secretary to Mayor James Sheets, said the mayor should have a bond proposal ready within the next four weeks to fund the projects.

Creedon said an architect has already been selected. He said the addition at the overcrowded Bernazzani School will be brick and will be air conditioned so that it may be used during the summer.

"What if catastrophe strikes. Obviously we're cutting it very close," said Councillor-at-Large Timothy Cahill, also a parent of Bernazzani students. "We need something we can point to in September."

If the project is delayed or halted, Creedon said contingency plans will be put in effect. Whether or not students are moved to another school will depend on the length of the delay and other circumstances, he said.

"We will work with parents closely and ask what they want," Creedon said.

Creedon said the addition to the former Furnace Brook School is long overdue.

"The Bernazzani was inadequate since the day it was built," he said.

Creedon said the Early Childhood Center will likely not be ready for the opening of school in September, but if work goes according to plan it will be open by the fall.

Because it is construction of a completely new building it will take longer, Creedon said.

"But there are no obstructions at the site so there should be good progress in construction," he said.

The new school will feature classroom space, a multi-purpose room (gym, auditorium, etc.), a "Discovery Room" where children experience "hands-on" learning, a community room for local groups, and administrative, storage and custodial space.

The school yard will include parking for 35 cars and a playground geared toward young children.

The school will be for children ages pre-school through first grade.

"We hope to use the Early Childhood Center year round," Creedon said.

The students who attend the ECC will not be inconvenienced if the building is not ready for the start of school, Creedon said. Those students would simply remain at the locations where their particular classes are held now.

Meeting Feb. 11 11 at 7:30 p.m. at Quincy High School.

Meetings are open to the public.

Would Bring Rates In Line With Cost Of Living Sheets, MWRA Devise Plan For Cutting Sewer Rates

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

A four-pronged "strategy" plan intended to dramatically reduce rising sewer rates by reducing MWRA spending and increasing federal and state revenue for the multi-billion dollar Boston Harbor cleanup has been devised by Mayor James Sheets and Authority Director Doug MacDonald.

Sheets said he and MacDonald developed the "rate relief strategy" in an effort to stop the rising sewer rates and bring them more in line with the cost of living. According to figures furnished by the MWRA, Boston can claim the dubious distinction of having the country's highest sewer rates.

In fact, the average sewer bill for a family of four in Boston, which like Quincy is in the MWRA district, has soared to $587 last year from $180 in 1986, the first full year of the $7 billion cleanup.

Eight years ago, Boston ranked 14th in water and sewer costs, behind Honolulu and ahead of Milwaukee. Houston, which had the highest sewer bills in 1986, has the second highest rates today.

The MWRA services 2.5 million customers.

Without relief, the MWRA projects sewer rates will climb 24.3 percent or $140 this year, raising the bill to $727 for an average four-person family. Officials also project a 31.7 percent hike for 1995 which would add $225, bringing the total bill to $952.

According to the figures, ratepayers in the 44 communities receiving MWRA sewer service have funded 92 percent of the cleanup's cost to date while the federal and state government have pitched in just eight percent. To illustrate the unfair local burden to fund the cleanup, officials compared that funding formula to the Central Artery project which has an 87 percent federal and 13 percent state split.

There are four parts to the strategy plan. They are:

- Manage MWRA spending
- Increase Federal Funding for Clean Water Act and Safe Drinking Water Act Mandates.
- Obtain state debt service assistance.

Board Seeks Ordinance On Ad Book Solicitations

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The Quincy License Board is planning to contact City Solicitor Stephen McGrath about the possibility of establishing a new ordinance to give the city more control over ad book solicitations.

The matter was discussed at Tuesday's board meeting because of Fire Chief Thomas Gorman's growing concern over the matter.

"People are getting burned by these bogus type of operations," said Gorman. "These outfits overpressure people, then they promise the world and they don't deliver."

Police Capt. Frederick Laracy, sitting in for Police Chief Francis Mullen, said most of the ad book solicitations are done "via the phone" by individuals who misrepresent themselves by saying they are from a certain organization or charity.

"I've received a lot of calls," said Laracy. "People have been complaining about this for a long time now."

Laracy added that while some organizations, such as Quincy Mutual Aid and the Quincy Patrolmen's Union have run legitimate ad book campaigns, many others are not so honest.

"This should be referred to the city solicitor," he said. "I'd like to see an ordinance drawn up that would give us some sort of control over these callers, so that we can get their names and enough information to do a background check--a reference-type thing."

The board agreed that McGrath would be contacted on the matter.

Attempts to reach McGrath Tuesday afternoon by phone were unsuccessful.

DeCristofaro Urges Safety Fence At Fore River Bridge

Ward 2 Councillor Theodore DeCristofaro has written to Massachusetts Department of Public Works Commissioner James Kerasiotes regarding the installation of a safety fence on the Fore River Bridge.

DeCristofaro's concern stems from two recent suicide attempts by individuals who jumped from the bridge, one of which resulted in a fatality, according to the letter DeCristofaro sent Tuesday to Kerasiotes.

"In the interest of public safety, I am asking your kind assistance in having your department investigate the installation of a safety fence to prevent this type of situation as this has happened at various times in the past," the letter stated. "Also, young people seem to find it a challenge to jump from the bridge during the summer months."

An 84-year-old Quincy man died in late December after jumping from the bridge. A similar such attempt by a second resident was unsuccessful.

Fabrizio Seeks Federal Input On West Quincy Tower

Ward 4 City Councillor Thomas Fabrizio said he will ask federal officials to investigate issues concerning the controversial 700-ft. tower which was recently erected in West Quincy.

Fabrizio introduced a resolve to the City Council Monday asking the Council to petition Congressman Gerry Studds and Senators John Kerry and Edward Kennedy to answer neighborhood concerns about the height of the tower.

Neighbors are upset about the possible impact of the telecommunications tower on their health and local property values.

Fabrizio said the Federal Aviation Administration has authority over air traffic related to Logan Airport and the Federal Communications Commission governs communication issues.

The owner of the tower, Frank DiRico of Quincy, said he plans to put antennas and microwave dishes on the tower.

The Conservation Commission made an on-site inspection of the tower Saturday but found no violations.

Fabrizio said DiRico will need permission from the state before he can begin attaching communications equipment to the tower.

Garden Cafe Plans 1,800 S.F. Expansion

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The Quincy License Board Tuesday continued for one week a request from The Garden Cafe, 653 Southern Artery, for permission to expand its premises from 4,000 to 5,800 square feet.

Atty. Howard Wayne told the board the expansion would mean new restrooms, an extension of the existing kitchen, and the addition of "about 30" seats in the restaurant, which currently seats 120.

Wayne added that since restaurant president Donna Bucccheri and her family first took over the former Roman Gardens in May 1992, additions to the menu and other changes have been made to create "a really nice family restaurant."

"The restaurant has been well-operated in hard economic times," said Wayne.

City Clerk Joseph Shea said Ward 2 Councillor Theodore DeCristofaro, who was unable to attend the meeting, had "one or two questions" on the available parking at the site but was otherwise "quite positive" about the expansion.

Police Capt. Frederick Laracy, sitting in for Police Chief Francis Mullen, also questioned the parking procedures at the restaurant, saying that the parking signs at the restaurant should be made larger so that it is clear to patrons exactly where they can park their cars.

Shea noted that because of the board's new rule which requires all petitions having to do with liquor to be reviewed twice, the matter would have to be continued for one week.

Building Inspector Matthias Mulvey said both he and DeCristofaro would meet with Wayne to discuss the parking and signage at the restaurant before the board's next meeting.

City To Repair Seawalls In Merrymount, Adams Shore

Waterfront residents in the Narragansett Road area are hoping that another bad storm does not occur while they wait for the seawall to be repaired along the Merrymount shore.

Neighborhood homes were flooded again during December's storm just a little more than a year after being hit by the October 1991 "no-name" storm and Hurricane Bob in August 1991.

DPW Commissioner David Colton has submitted a $373,000 proposal to begin repairing the seawalls along Narragansett Road; Shelton Road in Adams Shore and Shore Avenue in Merrymount.

Colton said the city is eligible to be reimbursed about $300,000 including 75 percent from the Federal Emergency Management Agency and 12-1/2 percent from the state of Massachusetts. However, the federal assistance is not guaranteed.

The height of the seawall at Narragansett will be raised from 11-1/2 feet to 13 feet, Colton said. He also said the present granite block wall would be replaced by a concrete wall. The cost would be $25,000.

Work on the project could not start until March at the earliest. The construction and repairs are expected to take three months to complete. The City Council is expected to approve the project at its Feb. 16 meeting.

If the city receives the maximum reimbursement the total cost to the city will be $72,852. This amount includes $5,000 to hire a research consultant.

Support Solid For Toland As Asst. Clerk

By STEVE KAVANAGH

Support remains solid for the appointment of former City Councillor Patricia Toland following a heated discussion at Monday's Council meeting concerning the vacant assistant city clerk job.

City Clerk Joseph Shea is expected to nominate Toland for the job at the March 1 City Council meeting.

A proposal by Councillor-at-Large Michael Cheney to make the assistant clerk's job a part-time position died when no other councillor would second the motion.

Cheney then said it could be illegal for the Council to vote on the appointment of Toland to the job.

He said Toland violated a State Ethics Commission ruling by asking councillors to consider her for the assistant clerk job while she was still a City Councillor.

The Ethics Commission prohibits lobbying or informal lobbying of elected officials or use of position for personal gain.

However, City Solicitor Steve McGrath said the Ethics rule concerning informal lobbying "is in the context as a councillor in a meeting" and does not apply to Toland.

McGrath said he has asked for and received a specific opinion in regard to Toland seeking the job.

"The report basically states that Councillor Toland can't be nominated for the job until she has been out of office 30 days and that while in office she can have no participation on related issues," McGrath said.

He noted that Toland abstained last fall from a vote promoting Shea from assistant clerk to clerk.

"I don't think making her candidacy (for the job) known is a use of her position," McGrath added.

But Cheney said the way he interprets the rule Toland is in violation.

"Did she ask you (Councillors) for a vote? Yes. This says it's illegal," Cheney said.

The Council voted to have McGrath draft an opinion on whether the Council may legally vote on appointing Toland.

"Pat Toland has done nothing illegal, immoral or inappropriate. We shouldn't be dragging her name through the mud or hold her to a different standard," said Councillor-at-Large Timothy Cahill.

"Do we need the position? The position is useful and Toland is qualified," Cahill said. "I don't need a ruling from the Ethics Commission to tell me what I'm doing is right."

"We are making a mountain out of a molehill and it's political," Cahill said.

Cheney said he wanted to abolish or reduce the position last year before the names of potential candidates were involved.

"Before a name is thrown out there, let's discuss it. I said that time and time again," Cheney said.

"What's happened now is exactly what I didn't want to happen... a name has emerged. And it's a colleague.

"It's not politically in my favor to be doing this... it's a matter of principle," Cheney said.

"The job has been made much easier through automation (computerization) and we have also recodified city ordinances making the clerk's job much easier," Cheney said.

The assistant clerk's salary pays more than $31,000 and Cheney said benefits make it worth about $39,000.

"We have a responsibility to look at every position (to possibly cut)," Cheney said.

"I think the job is needed," said Ward 3 Councillor Larry Chretien. "I've spoken to the clerk in detail about the job."

Chretien said there was no call for cutting the assistant clerk's job when Shea was elected by a 9-0 vote in March 1991.

"When we voted for Joe Shea, 9-0, we decided the position was necessary," Chretien said.

He added that it would be unfair to abolish or reduce the job without Shea having a chance to justify the position.

Ward 4 Councillor Thomas Fabrizio agreed.

"Mr. Shea should have the opportunity to discuss the job as any other department head does," Fabrizio said.

Toland Council Seat To Be Filled March 1

City Councillors agreed Monday to fill Patricia Toland's vacant at-large seat during the March 1 Council meeting.

Toland resigned Jan. 26 following more than 11 years on the Council.

Former Mayor and City Councillor Joseph LaRaia is considered by some councillors to be the leading candidate for the job. LaRaia was runnerup, finishing fourth, in the 1991 Councillor-at-Large race. He also lost a bid for mayor in the 1989 primary and lost a close election to Francis McCauley in the 1987 mayoral race.

The seat will be up for grabs this fall when Quincy voters go to the polls. Races for all City Council seats and for mayor are scheduled.

If's, And's, And But's

At this early stage, Election Year '93 is marked with a number of political if's and but's that could make it either an interesting or hum-drum one.

There's quite a few potential candidates in the wings waiting for things to get sorted out before deciding whether or not to hit the campaign trail this year.

One big if, of course, is Councillor Tim Cahill. If he decides to challenge Mayor James Sheets, that will have a ripple effect opening up both council at-large and ward races.

Cahill is still giving it serious thought and will make his decision this month. If he should run for mayor he would vacate his council at-large seat.

That would make two open at-large seats, as Patricia Toland has resigned to seek the assistant city clerk's post.

Even if the council fills the Toland vacancy, it technically will still be an open seat come election time.

Whoever is named will complete the Toland term but then would have to run for the seat in the fall election without an incumbent status to keep it. Of course, occupying a seat is an advantage in an election, incumbent or not.

Former Mayor-Councillor Joseph LaRaia appears to have enough votes in the council to succeed Toland mainly because he was runner-up in the last election.

LaRAIA

City Council President Charles Phelan reportedly has just about decided to run at-large this year regardless of what Cahill decides.

Phelan plans to support LaRaia's appointment to the Toland seat. But if LaRaia gets it and decides to run in the fall to keep it, he apparently is going to find himself up against Phelan who would be a strong contender.

Other potential at-large candidates include:

Ward 3 Councillor Larry Chretien and Ward 4 Councillor Tom Fabrizio, former School Committee-woman Mary Collins, past candidate George Miller, businessman Anthony Agnitti, Charles McIntyre, son of the late Mayor-Senator James McIntyre and Richard Barry, son of the late former Councillor Richard Barry.

If there are two open at-large seats, you might see most of these potential candidates making a run.

If there is only one seat open, that would thin out the field.

If there are two open at-large seats and both Chretien and Fabrizio run, it would mean three open ward seats if Phelan vacates the Ward 5 seat to run at-large.

Potential Ward 5 contenders include Michelle Lydon, daughter of former Councillor Jack Lydon; Michael Cronin, Sean Barry, Kevin Burke and Lynne Houghton, Wollaston realtor.

Potential Ward 3 candidates include Howard MacKay, who has run before, restaurateur Mike McFarland, and Brian Mahoney, administrative assistant in Dist. Atty. William Delahunt's office.

No speculation, at this point, about potential candidates in Wards 1, 2, 4, and 6.

Stay tuned.

UNCLE SAM ROUNSEVILLE, back from the President Clinton inaugural says he was amazed at the number of Quincy people he bumped into.

Public Demand Of CTB Treaty 'Vital'

Editor, The Quincy Sun:
Most Americans are unaware that for the first time in years, the United States is not testing nuclear weapons.

In October of 1992 President Bush signed a law that included a nine month moratorium on nuclear weapons testing known as the Comprehensive Test Ban (CTB) Treaty. We have an unprecedented opportunity to declare a permanent ban for all time.

The cold war is over. We recently signed the START treaty to destroy nuclear weapons and a treaty to ban chemical weapons. The major threat today is the sale and proliferation of nuclear weapons and its technology to unstable non-nuclear countries. Without our moratorium Russia would have resumed its testing program. France independently ceased testing in April 1992. At the present time no country is testing its weapons.

In 1968, as a response to the threat of other countries acquiring the means to develop nuclear bombs the non-proliferation treaty was signed by over 100 countries in the United Nations. This treaty is coming up for renewal in 1995. Its ratification is dependent of the signing of a Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty.

The critical importance of this effort has been highlighted by the International Physicians for the Prevention of Nuclear War (IPPNW). They have repeatedly called attention to the threat of nuclear weapons production, particularly the environmental and health hazards.

As social workers dealing with societal issues such as homelessness, child abuse and lack of necessary support services we are appalled by the cost of each nuclear explosion ranging from $20 million to $70 million. The operating budget for one nuclear weapons lab is $1 billion.

President Clinton has expressed his interest in promoting the CTB. It was massive public pressure that produced the Partial Test Ban Treaty of 1963. It is vital that the public now demand a Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty.

YOUR RISK OF HAVING A STROKE

More than half a million people a year suffer a stroke in the United States. Are you a prime candidate to join their ranks? Risk factors include high blood pressure, heart disease, diabetes, family history, and being over age 65. Among the personal habits that magnify those risk factors are alcohol or cocaine abuse, smoking, a sedentary lifestyle, and a diet high in fat and cholesterol. Prompt medical attention is essential to recovery of a stroke. Seek help fast if you notice any of these warning signs: sudden weakness or numbness of the face, arm or leg on one side; difficulty speaking or understanding speech; dimness or loss of vision; or sudden memory loss or confusion. P.S. Stroke is the third leading cause of death among Americans, after heart attacks and cancer.

Although none of us can exert absolute control over our health, lifestyle changes we all can make, such as eating more healthfully, exercising regularly, and quitting smoking today, can really make a difference. # Sheets, MWRA Devise Plan For Cutting Sewer Rates

*Fund a new aqueduct with state assistance.

To manage MWRA spending, Sheets said MacDonald has proposed to slash the cleanup budget from $7 billion to $5.7 billion over the next six years.

The Advisory Board is currently conducting a thorough independent review of both the MWRA's current expense budget and three-year Capital Improvement Program. The proposed cleanup budget is already $446 million less than the last three-year spending plan, Sheets noted.

To increase federal funding for Clean Water Act and Safe Drinking Water Act Mandates, Sheets said $200 million in grant funding will be targeted for the cleanup project in the FY94 budget appropriation process. The officials also said there is a need for long-term financing for clean water projects through new Clean Water and Safe Drinking Water Act grant programs, and at least one third of any new economic stimulus package for water infrastructure projects.

Sheets met with Sen. Ted Kennedy Monday to discuss this option which the mayor called the "immediate strategy" because President Clinton is expected to submit the federal government's FY94 budget to Congress by the end of the month.

Currently, the federal government kicks in $100 million for the cleanup. Officials want to see that amount doubled this year to fund additional capital projects beginning in 1996, 1997 and 1998. The additional money, if approved this year, would not kick in until 1995, Sheets noted.

The key to immediate rate relief, Sheets and MacDonald say, is state debt service assistance which could be applied directly toward offsetting the ratepayers' costs of capital borrowing for water and sewer projects.

Legislation has been filed for the 1993 session to provide the funding for MWRA projects and others throughout the state. The MWRA wants the state to provide $25 million in FY94 which begins July 1, $30 million in FY95, and $40 million in FY96.

Sheets said a $25 million state appropriation this year, coupled with a cut in MWRA spending, could reduce this year's projected rate hike from 24.3 percent to 5 to 9 percent.

Ideally, the mayor said he would want rates to "flatten out" and not be subject to any increases. Realistically, he said he believes the best scenario would be if sewer bills climbed the same rate as inflation or cost of living adjustment.

"I think we would hope to have the rates go up only at the cost of living. Our realistic goal is to have the rates not exceed the normal cost of living adjustment. Ideally, we would like the rates to be lower than that if possible, but nothing more than three or four percent.

"Cost of living is the goal."

To do that, Sheets said the MWRA Advisory Board and Board of Directors would have to cut operations and capital outlay even more than the Authority is presently planning. The state would also have to agree to annual appropriations for debt service which Sheets said could be biggest obstacle.

"We have no illusions about the battle. The effort at the federal level is already underway and the state piece is going to require organization across the district including selectmen, councillors and mayors."

In the past, efforts to assist ratepayers at the state level have been foiled by non-MWRA district legislators. The mayor said any effort to acquire state funding for the cleanup project must include support from legislators outside the district.

And, even if the House and Senate approve an appropriation, the measure could be vetoed by Gov. Weld. Thus, the key may be how many non-district legislators support the funding. A gubernatorial veto would need a two-thirds vote in the House and Senate to be overridden.

Sheets, who calls himself the "catalyst" in the state-wide organization effort, said the strategy has already been endorsed by some instrumental federal and state officials, including Sen. Kennedy, Congressmen Barney Frank, Joseph Kennedy, Edward Markey, Joseph Moakley and Gerry Studds, as well as Boston

Mayor Ray Flynn. He hopes others join the effort, such as ratepayers and business organizations.

With a new administration in Washington and a cooperative MWRA, Sheets said there is a six to nine month "window of opportunity" to bring rate relief. Only through a well-organized, grass routes effort can relief be realized, he added.

"We have to organize it and it has to be reasonable. I think our plan is reasonable. Everyone is pulling the wagon in the same direction."

The fourth prong of the strategy calls for the state to fund at least 75 percent of the construction of a second aqueduct starting in FY95. Greater Boston is one of the only metropolitan areas in the country with a single major supply of potable water--the Hultman Aqueduct.

A vital, but expensive, new tunnel is currently planned to provide redundant service. Officials say a second aqueduct is "an essential economic life insurance policy for all of Massachusetts."

Sheets said state funding is necessary for the project to head off rising water bill rates.

Gertrude R. Halloran was officially seated as the first woman justice in the history of Quincy District Court and easily handled her first case involving a missing pair of men's trousers.

Vincent Moscardelli of South Quincy claimed he sent his $45 suit to the cleaners who took the pants, thus wiping out the value of the suit which would not be a suit if he had to wear odd trousers.

Judge Halloran awarded him $15.

WELFARE HEAD FIRED

A rumored major shakeup in the administration of Mayor Thomas S. Burgin failed to materialize when only Welfare Commissioner Alvin S. Wight was ousted and replaced in the $2,400 job by WPA Administrator Anthony J. Venna.

"I have nothing personal against Mr. Wight," said the mayor, "but I believe it desirable at this time to make a change in the administration of the Welfare Department."

Wight called his dismissal "political expediency."

Reappointed were Ezekiel C. Sargent, public works commissioner at $4,000; Harold P. Newell, treasurer at $3,300; John D. Smith, solicitor at $3,000; N. Gorman Nickerson, assessor chairman at $3,250.

SALARY CUT VETOED

Mayor Burgin vetoed a City Council order that would have cut the salary of newly named City Purchasing Agent George Bonsall from $3,500 to $2,500 a year.

"We pay lucrative salaries to beginners," said Councillor Aldo Della Chiesa. "Let us pay this purchasing agent $2,500 a year. If he does his work well he can expect a raise."

FEVER EPIDEMIC

Health Commissioner Dr. Richard M. Ash, noting 416 reported cases of scarlet fever since September, declared that an epidemic was sweeping the city, particularly in Wards 5 and 6.

"Call a doctor in any case of sore throat," warned Dr. Ash, adding that there was a great danger of serious complications from even the slightest case.

Jim's Gourmet Roasted Peppers

While we are eagerly awaiting spring, we have to do something to survive the rest of the winter, and that at our house is hitting the pots and pans.

My husband, the shopper, found a sale on red peppers one day and got carried away and bought so many that we started roasting them and making our own gourmet roasted peppers. They are easy and can be stored in a jar for weeks in the refrigerator and go well with sandwiches, or in an antipasto.

Jim's Gourmet Roasted Peppers

6 to 8 large sweet red peppers
1/4 to 1/2 cup olive oil (a must for flavor)
3 or 4 large garlic cloves salt to taste

a nice large cookie sheet

Place peppers in broiler pan or cookie sheet. Broil about 4 inches from the heat about 15 minutes turning the peppers until they are charred. Allow peppers to cook and peel them. Cut lengthwise into about 1/2 inch wide strips.

Place in mixing bowl and add the garlic and the olive oil and the salt. Toss gently. Store in jar or plastic container in the refrigerator. They are wonderful in an antipasto or with a tuna sub.

P.S. You can also use green peppers as well with the red for a great combination, especially if they are on sale also.

DOROTHY QUINCY HOMESTEAD

Dorothy Quincy Homestead Featured In New Publication

The Dorothy Quincy Homestead, located at the corner of Hancock St. and Butler Rd., Quincy, is among the historic properties featured in a new publication by the American Institute of Architects entitled Domestic Views: Historic Properties of The National Society of The Colonial Dames of America.

With text by William Seale and photographs by Erik Kvalsvik, the volume broadly illustrates developments in mostly American architecture over the course of our nation's history. Various regions of the U.S. at different times in history are brought to life in the collection of museums owned or supported by the National Society of Colonial Dames of America.

The properties featured in the book reflect life from the Spanish era in the West to 20th century New York. Some are grand and were mansions when built; many are plain houses constructed for comfortable shelter.

Accompanied by photographs, the text discusses the significance of these properties in the history of their regions and the development of the American preservation movement. Each place has been selected as a symbol of local history in the state where it is located.

Parts of the Dorothy Quincy house were built in 1685 by Col. Edmund Quincy, the second of the name, on land that was granted to an earlier Edmund in 1638. The major part was built in 1706 by Edmund the third.

The stately three-story house was the social center of old Braintree during the regime of the fourth Edmund. He fathered five daughters, including Dorothy Quincy. She married John Hancock in 1775.

After the Revolution and the death of Edmund the fourth in 1788, the old house passed from the Quincy family. The Hancocks did not want it and in 1904, it was acquired by the Massachusetts Society of Colonial Dames.

The Dames restored it with vintage furniture, utensils and clothing, and gave it to the state with the proviso that the Dames continue to run it.

Our Policy On Engagement Photographs And Wedding Announcements

The Quincy Sun will continue to publish photographs with engagement announcements as it always has.

The Sun will also continue to use in wedding announcements the names of all members of the wedding party including maid or matron of honor, best man, parents, bridesmaids, ushers, flower girls and ringbearers, etc.

We invite engaged couples to submit their photos with their announcements and when submitting their wedding photo to include a complete listing of the wedding party.

Black and white photos are preferred. The Sun can convert most color photos to black and white for publication but the photo loses some clarity in the process.

We suggest that when you have your engagement photo taken, you request the studio to send a copy to The Sun with the reminder that The Sun is continuing its policy of publishing engagement photos.

The Sun also publishes articles and photos of wedding anniversaries beginning with the 25th anniversary.

And, as in the past, there is no charge.

Park Service Planning Team For Adams Historic Site

The National Park Service (NPS) Adams National Historic Site, scheduled a public meeting for last night (Wednesday) at the Adams Academy, 8 Adams St.

The NPS is developing a General Management Plan for the Adams National Historic Site. The purpose of the plan is to formulate a management philosophy and provide direction for future management of the national historic site.

The meeting is designed to facilitate broad public involvement in the identification of planning issues and the development of strategies for future direction in the management of the park. The meeting will address topics and issues such as: Collections Management, Visitor Service and Interpretation, Resource

The United First Parish Church, where both presidents and their wives are interred, was authorized in October 1980 by Congress to be included in the boundary of the park, although it remains an active church owned and managed by its congregation.

The National Park Service has developed a park newsletter, titled "Planning Update," which is available by contacting the Adams National Historic Site, 135 Adams St., Quincy, MA 02169, 773-1177.

Mass., Norfolk County Bars Essay Content Open To Quincy Students

The Massachusetts Bar Association has announced its 1993 law-related essay contest, which is locally sponsored by the Norfolk County Bar Association.

The contest is open to all students in Grades 9-12 and winners receive cash prizes.

The essay topic is based on the hypothetical situation of a girls' field hockey team claiming that is being illegally discriminated against by its school which dedicates more staff and financial resources to a boys' football team. Essayists are asked to examine the facts of the case and the law which forbids discrimination in school athletics.

Entrants from Norfolk County must submit their essays by March 1 to the Norfolk County Bar Association. County bar members will judge the essays and then submit the five best entries to the MBA for statewide judging. First, second and third place winners will be selected, and prizes of $250, $100 and $75 respectively will be awarded. Five honorable mentions will receive plaques. Prizes will be presented at an April ceremony in Boston.

Complete copies of the contest question and rules may be obtained by calling the MBA's law-related education department at 542-3602.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

SCOTT DEWARE

Historians rate Abraham Lincoln one of the greatest American presidents.

Lincoln was not an apaiser nor one who yielded to the expediency of the hour. He was a man of strong morals and spiritual insight... a man of character and high principles.

Ironically, Lincoln, who often spoke so eloquently of peace, was fated to know nothing but war in the four years and one month of his presidency. He bore the griefs of a nation at war on his shoulders. His faith and courage kept us an undivided nation.

Yes, Lincoln was more than a great American. He was a great humanitarian. He was a man of great ability, with immense spiritual insight. He had an unusual understanding of the dignity of the common man....

We, as a nation, are indeed fortunate to have had Lincoln as our President during a very difficult time in our nation's history.

Kane Standout As Quincy Edges B-R

Robbie Kane is one of Quincy High's top all-around athletes, standing out in football, basketball and baseball.

The 5-8 senior last week had the finest game in his starry career as he led the Presidents' basketball team to a 75-74 victory over Bridgewater-Raynham.

Quincy hosted Falmouth last night (Wednesday), will be at Barnstable Friday and will be home to Silver Lake next Tuesday night at 7 o'clock.

The hectic win over B-R improved the Presidents' record to 5-8.

Kane, one of the smallest players on the floor, had a career high 31 points, along with 10 assists, six steals and eight rebounds.

The Trojans held a 40-34 lead at the half, but Kane scored 18 of his points in the second half to pull the Presidents back.

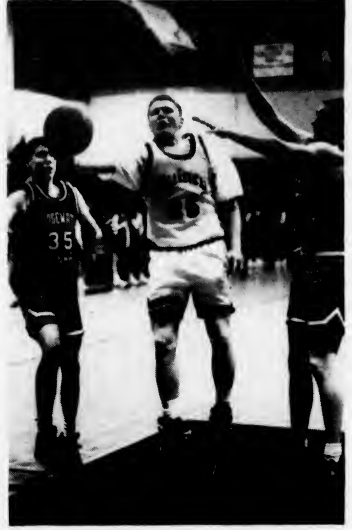

"Robbie played a great game and was really hitting the outside shot," said coach John Franceschini. "He controlled the game from both ends and it was just a great night for him."

Kane, averaging 15.4 points a game, had four three-pointers, also a career high.

North Having Rollercoaster Season

By TOM SULLIVAN

The North Quincy boys' basketball team is having a roller coaster season with an 8-7 record, but coach Ted Stevenson feels the Raiders are ready for a strong stretch drive.

North's "overtime kids" (it went to three overtimes earlier in a loss to Bridgewater-Raynham) had to go four overtimes last Friday to finally edge Silver Lake, 64-61.

The Raiders played at Taunton last night (Wednesday), will be home to Weymouth Friday night at 7 o'clock and will be at Bridgewater-Raynham next Tuesday night.

North has been involved in several close games, losing four by three points or less. It lost two games by three points, one by a single point and the triple overtime game.

"I think the boys have been pressing a bit but they are playing fine ball and I think we will do all right the rest of the way," Stevenson said.

The Lakers were ahead, 61-60, with 1:40 left in the fourth overtime period but Bo Smith, who had 14 points, was fouled and this two free throws put North in front.

After the Lakers missed two free throws, Pat Shea found Smith underneath for a fast-break layup and the Raiders were in.

In the third overtime North was down by three with 18 seconds left but Luke Sheets (18 points) took a Smith pass and hit his first three-pointer of the year, tying the score at 57 and sending the game into a fourth overtime.

In double overtime, North found itself down, 54-52, with six seconds left but Sheets passed to left Brian Raftery (12 points) underneath for two and the game went into the third overtime session.

Sean Donovan had 16 points for North, leaving him just 18 points short of 1,000 career points. If he didn't reach that cherished plateau last night, he should make it Friday night.

Stevenson came up with a new player to watch earlier in the week.

Freshman Matt Beston hit a jump shot with 50 seconds to play to clinch a 63-59 victory over Barnstable.

Sheets had another big night with 18 points, Donovan had 17 and 6'8" Jason McLeod took down 15 rebounds.

"Beston had been playing fine ball for the junior varsity and he will remain with the varsity," Stevenson said. "He's a fine player with a great future."

Beston received the MVP award at the recent third annual Eagle Eye Basketball Camp at Boston College High School.

"Sheets and Donovan have been scoring well all season and McLeod and Raftery (6'3", 240 lbs.) have rebounded well," said Stevenson. "Raftery is a real bear under the boards. Smith and Shea have also played well. All in all, the team has played well."

Quincy Upsets North In Comeback Win

The Quincy wrestling team was the underdog last week but overcame a 21-12 deficit to upset rival North Quincy, 42-26, pulling out several close matches.

The Presidents dominated the middleweights and closed out their big win with three straight pins before more than 300 fans at the Quincy gym.

"They were the favorites coming in, but we matched up and won the close bouts and that's what it comes down to," said Quincy coach Lou Venturelli.

Quincy began its comeback when Damien Carini topped previously unbeaten Jeff Pillard of North with 38 seconds left at 140 pounds.

Ashley Davis, keeping his unbeaten dual meet record intact, overcame a 4-1 deficit at 145 to earn a 10-9 win over Jason Getz, who suffered his first loss.

Quincy's Bryan

Gallahue (152) and North Quincy's Chris Hamill (160) traded pins and Quincy senior Ben Radcliffe came up with the pivotal fall. He worked Robert Hannaford for the pin to give the Presidents a 30-27 lead.

"Radcliffe's match was huge," Venturelli said. "If you were going to pick one match that was the difference it was his pin."

After North was fined a point for a piece of thrown equipment, Quincy senior Dave Bogan put the finishing touches by pinning Rick MacVarish with 11 seconds left in their second period of their 199-pound match.

"MacVarish, usually in the 171 pound class, bumped up," said North coach Steve Joyce. "Normally he would have no problem at 171, but Bogan is very strong and he got caught up by that strength. Pillard also bumped up to 140 and that was his first dual meet loss."

North's James O'Connell (112) and Franny Bellotti (130) had quick pins.

Other Quincy winners were Mark Froehlich, Matt Miller, Peter Penwarden, and Mark Nutley.

Other winners for North were Billy Chew, Paul Delaney and Chris Hamill.

Last weekend Quincy split, defeating Brockton 44-25, but being outclassed by Dedham, 55-9, making its record 8-9 (2-1 in the Old Colony League).

Quincy winners against Brockton were Miller, Shane O'Connor, Penwarden, John Cheverie, Carini, Gallagher and Davis, who ran his record to 11-0. The only winners against Dedham were Froehlich and Rich Bergeron.

Quincy's scheduled meet with Weymouth was postponed until Tuesday, Feb. 16 at noon at Quincy.

Seamans Seeking Pledges For 'Ski For Sight'

Quincy residents may still make pledges for the Waterville Valley "Ski For Sight" Ski-A-Thon to help newly blind persons.

Bob Seamans of Quincy will take part in a 24-hour Cross Country Ski-A-Thon, Saturday and Sunday, Feb. 27 and 28 at Waterville Valley, N.H., to benefit The Carroll Center for the Blind.

BOB SEAMANS

Seamans, who intends to ski for 24 straight hours, invites others to join him if only for a few miles. His wife June will ski a few miles during the event. He is a member of the board of directors of The Carroll Center for the Blind.

"I know I can last the 24 hours," Seamans said. He added that he should be able to do it if the weather is okay. Seamans estimates he will ski about four miles each hour.

Skiers are presently seeking pledges-per-mile from individuals and organizations. To make a pledge on behalf of Seamans contact Arthur O'Neill at the Carroll Center, 969-6200. Contributions are tax deductible.

"If people can pledge anything, from a nickel to a buck, whatever, it will help," Seamans said.

The Carroll Center for the Blind provides comprehensive rehabilitation services to newly blinded adults and other visually impaired persons, enabling them to achieve independence, self-sufficiency, and self fulfillment.

"The staff at the Carroll Center counsels newly blinded adults on how to cope. The staff teaches them how to live day-to-day... how to cook, iron clothes, etc.," Seamans said.

He added that the Carroll Center serves hundreds of people each year and Quincy residents are eligible for the Center's programs.

Seamans said the public is welcome to come and join the fun-filled event which includes free skiing.

Sports and entertainment personalities are expected at the event which will be held on an easy one-mile, double-track flat loop for conventional and skating styles.

Raffle prizes will be awarded to skiers seeking pledges and long sleeve t-shirts will be presented to all participants.

City Councillors Peter Kolson and Michael Cheney and State Rep. Stephen Tobin announce the establishment of the Brian M. Fitzgerald International Soccer Fund.

The fund is being established by Fitzgerald, a North Quincy High School senior who has been selected to be part of an international soccer team that will tour England and Scotland. The fund committee is seeking financial support from organizations and individuals to help raise the $4,000 needed to pay for the tour.

Fitzgerald, a lifelong Quincy resident, came up through the ranks of Quincy Youth Soccer and served as a captain of the NQHS soccer team this past season, earning team MVP honors. He plans to continue his education and hopes to play soccer on a college level.

"This is probably a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity for Brian, but like so many things, the obvious drawback is the financial burden," said Kolson, who serves as chairman of the committee. "We are proud to form this committee in an effort to bring this dream to reality."

Other committee members include Rev. Richard DeVeer, pastor of St. Boniface Church; Charlene McDonald, director of the Germantown Neighborhood Center; and Mary Fitzgerald, Brian's mother.

Those wishing to make a donation should make checks payable to the Brian M. Fitzgerald International Soccer Fund, c/o Rev Richard DeVeer, St. Boniface Rectory, 26 Shed St., Quincy, MA 02169.

Organizational contributions will be recognized with a certificate suitable for framing. Individual contributions will be personally recognized.

For more information contact Kolson, Cheney, or Mary Fitzgerald.

Turns Attacker's Face Green

Dye Spray Foam Newest Rape, Robbery Defense

By MICHAEL WHALEN
"Calling all cars: Be on the lookout for a man with a green face."

Police radio alerts for muggers and other lawbreakers in the Quincy area could soon be that brief now that the self-defense product known as DYEWitness is available to residents of the South Shore.

DYEWitness, which was developed by former Canadian police officer James McCreary, shoots a green liquid that foams up on contact and stains a person's skin and clothing for an average of seven days. One DYEWitness container is roughly the size of a can of Mace and, when squeezed, is entirely discharged in seven seconds.

Andrea Ciccone of Quincy, a receptionist for Devine & Pearson Inc., sells the product part-time from her home. She said McCreary first came up with the idea for DYEWitness after he became frustrated with the constant difficulties he experienced trying to obtain positive identifications on various criminals.

"I think it's a great product," said Ciccone. "It's guaranteed to leave a person's face with a green stain for a minimum of three to four days, and sometimes stains for a week or more, depending on the person's skin type."

So if a woman is attacked, for instance, and the attacker is sprayed with DYEWitness, police will know that they are looking for someone with a green face.

Ciccone said she also likes the product because while it can halt an attack, it will not completely incapacitate an attacker the way Mace would.

"It comes out with 70 pounds (per-square inch) of pressure, so it will knock an attacker back,"

ON IMPACT

After 4 Seconds

After 7 Seconds

said Ciccone. "It will temporarily sting a person's eyes, but will not really harm someone."

Ciccone said that DYEWitness is composed of various vegetable dyes, formaldehyde, and surfactant, an agent commonly found in soaps and shampoos. She noted that the surfactant is what causes DYEWitness to foam up and sting an attacker's eyes.

Ciccone stressed that DYEWitness is a completely legal product that has been approved both by the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) and Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA).

She added that since, unlike Mace, DYEWitness contains no gases and is non-toxic, it is not considered to be a weapon. For this reason, a firearm identification (F.I.D.) card is not required for a person to carry the product.

DYEWitness has been distributed through Pure Life International Products, Inc. in Canada since it first went on the market in 1990. The United States distributorship, which is handled by Royal Body Care Inc. in Dallas, Texas began in 1991.

Locally, the product is now available in select locations such as the Harvard Square Coop in Cambridge, the Boston University Campus Store, the Carey Hill Flea Market in Brockton, and through individuals such as Ciccone who sell from their homes.

DYEWitness can cost as little as $19.95 ($21.25 including shipping and tax) if one were to purchase it from Ciccone and as much as $40 when bought at the BU campus store. The reason for the difference is that Royal Body Care sells distributorship of DYEWitness through a method called Multi-Level Marketing (MLM) which allows smaller vendors to charge virtually whatever price they can get for the product.

While even $19.95 may seem a large amount for a product that can only be used once, Ciccone said that "it's really only a one-time fee once you buy it." When one uses DYEWitness against an attacker, she explained, that person can send a copy of the police report (regarding the attack) to Royal Body Care and the company will send the victim another DYEWitness container for no charge.

For more information regarding the product, call Ciccone at 471-0389.

Mariano Opposes Educational Reform Bill

Rep. Ronald Mariano has voted against the Education Reform Bill (H. 801) because of how it would affect municipal finances.

"Although education reform is one of my priorities, I am extremely concerned about what this bill does to our municipal finances," said Mariano. "The State can no longer put pressure on the property taxpayers of our cities and towns by mandating levels of spending."

The bill called for the City of Quincy to increase spending in education by over $4 million during the seven years of the education reform bill to be eligible for additional state aid.

"It is unfair to pit city services against each other," said Mariano. "I have balanced a local budget and I know how hard it is when state revenues do not support the programs that the state mandates. Quincy is facing many difficult budget decisions and it would be irresponsible for me to ask the city to increase school spending during these difficult times," said Mariano.

The bill has gone to the Senate for approval.

"It is my hope that the Senate works on the funding portion of the bill and makes it easier for cities such as Quincy to be eligible for aid without increasing spending," said Mariano.

Stice Updates Council On Quincy College Governing Progress

City Councillors want to stay informed on the progress of the recently formed Quincy College Governance Committee.

School Committee member Linda Stice, chairman of the Governance Committee, updated the council Monday on the group's first few meetings.

Stice asked the council to keep politics out of the process when the time comes for making the change.

"We are trying to do what is best for the college, not the players involved," Stice said. "There is going to be a change in governance. We want you all to focus on what's best for the college in the long haul."

Ward 3 Councillor Larry Chretien, who also serves on the Governance Committee, said, if circumstances warrant, he wants the city to be compensated for property and work done for the college by city employees.

"We are leery about letting it go," said Councillor-at-Large Michael Cheney. He asked what would happen if the college ran up deficits in the future which the city would have to pay for without having control over the school.

"That would be taxation without representation," Cheney said. "I don't want to put ourselves in that situation."

Stice told the council her committee has two purposes, to decide what the relationship between the city and the college will be and to decide how a new governing board will be selected.

Councillors had many questions concerning a governance change which the committee is working on.

City Solicitor Steve McGrath, also a committee member, said many of the answers "will depend upon the closeness of the relationship between Quincy College and the city."

CRUISING GUIDE

Cruise control is an option that increasingly has been showing up in cars over the past few years. When used under the right conditions, it can increase car mileage and decrease driver foot-pedal fatigue. Cruise control works best on long stretches of relatively flat highway, where it can generally maintain speed more steadily than foot acceleration. However, on hilly terrain, cruise control may not be a good choice. Instead of gradual acceleration that encourages good fuel economy, a cruise-control unit may "floor" the accelerator pedal to attain the desired speed. On downhill stretches, it may try to hold the car back by slowing down the engine. When used under the right circumstances, cruise control offers obvious benefits, as long as the driver uses discretion in operating it.

HINT: Cruise control usage may not be appropriate on wet pavement where the unit may not slow down in response to wheel slippage.

Studds Hopeful Clinton Earmarks More Money For Harbor Cleanup

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Cong. Gerry Studds said he is hopeful President Clinton will include additional federal money for the $7 billion Boston Harbor cleanup and a signal that help is on the way may be sounded as early as next week during the president's first State of Union Address Feb. 17.

In an interview with The Quincy Sun Monday at his new Quincy office located at 1212 Hancock St., Studds also expressed his optimism for plans to establish a shipyard museum at the former Fore River shipyard as well as initiatives to boost business in the city's retail districts.

In addition, the representative discussed his positions on several national issues, including the federal deficit, family leave law and gays in the military.

Studds said his top priority is reducing the burden placed on local ratepayers who are essentially financing the cleanup of Boston Harbor. The 10-term congressman is said the federal and state governments must assume their fair share of the financial responsibility for the project. Studds also said that burden should be spread to non-MWRA district communities.

Asked where and when that money will be forthcoming, Studds replied, "No one can predict that for certain. From my perspective, nothing is of any higher importance for me at the moment."

Studds has discussed the issue with Gov. Weld, Lt. Gov. Paul Cellucci, Leon Panetta, new director of the Office of Management and Budget, and to President Clinton "making it very, very clear that both from a local and regional perspective in Quincy and in Boston Harbor and nationally that federal funding of the Clean Water Act for water and sewer treatment is an overwhelmingly important priority."

"We hope when the President submits his infrastructure -economic stimulus package, quite possibly as soon as his State of the Union Address (Feb. 17), that there will be a significant part of that which is directed to clean water funding."

"We're also going to try at the federal level to once again get a special appropriation for Boston Harbor, we've been able to get $100 million in each

Union Seeks State Mediator

Teachers Picket For Pay Raise, New Contract

By STEVE KAVANAGH

Quincy teachers want a pay raise and they want their contract settled now.

Teachers picketed City Hall Monday and Tuesday to protest unsuccessful contract negotiations with the School Committee.

A group of Quincy High School teachers carrying signs marched for nearly two hours. Teachers have been without a contract since Aug. 31, 1992.

The teacher's union has asked a state mediator to join the negotiations.

"Our side felt an outside presence (state mediator) might help both sides move closer together more quickly," said Tom Walsh president of the Quincy Education Association (teacher's union).

"We hope this will get the School Committee to settle quickly," said teacher Paul Karhu. "We don't want this to drag on and I'm sure the School Committee doesn't either."

The picketers also objected to a recent report by the Massachusetts Teachers Association which ranks Quincy teachers 166th in pay among 325 Massachusetts school systems.

"We have a lot of kids go to college," said George Smith, a Quincy social studies teacher. "We feel we are among the best teachers in the state."

The report refers to teachers with masters degrees and at least 30 additional credits and 12 or more years experience. Walsh said the majority of Quincy teachers are in this category.

"This (report) is very distressing," said School Committee member Linda Stice. "In no way does it reflect on the quality of our teachers."

Stice said the city is limited by budget constraints in what it can pay teachers.

"When I first came here in 1967, we were in the top 10 percent (in the state) in pay," said Cornelius "Connie" Sheehan, a special needs counselor at Quincy High School. "I think people in the community don't realize the extra work we do outside of school on our own time."

Walsh said negotiations began last summer before the contract expired. He said the QEA negotiation team meets twice a month with School Committee negotiators Stice, Steve Durkin and Margaret King.

"Both sides have worked hard on this," Stice said.

Walsh said the reason for the delay in reaching an agreement "is essentially money. Progress has been made on contract language."

The most recent contract included no raise in the first year, a two-percent hike for the first six months of the second year, and an additional two percent for the second six months of the second year.

"On our last contract we received zero (for the first year) and they are offering us zero again (for the first year)," Karhu said.

The teachers have reportedly been offered a three-year deal with a zero increase in the first year with increases in the second and third years.

Stice refused to comment on the negotiations.

Walsh said the QEA and School Committee have agreed not to discuss terms of negotiations in the media.

"I question whether Quincy will attract new, young teachers if the pay scale is not comparable (to other communities)," Sheehan said. The MTA report ranked Quincy 296th of 325 in starting teacher salaries.

Teachers will continue to picket at City Hall each day until the contract is settled, Walsh said. Teachers at different schools will take turns picketing each week.

Town Brook Flood Protection Project Starts

Construction of the Town Brook Local Protection Project in Quincy and Braintree is underway.

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers announced that channel improvements along Town River near Southern Artery and Pond St. have started.

The work is part of a $3.3 million contract for the first of three phases for the $40 million project.

"The contractor is now removing material from the downstream reaches of Town River as part of the channel improvement portion of the work which will widen and deepen portions of the waterway, realign the channel itself in some areas, and also involves installing slope and bottom channel protection," said Col. Brink Miller, head of the Corps in New England.

the Town River under Southern Artery.

"Excavated material is being hauled by trucks to the city landfill for disposal," Miller said. "The route being used by the trucks was recommended by the city and minimizes impacts to residential areas. Currently, there are only a few trips per day, but the number is expected to increase over time as the work progresses and could be as high as 12-15 during peak activities."

A total of about 60,000 cubic yards of material

Chamber To Honor Brian Donnelly March 12

Former Congressman Brian Donnelly will be honored by the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, Friday, March 12, at Lombardo's, Randolph.

Donnelly will be recognized for his 14 years of service as a member of Congress and for his positive contributions to the South Shore.

"The economic vitality of the region is a direct result of Brian Donnelly's commitment and hard work," said Arthur Connelly, chairman of the Chamber's board of directors and president of the South Weymouth

BRIAN DONNELLY
Savings Bank.

"Congressman Donnelly has always gone out of his way to accommodate the concerns of the business community," said Connelly. "We are delighted to honor him because he represents the spirit of the South Shore."

Donnelly will be presented the Forrest I. Neal Award at the Chamber's annual dinner with more than 500 members and guests expected to be attending.

Neal was a long time Quincy business leader, past Chamber president, and member and former chairman of the MBTA board of directors.

The dinner will also honor Thomas Galvin, vice president of Boston Gear and the 1991 board chairman of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce.

College Board Of Trustees Role Outlined

The Quincy College Governance Committee heard an expert on college administration discuss the roles and responsibilities of a college board of trustees last week.

Judith McLaughlin, a teacher at Harvard University's Graduate School of Education, also gave the committee some examples of how a board is selected, how it is comprised, the relationship between a board and a college president, and the duties of a board chairman.

McLaughlin teaches a course on college governance at Harvard and is the author of a book, "Choosing A College President."

She told the committee and others in attendance, including current Quincy College trustees and faculty members, that Quincy College has outgrown its present governance system.

"What may have made sense years ago does not make sense now. You have to find a way to make governance fit the school's needs," McLaughlin said.

She said a new board of trustees should take a much broader role in college affairs compared to the limited role of the current board.

Typical responsibilities of a board are:

- Hiring and firing of a college president.
- Supporting and evaluating the college president.
- Financial management.

Fundraising, monitoring expenses and ensuring the long-term financial stability of the school.

•Act as intermediaries between the school and the community. Interpret the needs and issues as both groups relate to each other.

•Make sure the programs and long-term goals reflect the mission of the institution.

•Accountability.

•Act as a "court of last resort" within the college to settle appeals.

McLaughlin told the committee that a board of trustees can be any size but recommended that Quincy College's board be about 11 members. She said private colleges have bigger boards than public schools primarily for fundraising purposes.

She said there are a variety of ways trustees can be selected and a board may be selected through a combination of methods including appointment, election, designated seats, etc.

McLaughlin said the board should be diverse and have a balance of "skills, expertise and experience" but most importantly should have "the good of the school in common."

She also said a board chairman plays a "crucial role" in the effectiveness of the trustees.

McLaughlin recommended that in Quincy's case "you ought to spend time after the first year to evaluate successes and failures."

Cafe Expansion Continued

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The Quincy License Board Tuesday continued for one week a request from The Garden Cafe, 653 Southern Artery, for permission to expand its premises from 4,000 to 5,800 square feet.

The matter had been continued from the board's Feb. 2 meeting because of the board's rule that all requests connected with Common Victualer and/or All-Alcoholic licenses be reviewed twice.

City Clerk Joseph Shea said Tuesday the matter was being continued a second time because of the absence of Police Chief Francis Mullen, who is on vacation.

"Chief Mullen wanted to be here (for the second hearing)," said Shea.

Building Inspector Mathias Mulvey was also absent from Tuesday's meeting because of the recent death of his father.

License Board Briefs

The Quincy License Board took the following action at its meeting Tuesday:

•Granted a request from G.J. Coddington's, 1250 Hancock St. (George Cook) for a one-day extension of premises of their liquor license for the "Quincy Partnership" benefit dance Thursday, Feb. 11 from 6 to 9 p.m.

Studds Opens Office At 1212 Hancock St.

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Pledging to work with every segment of the city, Cong. Gerry Studds officially opened his new main office Monday at 1212 Hancock St., Quincy Center, as a host of local officials, business and community leaders warmed his welcome.

"It is no accident that this office is where it is," Studds said inside the 2,300-square-foot third floor office. "This city has a heart and we are proud to be in it. We look forward to working with you, the business community, and every segment of this city."

The Quincy office will serve as the congressman's main office in the 10th district. Smaller satellite offices opened Tuesday in Brockton and Plymouth.

The Quincy office will have the most help with eight staffers, five full-time and three part-time. It is open 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Constituents can call the office at 770-3700. To fax correspondence, the number is 770-2984.

A public reception is being planned for the near future.

As the city's representative in Congress, Studds said he is eager to work with Mayor James Sheets, city councillors and its State House delegation on issues pertaining to Quincy, the only city in the 10th congressional district.

"I'm delighted to represent this city. It is the only city in our (10th) district and this office will be the main headquarters for the South Shore."

In formally welcoming Studds and his staff to Quincy, Sheets said, "It is particularly impressive not simply to have a congressman have an office here but a congressman to have a major staff here working on the problems that are so critical, not simply to the Cape but to Quincy and the commonwealth and we feel that's indicative of the investment that you're making here in this city."

"We look forward to working with you and we know that Quincy is going to be a better city in the years ahead and it's going to be a better city certainly as we move ahead into the 21st century because you have been the congressman, you have been here, and you have been very active in all our plans that we have for this city."

As a real "sign" of appreciation, 12 local business people and officials purchased a sign which has been fastened to a wall outside the congressman's office. Reading "Congressman Gerry Studds" in Times Bold font, the antique-brush brass formula on foam sign was custom cut by Signature Signs in Quincy.

Those contributing to the sign were Mike McFarland, Barry's Deli; Mark Bertman, Rogers Jewelers; Atty. Paul Epstein, Spillane & Epstein, Attorneys at Law; Ned Platner, Burgin & Platner Insurance; Atty. Tom Lynch, Kerstein & Lynch; Rich Pierce, O.P. Properties; George Cook, Coddington's Restaurant; Bill Spinks and Ken Tarabelli, Bay State Community Services; Chris Wilson, Signature Signs; Marcia Olinto, Lykes Lines; Peter O'Connell; and the mayor.

William MacMullen, executive director of the planned U.S. Naval Shipbuilding Museum at the former Fore River shipyard in Quincy Point, presented Studds and his staff museum coffee mugs as a token of his support for maritime issues, including the museum project.

Studds said he was thankful for the warm reception.

"I want to thank you for

CONG. GERRY STUDDS, left, is welcomed to his new office on the third floor at 1212 Hancock St., Quincy Center, by Bill O'Connell and Mayor James Sheets. O'Connell represented the O'Connell Companies which is located next to Studds' office. The custom cut sign was purchased by 12 local business people and officials.

the warmth of your welcome, the business community and all of the segments of the City of Quincy have been extraordinarily warm in their welcome. It's very much appreciated."

Looking around the office, Studds said the Quincy office seemed larger than his office in Washington. "It's definitely nicer. This is wonderful space."

Studds is soliciting on loan artwork and photographs from local businesses and residents to help decorate the office. Photographs of the Fore River shipyard and artwork from the Quincy Art Association have already been offered, he said.

True Examples Of Quincy's 'Finest'

[A copy of the following letter was submitted to The Sun for publication by the staff of the Lincoln-Hancock School:]

Dear Mayor Sheets,
We are writing this letter of thanks and appreciation for the outstanding work of three of Quincy's "finest," Officers Robert Hanna, Robert Edgar and Robert Clark.

These officers demonstrated such care and compassion during the recent death of one of our fourth grade students, Paul Gauthier. The support these officers provided to Paul's family and to the Lincoln-Hancock School staff was truly incredible.

Officer Clark and Officer Edgar had been friends with Paul for the past 2 1/2 years. Paul had great respect and admiration for these officers and he always enjoyed their visits. Paul was also active in the PAL program and was recently presented an awarded for his participation. He loved his award because it had a police car on it, but more importantly because it came from his friend, Officer Bob Clark.

To show their respect and admiration for this fine young man, these officers on their own time stood Honor Guard at Paul's casket. Officers Edgar, Clark and Hanna along with brother officers served as pall bearers at Paul's funeral. Officer Clark also delivered a very poignant and loving eulogy at Paul's funeral Mass.

Paul will be deeply missed by all of his teachers, the students and his friends at Lincoln-Hancock Community School. We will never forget the generosity, consideration and compassion shown by these three officers. They truly are examples of Quincy's "Finest."

Open School Seat(s)?

There could be one or two open School Committee seats in this fall's city election.

Frank Santoro who will be closing out eight years (two terms) on the board has been telling friends he will not seek re-election.

Ron Mariano who will be completing his first four-year term hasn't decided whether or not to seek re-election.

Mariano was elected state representative in a special election in November, 1991 succeeding Robert Cerasoli who was appointed the state's Inspector General. He was re-elected last year.

Mariano decided to complete his School Committee term because of matters that were still to come before the board including the selection of a new school superintendent after Robert Ricci resigned. The job went to Eugene Creedon.

Mariano says there are still other educational matters he would like to have a voice in but may be able to pursue them on Beacon Hill.

"I'll make a decision soon," he says about whether to seek a second term on the School Committee.

Margaret (Peggy) King who was appointed in April, 1992, to fill out the term of Mary Collins who resigned because of health reasons, will be up for election this year.

No indication yet on what her plans are.

Will Heor won't he? That's still the big political question waiting for an answer.

The answer will come soon from City Councillor Tim Cahill who is still seriously mulling a run for mayor this year.

Although some friends are advising him to seek re-election to the council this year and run for mayor in 1995, Cahill definitely has not ruled out challenging Mayor James Sheets this fall.

In fact, he seems to be leaning that way.

He has an office on the second floor in the Burgin

Platner building at 1359 Hancock St., across from his former Handshakes Restaurant. He used the office for bookkeeping and other business matters pertaining to the restaurant.

He recently sold the restaurant and is now referring to the office as "my campaign office."

Someone noted that he would need a street floor location with more visibility if he were to run for mayor.

Cahill agreed that he would open a larger headquarters for mayor.

Someone else noted the second floor office would still serve as an ideal spot for telephone soliciting in a mayor's race.

(And, of course, for a city council re-election campaign.)

So, which political office does Cahill plan to use his political office for?

The answer is coming soon.

DANFLYNN, real estate auctioneer, has been named to the Quincy Planning Board by Mayor Sheets to fill the vacancy created by the retirement of long-time member Joseph McConville.

Flynn was a candidate for Governor's Council in last fall's election.

GOOD NEWS FOR Herb Fontaine, former WJDA news editor. Fontaine, who underwent surgery at Massachusetts General Hospital in December has been undergoing weekly radiation treatments there since. He was scheduled for 35 treatments but after taking 31, doctors told him he doesn't need the other four.

He's feeling fine and is staying active on various community committees and boards.

THAT WAS A nice piece on the Quincy police and Quincy District Court's domestic violence program on TV's "60 Minutes" Sunday. It certainly made Quincy look good and deservedly so. But couldn't someone have taken Ed Bradley aside and said, "Look, Ed, we pronounce it Quin-zee not Quin-see."

will be removed and taken to the landfill.

The number of traffic lanes will be reduced from four to three on a small stretch of Southern Artery near Pond St. Traffic lanes will alternate to account for rush hour traffic.

The remaining phases of work to complete the Town Brook project involve construction of a 12-ft.-diameter, 4,060 ft. tunnel beneath downtown Quincy and reconstruction of the Old Quincy Reservoir Dam in Braintree.

Work is scheduled to begin in the fall and is expected to take 2 1/2 years to complete. Work on the dam would take an additional 18 months.

"When complete in 1997, the project will provide a significant measure of protection to the communities of Quincy and Braintree by diverting flood flows through the tunnel, culvert, and the realigned channel," Col. Miller said.

The project is being constructed with 75 percent federal funds and 25 percent MDC funds.

Pond St. Playground Closed For Flood Project

Raymond C. Cattaneo, executive director of the Park, Forestry and Cemetery Departments announces that the upper section of Munroe Playground on Pond St. will be closed until further notice.

The Town Brook Flooding Project has started the first phase of construction in that area and will be using the field and playground for a staging area, he said.

Park Department personnel will be removing the playground equipment from the site and will store it at the Park and Recreation Department Complex until the playground can be restored upon completion of the project in that area.

The tennis and basketball courts at the lower end of the park are still operable and will remain open for the time being but residents utilizing the courts should remain cautious due to the heavy equipment and vehicles involved at the construction site, Cattaneo said.

$77,315 In Wire Permits

The Quincy Department of Wire Inspection issued 101 permits for an estimated cost of wiring of $77,315 during January, according to Wire Inspector Thomas Purpura.

During the month there were 31 certificates of approval issued to Massachusetts Electric Company and $2,795.75 in permit fees.

In addition, there were 215 inspections, 19 reinspections, 39 defects noted, and one fire call.

Quincy Losing Economic Backbone: Small Business

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

We have now concluded our survey on lost Quincy businesses from August 1991-December 1992. During this period, two major mailings were made from our association that reached 1,900 individual businesses in Quincy. These businesses were listed in the 1991 and 1992 NYNEX Yellow Pages.

Our membership of 97 businesses (as of 12/31/92), gives us the base for the information requested. Only one business did not provide employment numbers. Another business could not give the breakdown or resident/non-resident employees. We removed three businesses from the survey, because they were way above average in numbers of employees of the rest of our membership. By removing these three businesses, the results become more realistic, and we feel, give a more accurate picture of the demise of small business in Quincy, and the resulting economic loss in jobs and expendable income.

Once the purges are made to our current business listing, we will once again go to the more current Yellow Pages, update our listing and bring another mailing, during 1993, to continue the survey we have begun. To the best of our knowledge, this type of survey, giving the results that we have gathered, has never been done in our city. We felt that it should be done, so that everyone in Quincy can understand how the economy of the entire community is affected by small business.

We have made two mailings thus far. August 1991-November 1991 and August 1992-November 1992. What we found is, that the businesses losses increased during 1992. In 1991 we showed an average loss of 10 businesses per month, while 1992's losses increased it to 14.75 per month. We expect that by the end of 1993, Quincy, will have lost at least 300 small businesses in a 28 month period, and that estimates to 10.7 or 11 businesses per month.

Any city that loses 12 percent or higher of its small business base, the loss in jobs, wages, and tax revenues will be substantial. We strongly believe that under the present taxes and fees levied upon the business community, by this city, it will continue to destroy more small businesses and Quincy will remain unattractive to small business, until the cost of running a business here is reduced. Yes, some businesses are being attracted to Quincy, but the examples given by our elected officials are large corporations such as Stop & Shop, Shaw's, etc. The backbone of the economy of the United States of America is small business, not big business. Damage your small business base enough, and you will destroy your local economy as a result. We believe this is what has happened to the City of Presidents, Quincy, Massachusetts.

Broad Meadows

Irks Adams Shore

Residents of Adams Shore were complaining of the large amount of dust that was blowing on, and sometimes into their homes after sludge dredged from the Town River was dumped on the meadows.

"It's so bad here that Adams Shore women are getting the name of being poor housekeepers, even though they keep the vacuum cleaners going almost day and night," said Mrs. Helen M. Cruikshank of 14 Eaton Rd.

"It soils our laundry on the line. It blows through cracks in the house. It ruins the linen. It coats our homes a dirty gray. For two nights we had to sleep with the windows sealed tight."

FIRE INSPECTION

Acting Fire Chief Robert Fenby announced that the Fire Department will make a citywide inspection of stores, factories and other business establishments in a campaign against fire hazards.

The drive was launched after acting Mayor Christian Burkard made a surprise personal inspection of conditions in Quincy Center, Quincy Point, Norfolk Downs and Wollaston and found many violations.

Burkard said he was tipped to the conditions by George J. Anderson, proprietor of a Quincy Center restaurant, who accompanied him on his inspection trip.

CIO OUSTER PLANNED

The Independent Union of Fore River Workers opened a drive to oust Local 5 of the CIO union as bargaining agent at the Fore River Shipyard, promising it will provide more jobs at the yard.

Meanwhile, acting Mayor Burkard sent telegrams to Sens. Henry Cabot Lodge Jr. and Leverett Saltonstall demanding to know who was blocking a $60 million contract for three cargo-passenger ships for the American Export Line.

Wollaston Working, Why Not Quincy Center?

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

As we enter a new year of life in the history of the City of Quincy, there is much hope and prosperity envisioned for the Quincy Center business district. Recently, plans were announced for a new state of the art retail megaplex. Supporters of this proposal see it as a way to revitalize Downtown Quincy but as they say in Missouri, "seeing is believing."

In my younger days, I remember riding those green Eastern Mass. from Fields Corner, Dorchester, to Quincy Square to visit relatives. At that time, Quincy was still Shopperstown USA. That was then but this is now. Quincy Center remains but a shadow of its past. Presidents Place is nice but Hancock St. can only dream of what was because today it appears to be little more than a ghost town of lost hopes.

I hear talk of Quincy 2000. Of public-private partnerships. Of politicians wearing rose-colored glasses. But it is time to take the blinders off and exit the Twilight Zone. The Downtown Quincy of yesterday is gone. Shopping malls like South Shore Plaza and Hanover Mall killed it. No super-duper retail center will challenge that mall life.

Perhaps it is time for Quincy to downscale some seemingly misplaced idealism and see the reality of 1993. Perhaps time would be more wisely spent seeing what works elsewhere in Quincy and bringing it down to Quincy Center. As a Quincy resident since 1984, I think it is time for Quincy city officials to take a good long look at, for example, Wollaston Center. Here is a working model that should be the envy of the entire South Shore region.

If Wollaston were a municipality, this district's center of commerce be its Main Street. Things work in Wollaston Center. Business prospers. Empty storefronts happen rarely. The area has everything. It is a small business heaven. Why couldn't Downtown Quincy look here for inspiration?

Travel through Downtown Quincy after 5 p.m. and its sidewalks are rolled up. Cars ride by darkened stores on empty streets. Shoppers are either home or at the malls. And some of them may have even travelled on down to Wollaston Center. After dark, it doesn't become a ghost town. People are out walking. And shopping. Giving life to a prospering business area. The object of City Hall shouldn't be in making Downtown Crossing in Boston but rather in making it comparable to the likes of the business district down Hancock St. in Wollaston.

Quincy is Wollaston. It is not the Boston of the South Shore. But it is a good family community. A mid-sized city with a future separate that of Boston. Yes, it is important to be able to attract shoppers from nearby South Shore communities but the major commitment of Quincy ought to be in serving the needs of its own people first.

Wollaston Center serves its geographic area quite efficiently and effectively. There is no reason Quincy Center can not do likewise. Sometimes you have to let go of the past in order to reach the future. Now is that time for Quincy Center.

Warning To Cat Owners: Beware Of Rabies

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

To those who believe in letting their cats out at will, a warning!

Rabies in Massachusetts is now considered an epidemic. If you cat, in a cat fight, suffers a wound or an abscess and you don't have proof of its rabies vaccination, more than likely the veterinarian will have no choice but to euthanize your cat because there would be no proof of its wound having been caused by a rabid animal.

Cat breeding season is almost upon us and cat fights will be prevalent. Your pet is placed in extreme danger if in contact with feral (untamed) cats which have obviously not been vaccinated.

Please be forewarned. You pet's very life depends on you!

Congratulations To Cheney, First Night Committee

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

On behalf of Impact Quincy: Quincy Coalition for the Prevention of Alcohol and Other Drug Problems, we would like to congratulate Michael Cheney and the entire First Night Committee for their efforts. Councillor Cheney and his committee have demonstrated that when every sector of our community joins together, we can accomplish great works.

Impact Quincy is proud to have served as a sponsor for the celebration, and would like to thank everyone who took part in the events—the performers who shared their talents, the public safety personnel who insured our well-being, the volunteers and other sponsors who made it all possible, and the thousands who attended the events without incident, and without the use of alcohol or other drugs. They communicated a powerful message to young and old alike that the essential ingredient for fun and enjoyment is the sharing of our talent and energy with others, not the use of alcohol or other drugs.

Congratulations again to the First Night Committee. We look forward to supporting their continuing efforts to make Quincy a healthier community.

Stacey's Chicken Creation

Just when you think you have cooked chicken every way in the world, there always seems to be yet another. Here is a wonderful way to serve it created by our granddaughter, Stacey, who is getting to be a real gourmet cook. It starts out with broiling the chicken breast and then adding eggplant and cheese.

The following recipe feeds four people.

Stacey's Chicken Creation

- 4 Boneless skinless chicken breasts (about 1/2 to 1 inch thick)
- 4 slices of eggplant
- 4 ounces of mozzarella cheese
- 4 ounces of blue cheese
- a cup or so of tomato sauce

olive oil for frying the eggplant slices salt and pepper to taste

Start out by broiling the chicken breasts. Don't overcook. Remove from oven and set aside. In hot oil, saute the eggplant slices (about 1/4 inch thick).

In a slightly greased baking dish, place the pieces of broiled chicken. On top of that place some shredded cheese and some of the blue cheese. Top with eggplant slices, some tomato sauce and then more shredded cheese. Bake in a 350 degree oven for about five minutes. Take out of the oven and then place blue cheese on top and serve. It is such a different flavor with the combination of the cheeses as well as eye appealing.

Our Policy On Engagement Photographs And Wedding Announcements

The Quincy Sun will continue to publish photographs with engagement announcements as it always has.

The Sun will also continue to use in wedding announcements the names of all members of the wedding party including maid or matron of honor, best man, parents, bridesmaids, ushers, flower girls and ringbearers, etc.

We invite engaged couples to submit their photos with their announcements and when submitting their wedding photo to include a complete listing of the wedding party.

Black and white photos are preferred. The Sun can convert most color photos to black and white for publication but the photo loses some clarity in the process.

We suggest that when you have your engagement photo taken, you request the studio to send a copy to The Sun with the reminder that The Sun is continuing its policy of publishing engagement photos.

The Sun also publishes articles and photos of wedding anniversaries beginning with the 25th anniversary.

And, as in the past, there is no charge.

Valentine's Day Concert For Black History Month At United First Parish

A St. Valentine's Day Concert in recognition of Black History Month will be held Sunday, Feb. 14 at 3 p.m. in United First Parish Church, 1306 Hancock St., Quincy Center, opposite City Hall.

The event is a presentation of the Scarborough Chamber Players Multi-Cultural Series at the church and the South Shore Coalition for Human Rights.

Soprano Andrea Bradford, pianists Darryl Hollister and John Andrew Ross and french hornist W. Marshall Sealy will take the audience through a history of song styles including jazz, the classics, and spirituals.

A native of Huntsville, Ala., Bradford is a graduate of Oberlin College and has a master's degree from Boston University. She is the 1985 winner of the Southern Regional Vocal Competition, a regular with Opera Un Met and has performed with the Opera Company of Boston, the Boston Concert Opera and the Boston Symphony Youth programs. Bradford will perform works by Donizetti, Schubert, Faure and Gershwin, as well as spirituals and old Duke

Ross was musical director and arranger for "Dancing in the Street," the longest running Boston-based musical. He is musical director of the National Center for Afro-American Artists, the Elma Lewis School of Fine Arts and the First Parish Church of Brookline and a panelist of the National Endowment for the Arts.

Hollister has served as Sealy, a performer, teacher and brass instrument builder, has performed with the Alvin Ailey Dance Theater, Boston Pops Orchestra, Opera Co. of Boston and the Filarmonica Jalisco, Guadalajara, Mexico. He is on the faculty of Tufts University and Berkeley College of Music.

Tickets are $7, $5 for seniors and children and will be available at the door. For reservations or more information call 328-0677.

LVA-Quincy Seeking Literacy Volunteers

Tutors are needed to teach basic reading and English as a second language to adults in Quincy and the South Shore area.

The program is sponsored by the Literacy Volunteers of America-Quincy. There is a particular need for male volunteers.

Orientations for volunteer tutors are scheduled for Wednesday, Feb. 24 and Thursday, March 4 at 7 p.m. at the Adams Shore branch (Sea St.) of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

For information or to volunteer call 376-1314.

As an affiliate of Literacy Volunteers of America, the library provides free, confidential tutoring to adults in either reading or conversational English.

The Basic Reading program helps native English speakers improve their reading and writing skills so they can function more effectively at home, on the job, and in the community. The program is for adults who read at or below the sixth grade level.

There is no single reason why some Americans have never learned to read. Some students dropped out of school. Others missed obtaining important skills and were too embarrassed to seek help. Some students lacked educational opportunities for an interest in learning. Others have learning disabilities which were not noticed or corrected in school.

The English as a Second Language Program helps people from other countries learn to speak English. Quincy and the South Shore has seen a dramatic increase in the number of immigrants settling here who need help understanding and speaking English.

The program emphasizes verbal communication reinforced by reading and writing. Tutors do not need to know another language to participate. Training will help to develop the skills needed to teach English.

American Cancer Society's 'Daffodil Days' March 23-24

More than 150,000 golden daffodils will burst into bloom in nine South Shore communities March 23-24 as the South Shore Unit of the American Cancer Society stages its annual Daffodil Days to benefit the research, education and service programs to cancer patients throughout the area.

"Last year people here bought nearly 140,000 daffodils helping us raise over $57,000 and we hope to do better this year," Pauline Sweeney of Quincy, who, with her husband Dennis, again heads this year's effort. It is a wonderful way to greet spring with the flower of hope and help fight cancer."

Advance orders are being taken up to March 5 for the bright yellow flowers and volunteers will be delivering and selling them beginning March 23. Orders may be placed by calling Mrs. Sweeney at 773-8226 or the South Shore unit office, 341-4210. A bouquet of 10 is $5, and box of 500 is $250.

The South Shore Unit of the Society provides programs which help cancer patients in Quincy, Braintree, Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Milton, Norwell, Scituate and Weymouth. Some 1400 businesses and individuals have been contacted by volunteers for support.

Statewide, the daffodil drive is expected to sell three million blooms raising more than the nearly 1,000,000 raised last year.

QUINCY TEACHER SALARIES FALL

As of September, 1991, of the 325 teacher contracts reported to the Massachusetts Teachers Association, Quincy's pay for its most experienced, best prepared teachers ranked 166th in Massachusetts! In 1987, the same survey ranked Quincy's teacher pay 93rd; and back in the 1960's and 70's, Quincy consistently ranked in the top 10 in the state. Quincy's teacher morale has slid along with its pay ranking. Now, once again, your teachers are working without a contract. Quincy has not settled a contract "on time" with its teachers since 1973! This school year is half over, still with no contract in sight.

Listed below are the 165 school systems that pay their teachers more than Quincy on the Master's Degree plus 30 credits with 12 or more years:

Acton	Canton	Hamilton-Wenham	Martha's Vineyard	Pembroke	Taunton
Acton-Boxborough	Cape Cod Voc.	Hampden-Wilbraham	Masconomet	Plymouth	Tewksbury
Amherst	Carlisle	Hanover	Mashpee	Plymouth-Carver	Tisbury
Amherst-Pelham	Carver	Harvard	Maynard	Plympton	Topsfield
Andover	Central Berkshires	Harwich	Medway	Princeton	Tn-County
Ashburnham-Westminster	Chelmsford	Hingham	Melrose	Provincetown	Triton
Ashland	Chilmark	Holbrook	Millis	Randolph	Truro
Assabet Valley Voc.	Concord	Holliston	Milton	Raynham	Tyngsborough
Auburn	Concord-Carlisle	Hopedale	Minute Man Voc.	Rehoboth	Wachusett
Avon	Danvers	Hopkinton	Mount Greylock	Revere	Wakefield
Ayer	Dedham	Hudson	Nantucket	Rockland	Walpole
Barnstable	Dighton	Hull	Nashoba	Rowley	Ware
Bedford		Ipswich	Nashoba Valley Voc.	Salisbury	Watertown
Berkshire Hills	Dighton-Rehoboth	King Philip Reg.		Sandwich	Wayland
Berlin	Dover	Kingston	Nauset	Scituate	Wellesley
Berlin-Bolyston	Dover-Sherborn	Lee	Needham	Sherborn	Wellfleet
Beverly	Dracut	Lenox	Newton	Silver Lake	West Bridgewater

Bolton	E. Longmeadow	Lincoln	North Andover	South Middlesex	Westborough
Bourne	Eastham	Lincoln-Sudbury	Northborough	South Shore Voc.	Westford
Boxborough	Edgartown	Littleton	Northborough	Southborough	Weston
Boxford	Everett	Longmeadow	Southborough	Southern Berkshire	Westwood
Braintree	Falmouth	Lunenburg	Northeast Metro	Stoneham	Weymouth
Brewster	Foxborough	Lynnfield	Norwell	Stoughton	Whitman-Hanson
Bridgewater-Raynham	Framingham	Malden	Norwood	Stow	Wilbraham
Brockton	Franklin	Mansfield	Oak Bluffs	Sturbridge	Wilmington
Burlington	Groton-Dunstable	Marlborough	Orleans	Sudbury	Winchester
Cambridge	Halifax	Marshfield	Pelham	Tantasqua	Wrentham

The towns shaded in below pay their children's teachers more than the City of Quincy does -- in many cases, thousands more!

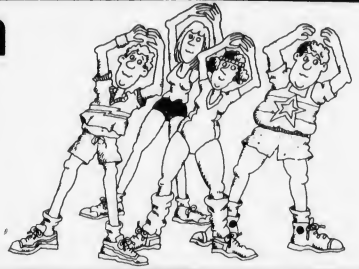

Quincy's ranking for entry-level teacher salaries is even worse! MTA research ranks Quincy's beginning Bachelor's level salary 296th of 325 reporting systems! With Quincy's lack of financial commitment to education, it's unlikely we can attract the best, and then keep the best, teachers in Quincy. We must stop this disturbing trend!

February Is Heart Month At World Gym

It's time for World Gym's 3rd annual "Dance for Heart" Aerobathon to benefit the American Heart Association.

Kathleen Hassan, aerobic director at World Gym, began hosting the aerobathon two years ago, raising $2,200 the first year, and $3,700 last year. Hassan, whose parents both died of heart disease, chose aerobics to fight back against our nation's number one killer.

This year the event will be Thursday, Feb. 18 from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. Students will be pledged for their time, while working out to two master classes.

World Gym is also hosting a Valentine's Open House Sunday, Feb. 14. The gym will offer prizes, membership specials, and a free S.O.S. (Starting Off Step) class at 11:30 a.m. The class will teach the basics of Step Training, with slower moves and lower music.

Step Training is the latest in cardiovascular fitness, which incorporates stepping up and down on an adjustable bench. THR (Target Heart Rate) is monitored closely, to ensure safety and effective training of the heart and lungs. THR is explained at each class to help students achieve maximum aerobic benefits.

How To Be Healthy With Acupuncture

Throughout the past 2,500 years more millions of people were helped by acupuncture than by all other medical modalities combined. It is unlikely that acupuncture would have survived for thousands of years if people did not see great value in this treatment method. According to the World Health Organization, acupuncture is one of most effective and safest methods known for diagnosis, therapy, and pain relief and is regarded of key importance for the prevention of illness.

Research in the West has established that acupuncture induces the brain to produce morphine-like chemicals known as endorphins, which act as natural tranquilizers and pain relievers. Research has also shown that acupuncture is a bioelectric phenomenon, and that acupuncture points are sites of lower electrical skin resistance. Treatment is completely harmless and one cannot become "addicted" to acupuncture therapy.

It is said that acupuncture is very effective for chronic pain. True, but it is equally effective in the regulation and normalization of ongoing body processes. That acupuncture can regulate internal body organs, correct oncoming disease and body imbalances has been known since ancient times.

The World Health Organization has compiled a list of common diseases that respond well to acupuncture treatment. This list includes diseases ranging from acute bronchitis, headache and migraine to frozen shoulder, tennis elbow, back pain, osteoarthritis, and many more.

You don't have to believe in acupuncture. Some patients come to our clinic after everything else has failed, and may be very skeptical about acupuncture. These unbelievers will show the same good results, indicating that the acupuncture effect is not hypnotism or power of suggestion.

EXERCISE ZAPS DIABETES

Chalk up another one for exercise. The "New England Journal of Medicine" has reported that researchers have found regular exercise to be effective in lowering the risk of getting adult diabetes. Middle-aged men in the study reduced their risk of developing the disease by six percent with every 500 calories they burned weekly by exercise. Very active men who burned some 3,500 calories weekly cut their risk by nearly half. Vigorous activities like jogging or tennis were more effective in lowering the risk than pastimes such as golf. The finding held true despite the presence of other risk factors, including obesity, advanced age, high blood pressure, or family history of diabetes.

P.S. Adult diabetes, which occurs about as often in women as in men, affects 12 million people in the U.S. Remember to stretch thoroughly before you embark on your morning workout or jog, in order to minimize your risk of injury. If you would like to learn more about this topic, or how you can help prevent heart disease, call COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE at 472-2550. ## Chiropractic Update by Mark C. Jaehnig D.C.

WHAT TO DO ABOUT THAT BACK PAIN

Most people will experience some degree of back pain at one time or another in their lifetime. Experts point to the general trend in our society to do more and more sitting, coupled with a general decline in our level of physical fitness, as possible causes. Regardless if the back pain is brought on by an accident, poor posture, straining while working around the house, or playing a sport, or by doing too much bending and lifting, there is a lot of confusion as to what to do for treatment.

There are some general recommendations that often prove helpful to patients suffering from lower back pain. In my practice, I strongly urge patients to apply ice immediately after injuring their lower back. The ice tends to reduce any swelling or inflammation while also serving as a natural pain reliever. People with lower back pain should avoid excessive sitting because the seated position should avoid increasing the structural pressure of the lower back. The recommended posture is known as the fetal position, whereby the patient lies on his/her side with both knees brought up toward their chest. Excessive exercise, bending, twisting and/or lifting should be avoided, as these actions tend to aggravate an injured lower back.

While I have taken the liberty of offering some basic suggestions on the care of back pain, there is no substitute for a thorough evaluation and examination to correctly diagnose the cause of the problem. The doctor of chiropractic, with intensive training and knowledge of the spine, is eminently qualified to treat patients suffering from lower back pain.

If you have questions or would like to make an appointment, please call Dr. Mark Jaehnig, a lifelong Quincy resident, at Quincy Chiropractic Office, 110 Billings Rd., North Quincy MA 02171, 773-4400

Walking: It's the path to better health

Exercise. Ah, the dreaded word that inspires terror in couch potatoes everywhere. Of course, the benefits are obvious but, to many of us, the suggestion that physical exertion may actually be enjoyable is indeed suspect.

But before you dismiss physical fitness as an ideal achieved only by sweaty, iron pumping tri-athletes with Greco-Roman physiques, consider this: Moderate exercise may include many of the same benefits, with higher compliance and fewer adverse effects, as do many physically-demanding activities.

In fact, a study published in the Journal of the American Medical Association confirms the importance of even a moderate exercise program. This study, conducted by the Institute for Aerobics Research, involved more than 13,000 men and women. Each participant was evaluated for physical fitness on a treadmill test, and then grouped into five categories from least to most fit. The study followed the groups over an eight-year period to discover how physical fitness was related to death rates.

The study revealed two major points:

While previous studies had indicated physical exercise helps protect against heart disease, this was the first study to see a decline in death rates for cancer as well.

The study also found that of the five groups of people, the least fit group (who were also the most sedentary) had the highest mortality rates. The big surprise was that the death rate dropped most sharply in the second least fit group, by 60 percent for men and 48 percent for women. The three fittest groups — including people who jogged up to 40 miles per week — derived relatively small additional benefits.

In other words, exercise a little; and you'll benefit a lot.

So, just what is moderate exercise? Many fitness experts suggest walking as the ideal moderate exercise. Today, walking is the fastest growing form of physical exercise among Americans, and it's estimated that 70 million of them are walking on a daily basis.

Those who walk regularly report improved flexibility and strength, stronger bones, sounder sleep and a noticeable sense of well being.

Walking is good for the soul — and one's mental well being. With companions, walking is an enjoyable social activity; alone, it affords an opportunity for reflection and renewal. Walking requires nothing more than a comfortable pair of shoes, and offers minimal risk of injury, which is especially important for older adults.

Studies have shown that brisk walking burns almost as many calories as jogging, while walking up a 10-degree incline can burn more calories than jogging.

So, grab a friend, lace up your shoes, and join the 70 million others like you who have discovered that walking is not only healthy; it's fun.

For more information on walking, write to Step by Step, P.O. Box 32080, Kansas City, Missouri, 64111. To receive calcium information, call 1-(800) 3-CALCIUM.

Studds Hopeful Clinton Earmarks Cleanup Money

the last two years, it is going to be much more difficult now with the fiscal constraints that we're under, but we're going to try for that again.

"It is also terribly important that we met the governor last week in Washington, and Cong. Moakley and I and Sen. Kennedy and Sen. Kerry all made the point to the governor over and over again that this is a real crisis here. We are coming soon to the breaking point.

"I tried to convey to the governor what we perceive as an imminent crisis. We already have people who are in default on their local sewer bills for the simple reason that they cannot pay them. We're very hopeful the governor can find some significant assistance at the state level as well."

Studds also commented on several local and national issues which have received media attention. Here's what he had to say:

Revitalizing the Quincy shipyard and establishing a shipbuilding museum at Fore River

"I think all of us hope very much that shipbuilding and ship repair work can once again be a component of the future of that yard and the city. We all know that's a long shot, we all know that it's not guaranteed. It's a little difficult to envision the future of this city without that and hopefully we won't have to.

"Whether we do or whether we don't, the shipyard itself, that extraordinary parcel of land, with the deep water access, the rail access, and it's location is key to the future economic development of this city and this region. The museum is a wonderful component of that future. I know the mayor is full of ideas about things he would like to see there.

"The museum is certainly a wonderful first step."

Quincy 2000

Studds met Monday with Quincy 2000 Chairman Thomas Galvin and Director Charles D'Aprix and was briefed about the public-private partnership's plans to boost business in Quincy's retail districts.

"It is in the interest of the city and all of us to work very closely together with one another. We pledged to work very, very closely. Clinton's controversial stand to lift ban on gays in the military Studds supports lifting the ban on gays in the military. "I think we have here the last chapter of the long story of the struggle for civil rights in this country. I think President Clinton is entirely correct in casting this debate in that context.

"Thirty years ago I marched on Washington behind Martin Luther King Jr. as we began the last chapter of the legal quest for civil rights in America for the people of color. Thirty years later we're beginning to write the final chapter so that all Americans are included in the protections guaranteed by the Constitution and by the statutes in the laws of the land."

Federal deficit

Studds said he supports reduced spending on the $30 billion space station

Freedom and the supercollider atom smasher in Texas as well as other cuts in the defense budget to help close the $300 billion federal deficit.

As for cuts in Social Security, Studds said he doubts the president will follow through with a plan to curb cost of living adjustments.

"I think it is entirely possible that in the context of across-the-board, everybody asked to bear a little of the burden of the sacrifice which we're going to have if we're going to be serious about deficit reduction, then we might look at upper income recipients of Social Security in terms of making higher percentages in their Social Security income subject to taxes. That's my guess and that's much more likely to be a request from the President. I think that would be a fairer thing because you're asking people who can afford it to bear the burden rather than the poorest of the poor who would be affected by it."

Family leave bill

Studds is a strong supporter of the family leave legislation signed into law last week. The law requires companies with more than 50 employees to give workers up to 12 weeks of unpaid leave for family and medical emergencies, including a death or birth in a family.

Fire Leaves Three Homeless

A West Quincy family has been left temporarily homeless after a garage fire Monday afternoon caused $20,000 damage to their townhouse.

Francis and Nancy Campbell of 210 Centre St. fled the fire, which was reported at 5:26 p.m. and declared out at 6:35 p.m., with their 1-year-old child. None of the family members were injured.

Fire officials said the fire began after an extension cord in the garage apparently short-circuited. Much of the damage to the family's living quarters was due to the fact that a door had been left ajar, which allowed much of the smoke and heat from the garage to enter the apartment, officials said.

The Campbells will not be able to live in the townhouse, which was left without power, for a few days, according to officials.

A Rose Is A Rose NOT!!!

Ever wonder how some florist shops and street vendors can sell roses at those unbelievable prices? The answer is simply where the rose has been grown.

Local roses are the most expensive, however they are the longest lasting and the most fragrant. You can expect to see them priced from $50<sup>00</sup>-$70<sup>00</sup> a dozen depending on stem length.

California roses are probably the next best bet if you can't find local grown roses. They will not have quite the longevity but are not a bad second choice. Price wise $30<sup>00</sup>-$50<sup>00</sup> will be the going rate, again depending on stem length.

Finally, and only out of desperation or lack of funds, consider the South American Roses; longevity 1-2 days; price-$15<sup>00</sup>-$30<sup>00</sup> per dozen.

Since this holiday is very much subject to the laws of supply and demand, shop early for the best selections in color and variety of valentine flowers.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Valentine's Day is for children, lovers and romantics. Well, essentially, yes, but when it comes to affairs of the heart, everyone is included.

Valentines need not be expensive. A happy note written in your own handwriting... a telephone call to someone who might not otherwise receive a call.

Some people find it hard to say "I love you", but on Valentine's Day they express that sentiment with special remembrances or gifts. It is also a day that "mushy" sentiments on brightly colored paper are not really taken seriously (i.e. Valentines exchanged by children at school). There, the important thing is the number of Valentines received, not the sentiment. As people mature, the sentiment becomes more important than the number.

It takes only a little time to send a valentine, or a note, or to make a telephone call to someone, especially someone who is a little "out of circulation" these days. A little surprise gift will make that someone feel special, and you'll feel good too!

For those times when the darkness lingers

With the loss of a loved one through death, it is helpful to be able to share the feelings and emotions which we all experience.

For most of us, there are family members, clergy, and friends who are ready to listen in a caring way.

Yet, there are those who find it helpful to share their grief with someone outside their immediate circle of support.

Because of our continuing commitment to the families we serve, Keohane Funeral Service is pleased to announce that Dr. Sherry Johnson has joined our staff as a Grief

Donovan Hits 1000 At North Quincy

By TOM SULLIVAN

The North Quincy boys' basketball team is having a disappointing season, but the Raider fans had something to cheer about last Friday night when Sean Donovan became only North's second player to hit the 1000-career point plateau, although North bowed to Weymouth, 63-52, dropping its record to 8-9.

The Raiders played a Bridgewater-Raynham Tuesday night, will host Quincy Friday night at 7 o'clock and will wind up the regular season next Wednesday at Boston College High.

Needing seven points to reach 1000 career points, Donovan scored 11 and reached the cherished 1000-point mark with 9:51 to play, scoring off an offensive rebound.

The only other North Quincy player to reach 1000 points was Doug Grutchfield, one of the Raiders' all-time greats, back in 1957.

Grutchfield went on to have a fine college career, played with several top semi-pro teams and is now head coach at Fitchburg High.

"The season has been disappointing, as I thought we would improve on last year's 15-5 record," said coach Ted Stevenson. "We have been in most games but just haven't come up with the key baskets. And event team seemed to play its best against us.

"I'm glad to see Sean hit 1000 points; he's had a terrific career for us."

North was outclassed on the boards in the Weymouth game as it grabbed only nine, while the Wildcats pulled down 31.

Weymouth, which hit seven of its first nine shots, including two three-pointers each from Brian Scott and Joe Paolucci, was in control throughout the game.

The Wildcats raced out to 21-4 but North cut the lead to 27-20 when Luke Sheets (11 points) hit a layup.

"We just weren't getting the inside play that we have been getting," said Stevenson. "But you can't take anything away from Weymouth, they did everything they had to do."

Bo Smith (16 points) hit a three-pointer for North to pull the Raiders to within 31-23 as the second half opened. Donovan stole a pass and hit Smith for a fast-break layup to make it 35-28. With 6:32 left, Smith hit another to pull the Raiders within four, 46-42, but the Wildcats went on a 9-0 run to pull safely away.

Earlier in the week North lost to Taunton, 72-58, as Sheets had another big night with 17 points. Big Brian Raftery scored 14 and Donovan added 11. Taunton's Keith Aldridge had a big night, scoring 25 points.

coach Eddie Miller, Scituate and Stoughton.

Last Friday the Presidents were blown out for one of the few times when Barnstable romped, 91-70.

Robbie Kane, who has had a tremendous season, continued his fine play with 21 points and Matt Dwyer chipped in with 12 points.

Earlier last week Quincy was edged by Falmouth, 58-55, when the Cape team hit four free throws in the last minute.

Kane had 11 points and six assists and junior forward Joe Kelly had 11 points.

NORTH QUINCY High freshman sensation Sara Stanton scored 21 points, including 16 in the first half, to pace the Red Raiders past Archbishop Williams, 57-43, in recent action.

RED RAIDER Regina Murphy watches two of her 10 points drop against the Bishops of Archbishop Williams High. North's 57-43 upset victory upped its record to 6-8. AWHs fell to 10-5.

Stanton Shines For North

The North Quincy girls' basketball team's season has been one of ups and downs, but the team boasts one of the top freshman players in the area.

Sara Stanton had been leading the North scorers in almost every game and she shows signs of being one of the best players in many years for North.

Last Friday the North girls lost to Weymouth, 61-54, dropping their record to 8-9.

Earlier in the week she has a season-high 29 points as North topped Taunton, 59-44.

Eileen McDonough also had a fine all-around game as the North girls opened up a big 37-14 halftime lead.

The team hosted Bridgewater-Raynham Tuesday night, will play at Quincy tonight (Thursday) at 7 o'clock and will bring down the curtain on the regular season next Wednesday at home against Stoughton.

In last week's loss to Weymouth Stanton continued to lead the team's offense with 24

In an earlier game the North girls turned in one of their best performances to top a strong Abp. Williams team, 57-43. The Bishops had entered the game with a 10-5 record.

Stanton had another big night with 21 points, 16 in the first half, scoring all her points from inside or from the foul line.

Regina Murphy and Maureen McCarthy had 10 points each and Joanne Curreri added nine.

North went on a 11-2 run in the first three minutes of the second half to go ahead by 17 points and Williams couldn't get much closer.

Holmes To Attend NU On 4-Year Scholarship

Duane Holmes, 6-4, 255-pound Quincy High offensive tackle, has signed a letter of intent to attend Northeastern University on a full four-year scholarship.

"Duane was one of the best linemen I've coached and several schools were interested in him," said Coach Jack Raymer.

Holmes was named to the Boston Herald all-scholastic team and was an Old Colony League first team all-star.

Tough Week For Quincy

It was a tough week for the Quincy boys' basketball team, which lost three games to drop its record to 5-11 with four games to play.

Last Saturday the Presidents dropped a 77-73 decision at Plymouth in a game that had been postponed earlier by snow.

Quincy hosted Sliver Lake Tuesday, will play at North Quincy Friday night at 7 o'clock and will compete the regular season next Tuesday and Wednesday when it hosts its annual tournament featuring Marshfield, coached by former North Quincy all-state player and

Quincy Women's Look At UMass-Boston

There is a distinct Quincy touch to the UMass-Boston women's basketball team with an assistant coach and three players from the city.

Hockey

North Tourney Hopes Still Much Alive

The North Quincy hockey team lost to undefeated Weymouth last Saturday, 5-0, but the Red Raiders still have a good chance of making the state tournament once again.

North's record dropped to 9-5-1 (6-5-1 in the Old Colony League).

With five games remaining, North needs five points to again qualify for the tournament.

The Raiders have a tough schedule ahead with undefeated Milton (12-0-2), Westwood (11-3-1), B.C. High, Bridgewater-Raynham and Quincy remaining.

They played at B-R last night (Wednesday) will meet Quincy Saturday night at 7:50 at the Youth Arena, will face Milton Monday at 7:45 p.m. at Milton's Uline Rink, and will host Westwood next Wednesday at 6:40 p.m.

Saturday's game with Weymouth was nip and tuck until the third period with the Wildcats (14-0-1) holding a 1-0 lead.

But they exploded for four goals in the final period as the Raiders suffered a breakdown on defense and the goals weren't all the fault of goalie Sean Connolly.

"Sean played a fine game and made some great saves," said coach Tom Benson. "The defense, which had been excellent for two periods, just had a little breakdown and Weymouth, an outstanding team, took advantage."

Earlier in the week, North Quincy defeated Plymouth, 4-2, with Dave Pacino scoring the game winner with 10:40 left in the game.

Jim Sapienza, Brian Fitzgerald and Mike DesRoche, one of the league's top scorers with 34 points, had the other Raider goals.

But Quincy's Hopes Dashed

Any hopes of qualifying for the state tournament for the first time in more than 10 years were ended for the Quincy High hockey team as it dropped a 5-3 decision to Barnstable last Saturday, dropping its record to 7-8-2 (4-8-1 in the Old Colony League).

With three games remaining the Presidents cannot earn enough points to qualify for the tournament.

Quincy hosted Silver Lake last night (Wednesday), will face North Quincy Saturday night at 7:50 at the Youth Arena and will wind up the season Feb. 17 at Taunton at 6 p.m.

The loss at frigid Barnstable's outdoor rink was the fourth in a row for the Presidents, who had previously lost three straight by a single goal.

"It has been very frustrating," said coach Bob Sylvia. "The boys have played fine hockey consistently and I honestly thought we had a chance at making the tournament, especially when we had a five-game unbeaten streak."

"Particularly frustrating was a 2-1 loss to Falmouth before the Barnstable game. We outshot them, 29-18, but their goalie (Chris Greeley) had a fantastic game, making many spectacular saves."

It was the same story at Barnstable with the Presidents having 30 shots on net but the Barnstable goalie made all kinds of outstanding saves.

Barnstable took a 2-0 lead in the first period and added three goals in the second period.

Quincy scored its first goal in the second period with Dan Mann scoring the goal with an assist for Dave Mullen.

In the third session Jamie Schatzl scored an unassisted goal and Sean McArdle scored the final goal with Mann and Jeff Craig getting the assists.

In the Falmouth game Quincy trailed by a goal in the closing moments of the game and not only had a power play and a face off in the Falmouth end, but added a sixth skater by pulling the goalie.

Unfortunately, the Presidents were unable to win the faceoff.

"This was a quality Old Colony League game," said Sylvia.

"I look at the positives here, there's nothing else to do. Falmouth (11-3-2, 8-2-2 in the league) doesn't give up any quality shots and we were in a bit of a scoring drought. We played well defensively and goalie Mark Smith (16 saves) had a good night."

Quincy took an early 1-0 lead with its lone goal by Schatzl with Dan Morrell having an assist.

McPhee praised his assistants, Peter Chrisom, Jr., Tom Carter, Earl Metzler, Tom Fitzgerald and Pete Zoia for their contributions. The players were also introduced and applauded.

ALL TYPES OF CARPENTRY AND REMODELING

51 HANCOCK, QUINCY

YOU AUTO KNOW

by Tony Centorino, Bill Starkie and Kevin McGroarty

CALCULATING ESTIMATED MILEAGE

Did anyone ever wonder how the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency calculates its mileage estimates for new cars? These are the figures that new car buyers use to judge and compare the highway and city mileage that an automobile can be expected to attain. These numbers are reached by placing a car on a treadmill-like instrument (a dynamometer) that places loads on drive wheels to simulate wind, acceleration, etc. To calculate "city" mileage, the car is subjected to a simulation of a 7.5 mile, stop-and-go trip at an average 20 MPH. The trip takes 23 minutes, has 18 stops, and 18 percent of the time is spent idling. For the "highway" test, the car is given a mix of non-city driving in a 10-mile, non-stop trip at 48MPH.

HINT: The initial labeled mileage values are adjusted down (city - 10 percent, highway - 22 percent) to bring them closer to real-world driving values.

South Shore Bank Receives State Award For Community Reinvestment

South Shore Bank, headquartered in Quincy, has received a State Treasurer's Award for Community Reinvestment, announces bank President Forrest R. Cook Jr.

The award recognizes outstanding community reinvestment performance by state banks. South Shore Bank has received an "outstanding" Community Reinvestment Act (CRA) rating from federal examiners.

South Shore Bank officials were invited to the State House to accept the award from State Treasurer Joe Malone. In addition, state officials are planning a visit to South Shore Bank headquarters early in 1993.

The Community Reinvestment Act was initiated in 1977 by the Federal Reserve in an effort to mandate that financial institutions provide banking services and credit to low- and middle-income neighborhoods. Federal bank regulators rate individual bank CRA compliance with one of four performance "grades," as follows: outstanding, satisfactory, needs to improve, and substantial noncompliance.

"On behalf of the officers, directors and staff of South Shore Bank, I would like to express our great pride in receiving the State Treasurer's Award, said Cook. "We are committed to keeping the lines of communication open between our banking locations and the communities which we serve," as part of our ongoing obligation to serving the needs of neighborhood residents and businesses."

Ayers Neighborhood Meeting

Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers will hold a neighborhood meeting tonight (Thursday), at 7:30 p.m. at the Atlantic Neighborhood Center, 12 Hunt St.

Issues to be discussed include the application of Tullio's Restaurant, 150 Hancock St., for a beer and wine license and transfer of the common victualers license and the application of the Tamanny Club, a non-alcoholic social club, to locate at 92 Sagamore St.

Ayers said the purpose of the meeting is to allow residents to voice any concerns and allow the applicants to present their plans.

"I want to protect my constituents' interests and this allows them the opportunity to scrutinize the proposals before the applicants go before the License Board," Ayers.

Also, John Powers of the Quincy Men's Softball League will be present to discuss the upcoming season at Welcome Young Field with area residents.

Seeks $5,000 Appropriation

Mayor Wants To Hire Consultant-Lawyer In 700-Foot Tower Issue

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Mayor James Sheets says he plans to hire a consultant-lawyer to obtain information on a 700-foot communications tower in West Quincy which has recently caused concerns among residents in both Quincy and Milton.

Sheets said Tuesday he would seek a $5,000 appropriation from the City Council at its Tuesday night meeting which would be used to hire the consultant.

The mayor's decision follows the recent revelation that Frank DiRico, developer of the tower, told the Quincy Zoning Board at its July 9, 1991 hearing that his tower would have little, if any, effect on the surrounding neighborhoods.

"There's been a lot of questions on this (tower situation) and it's time that those questions are answered," said Sheets. "I am not satisfied about what I have been hearing about the (zoning) process."

A tape recording of the hearing shows that DiRico told the board "the visual impact of this (tower) will be minimal." Neighbors have expressed disbelief that the Zoning Board could have approved such a large tower without consulting area residents.

Sheets said the situation called for someone with an expertise in the matter.

"This is a major step, investing this money (in the consultant), said Sheets. "This is the beginning of the definition of the city's position on this issue."

"I without question share the concerns of (Ward 4) Councillor (Thomas) Fabrizio and the residents in both Quincy and Milton."

Sheets said Fabrizio, who sent a letter opposing the tower to the Zoning Board prior to the hearing, was aware of Sheets' intention to hire the consultant and was complete agreement with his actions. Fabrizio was out of town Tuesday and could not be reached for comment.

Residents of both Quincy and Milton have expressed concern over the high visibility of the tower, located off Ricciuti Drive on the Quincy-Milton line, as well as potential harm from radio waves, saying both their health and property values have been placed in danger.

One Bid Received For Development Sheets Recommends No Demolition For Hancock Lot Project

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

The city received one bid for the proposed Hancock parking lot retail development project Tuesday as Mayor James Sheets handed down his recommendations for the project, one of which calls for no demolition of abutting buildings.

Dickinson Development Corporation, 1266 Furnace Brook Parkway, Quincy, submitted the lone bid to the Planning and Community Development Office minutes before the 2 p.m. deadline Tuesday.

Sheets, who made his recommendations before reviewing the Dickinson bid, said the developer would have to follow his recommendations for the project to proceed.

"The response we have received from Dickinson would have to fit into this. My recommendations are the mold from which the project will fit."

The mayor's recommendations call for a new retail area with at least 75,000-square feet and "amenities for seniors and families." His outline does not recommend razing any existing buildings housing businesses around the lot located across from the Quincy District Court. The project would essentially "rise up" from the parking lot.

According to the mayor's other recommendations, the project must:

"Contain 'dead space' and should be used to provide a greater retail mix for Downtown Quincy to preserve the existing major retail stores, including Woolworth's, Colman's, Hobbytown, Cummings and Barkers.

Tuesday's Storm May Deplete Reserve $251,690 Spent On Snow, Ice Removal

The city has spent nearly all of its money for snow and ice removal this winter and Tuesday's storm was expected to deplete the balance of that reserve.

According to figures furnished by Auditor Robert Foy, Quincy spent $251,690 of the budgeted $300,000 for snow and ice removal before Tuesday, leaving a balance of $48,310.

"That balance should cover one major storm. (This storm) will probably exhaust that," Foy said Tuesday as heavy snow fell outside his second floor office window at City Hall.

"If we have to hire equipment and truck drivers, we'll exhaust that (the snow budget balance."

If the snow and ice removal reserve is spent, it will mark the first time in four years that the city has exhausted that budget. In 1989, Quincy spent nearly $400,000 to clear snow and ice from city streets. Besides the $300,000 reserve, another $98,000 was spent, Foy said.

When the city exceeds its snow and ice budget, money is transferred from free cash. If the amount exceeds free cash, the auditor said money is taken from the next fiscal year budget.

"We have free cash so it would come out of free cash this year," he added.

Of the $251,690 spent on snow removal before Tuesday, $77,000 was spent on salt and $8,000 on sand. Foy said salt and sand are purchased by the state on bid; cities and towns including Quincy buy the materials at the bid price.

In addition, $57,013 was spent on overtime for city personnel manning trucks and sanders and performing other storm-related duties. Another $30,681 was spent hiring additional trucks and drivers for two storms needing additional personnel.

Foy said the city has also expended $39,308 maintaining and repairing DPW trucks and sanders which have been damaged.

Quincy Man Charged With Murdering Friend

A 20-year-old Quincy man was arraigned Tuesday in Quincy District Court and held on $300,000 cash bail after being charged over the weekend with murdering a friend in a confrontation over stolen drugs.

Clerk Magistrate Arthur Tobin said Kevin Cunningham of 32 Gilmore St. appeared before Judge Paul Moriarty and pleaded not guilty to the Feb. 5 murder of Patrick Gullins, 22, of 39 Davis St.

Cunningham was arrested Feb. 12 after he allegedly accused Gullins of stealing cocaine and shot him in the chest with a .38-caliber handgun, according to police. Cunningham had earlier told police the gun had fired accidentally while he was holding it.

Gullins died about an hour after the shooting at Quincy Hospital.

Tobin said that while Cunningham was scheduled to appear again in Quincy District Court for a March 3 conference, that might not actually come to pass.

"He (Cunningham) may not be coming back," said Tobin. "District Attorney Tom Brennan in Dedham probably will have him indicted before a grand jury."

Plans To Rent Inn Kitchen As Separate Business

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The Quincy License Board Tuesday continued for one week a request from the manager of food operations at Quincy Bay Inn to rent the inn's kitchen facilities as a separate business.

Kenan Nacar told the board the new operation, which would be called Five Star Pizza & More, would primarily focus on delivery and take-out orders with a menu consisting of pizza, chicken wings, salad and sandwiches.

"We're going to run a first-class operation all the way," said Nacar, who noted that no alcohol would be served with the food.

Nacar, who said he had over 14 years of experience in the food industry, added that because of today's economy "the food service operation was becoming a heavy burden" on Quincy Bay Inn, which is owned by his father, Al Nacar.

Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers, who said he had just learned of the request, said he would not be able to make a decision on whether to support the license until he was able to observe the site with City Clerk Joseph Shea and Building Inspector Matthias Mulvey.

Because of the board's rule that all requests having to do with Common Victualer and/or All-Alcoholic Licenses be reviewed twice, the matter was continued for one week. The board agreed that the seven days would be enough time for Ayers, Shea and Mulvey to obtain the information they needed.

Mayor Wants To Hire Consultant-Lawyer

In addition, the Town of Milton is considering suing the City of Quincy, alleging the town was not properly notified about the project.

Zoning Board Chairwoman Maureen Mazrimas has said the board voted unanimously to approve the tower primarily because it would improve communications for public safety, such as police, fire and ambulance services.

Police and fire officials did not send letters to the Zoning Board supporting the project, although Norfolk-Bristol Ambulance and Building Inspector Matthias Mulvey did.

1,400 Bricks Sold

'Walk Of Names' Passes Halfway Mark

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The city's "Walk of Names" is now more than halfway towards its goal, according to a spokesperson for the project.

Georgia Peirce of P.R. Etc., the company marketing the endeavor, said approximately 1,400 of the 2,500 bricks for the project had been sold as of Valentine's Day.

Although 1,200 of the bricks had been purchased by the end of December after sales flourished during the holiday season, Peirce said that a January dropoff had been anticipated.

"Things are still right on course, or a little ahead of course, as far as we're (P.R. Etc.) concerned," said Peirce. "We expected January would not be a very busy month, and we expect it will pick up in the next few weeks."

"Our feeling is that a lot of people who are planning to place orders haven't done so yet. We've heard a lot of people say, 'We have to get our orders in.'"

Peirce added that her company plans to aggressively market the project now that the winter season is coming to a close.

"With the spring approaching, we want to really push to get the project well underway," she said.

Peirce offered no specifics on what the company's plans are, saying only that there are "a couple of things in the works that are too preliminary to talk about."

City officials, who introduced plans for the "Walk of Names" last Nov. 30, are relying on the sales of the 2,500 bricks to assure the funding necessary to start the brick plaza project next summer. Aside from preparing the site, no municipal money will be used for the project, which calls for a new brick plaza in the area in front of the City Hall annex.

The dark red bricks, which will replace the present granite pavers, will be engraved with names from people of the past, present and future to form a "Walk of Names."

For a donation of $50, any Quincy resident, business or group can have a personalized brick with up to 15 characters each. Officials hope to begin construction on the project this summer and to have it completed in the fall.

Peirce said P.R. Etc. had "no specific date" in mind as to when sales of the bricks should be completed.

"We just want to have them sold as early in the season as possible so that as many people as possible can enjoy it," she said.

Order forms for the bricks can be obtained in the City Hall annex lobby. Bricks can also be ordered directly by calling 376-3676.

Morrissey Includes Shipyard In Development Package

Senator Michael Morrissey announces that the State Senate has included a provision in the recently passed Economic Development Package which would change the definition of an Economic Target Area to include the Fore River Shipyard in Quincy.

The amendment, offered on the Senate floor by Morrissey, establishes a new criteria for defining an Economic Target Area within a municipality as "owned by a state agency or authority...which exceeds 50 acres and such land has, within the last 10 years, been used to manufacture or repair maritime vessels and is zoned for development or industrial use..." according to Morrissey.

"This amendment gives the City of Quincy added flexibility and potential developers added incentive in developing the shipyard property," Morrissey said. "It will make it easier for a shipbuilding operation to purchase the property from the MWRA, by allowing the city to offer a buyer tax incentives and infrastructure improvements."

"We need to insure that the city has the tools necessary to return the shipyard property to the tax rolls when the MWRA is done with the harbor cleanup."

The bill now goes to the House of Representatives for action.

Garden Cafe Expansion Gets Board's Approval

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The Quincy License Board Tuesday granted a request from The Garden Cafe, 653 Southern Artery for permission to expand its premises from 4,000 to 5,800 square feet.

The matter had been continued from the board's Feb. 9 meeting because of the absence of Police Chief Francis Mullen, who had told the board he wanted to be present when a decision on the license was made.

Previously the matter had to be continued from the board's Feb. 2 meeting because of the board's rule that all requests having to do with All-Alcoholic and/or Common Victualer Licenses be reviewed twice.

Mullen said Tuesday that he was in favor of the expansion.

"You run a good business there, and I wish you the best of luck," Mullen told Atty. Richard Barry, representative of restaurant president Donna Buccheri and her family. None of the Buccheri family members were able to attend the meeting.

Ward 2 Councillor Theodore DeCristofaro said Tuesday he also was in support of the expansion. Building Inspector Matthias Mulvey, who had said at the board's Feb. 2 meeting he wanted to observe the parking situation at the cafe, said he had been to the site and that parking was adequate.

No one spoke in opposition of the expansion either Tuesday or at the Feb. 2 meeting.

SENATOR MICHAEL MORRISSEY; Peter Kolson, Quincy Housing Authority Director of Maintenance; Frank Kearns, Quincy Housing Authority; and State Rep. Michael Bellotti attended a recent lobbying day sponsored by the National Association of Housing and Redevelopment Officials at the State House.

Liquor License Sought For Quincy Point Eatery

The Quincy License Board Tuesday continued for one week a request from Cannon's Corporation, Inc. d/b/a Cannon's for a Common Victualer-All Alcoholic License at 520 Washington St.

The site previously was the location of the Knotty Pine Restaurant and Demetri's Restaurant.

Atty. Louis Cassis told the board the new restaurant, which would be called the Fore River Neighborhood Eatery, would be a "family-type" restaurant with a bar in the center, similar to the setup of Finian's Restaurant. He added that about "60 percent food and 40 percent liquor" would be served at the restaurant.

"It will be food-oriented restaurant, not a liquor-oriented restaurant," said Cassis, who noted that he and Cannon's President Martin Kelly III would not be seeking a license for live entertainment at the site.

Kelly told the board there was "ample parking...34 spots" at the site, adding that "it's a great location and I'm confident we will serve a great product." He added that he had 12 years of experience in the restaurant business with his family in South Boston and elsewhere.

Ward 2 Councillor Theodore DeCristofaro told the board he would support the license as long as the new eatery is not showcased as a "sports bar."

"Let the record show that this will not be a sports bar," said

DeCristofaro. "I've already had (phone) calls (speculating) that this would be a sports bar. It's not going to be a sports bar."

The matter was continued for one week because of the board's rule that all requests having to do with Common Victualer and/or All-Alcoholic Licenses be reviewed twice.

Building Inspector Matthias Mulvey told Cassis and Kelly that Mulvey and DeCristofaro would have to see exactly what kind of signage was planned for restaurant. The board also told Cassis and Kelly that a copy of the full plans for the restaurant would have to be submitted to all board members before the next meeting.

Place Quincy College Under Board of Trustees

Editor, The Quincy Sun:
Is it possible that the pettifogging harassment of the president of Quincy College is motivated by some long range political ambition?

Is it possible that there is a lamentable lack of knowledge possessed by the carping critics who belabor petty issues without any recognition of the consistent accomplishment of Dr. O.
Clayton Johnson?

I would like to call attention to Rachel Cohen's column in Monday's Boston Herald:
"Public Higher Ed does it wrong" (p. 23). A careful comparison of the administrative antics suggested for the State Community Colleges and the professional practices of the administration of Quincy College indicates that the administration of Quincy College has achieved a solid and continuing success without being top-heavy with a surplus of administrative positions and without being involved in the chicanery of title changes to achieve unmerited salary increases.

There have been no recent tuition increases at Quincy College; students can find the courses they want available; and the funding of Quincy College does not require a massive infusion of taxpayer money. (In fact, for a number of years there has been no support from taxpayer money).

Finally, the mayor, the City Council, and the School Committee are urged to proceed with all possible haste to institute the proper mechanics to place the College under appropriate administration and control of a Board of Trustees. I am sure that the Governance Committee appointed recently by the mayor will move with all logical and informed haste to accomplish this end result.

Quincy Post Office Thanks Customers, Employees

Editor, The Quincy Sun:
Now that everyone has taken down their normal holiday decorations and life has pretty much returned to normal, I would like to thank the thousands of Postal customers who helped make this holiday season a success in Quincy by mailing early and wrapping their packages with care.

I also would like to thank the employees of the Quincy Post Office for putting forth extra effort under demanding circumstances to make this a happy holiday for all our customers.

Many employees worked overtime when they would rather have been home with their families or loved ones—helping you mail your last minute packages during our extended window hours and even working on Sundays. On Christmas Day, our employees lifted many peoples' spirits by delivering Express Mail and parcels.

I am particularly proud of our employees here in Quincy because they focused on the needs of our customers and came through when you needed them most. "We Delivered

Closing A Colorful Chapter

The death of Carl Anderson closes a colorful and controversial chapter in Quincy's political history.

Anderson, who served in the City Council for 20 consecutive years, was himself a colorful and controversial figure who relished a good fight and usually could find one. Or, one found him.

He is best remembered for his bitter feud with City Manager William Deegan who had him indicted in 1952.

The six-count indictment charged him with violating Quincy's then Plan E charter by interfering with administrative affairs: (1) Attempting to have a city employee—a disabled veteran—shifted from a city garbage truck to another job. (2) Seeking to discharge a pathologist at Quincy Hospital. (3) Trying to have three persons appointed to the Health Department, Police Department and hospital.

But it took a Norfolk County Superior Court jury only 73 minutes of deliberation to acquit Anderson on all six counts. He wept happily at the verdict.

He never forgot or forgave Deegan. At one time there were reports that both were carrying guns (Anderson was a jeweler) and feelings were so strong between the pair that City Hall observers thought there might be a High Noon on Hancock St.

Plan E was voted out in 1958 after a stormy existence and Quincy returned to the Plan A form of government with strong mayor that it has today.

Anderson, who was an early supporter of Deegan's when he arrived from Superior, Wisconsin in 1950 to become Quincy's first city manager, liked to take a bow as playing a major role in ousting Plan E and returning Quincy to the Plan A form of government.

Many agreed that the charges brought against Anderson by Deegan led to the downfall of Plan E although Deegan had moved on before it was voted out in 1958.

Deegan was gone but Anderson never forgot him. Through the rest of his life, the mere mention of Deegan's name turned Anderson into an erupting verbal volcano.

Ten years after his acquittal, the City Council in 1962 unanimously voted to have the city reimburse Anderson for the $1,700 in legal fees he incurred for his defense.

Councillor John Quinn said it would "rectify an injustice." Council President Charles Shea, who filed the special legislation as a state representative commented: "This will make anyone who might want to harass or indict officials to think twice."

"It seems unfair to me an elected official of the

Recycling Committee Meeting Feb. 17

The Quincy Recycling Committee was scheduled to meet Wednesday at 7 p.m. in the second floor conference room of City Hall annex.

Items on the agenda were:

- Tentative, Amy Perry, Squantum resident and chairperson of the Recycling Initiative. Campaign, speak briefly about the direction of state policy after the defeat of Question 3 in November.

•Update from Rob Gilman on proposed new advertisements.

•Details for the Recycling Lesson Plan for the public schools.

•Details for magazine drive.

•Begin work on Household Hazardous Waste collection scheduled in May.

•Open discussion on tree planting.

people could not even converse with city employees or make suggestions for department of employees under Section 107, Chapter 43. (Interfering with Plan E administrative affairs.)

"It lays the axe at the foot of the tree of liberty" thundered Councillor David McIntosh.

After the council's vote to reimburse him the $1,700, Anderson said: "I feel now I have been vindicated."

Anderson's political career soon came to an end when he was defeated for re-election in 1963. But the old fight was still in him.

McINTOSH

A short while after the election, he took on a door-to-door distributor in court. Anderson said he hired the man to deliver 25,000 campaign circulars for him in that election. Anderson produced witnesses who testified the circulars weren't delivered. He won a $1,100 judgment.

"I'd have won the election if he had delivered them," Anderson insisted.

He toyed with the idea of a political comeback in 1965 but stayed in retirement.

But he always kept an eye on City Hall doings from his River St. home in Quincy Point. And anytime this writer mentioned Deegan's name in a column Anderson was on the phone with a few choice words about Deegan.

Anderson was the last surviving member of the 1958-59 City Council. On that council with him were: Thomas Burgin, James McIntyre, Edna Austin, the city's first woman councillor, David McIntosh, Joseph Brett, John Quinn, Charles Shea and William Ellis.

Throughout his political career, Anderson kept his age a secret. He was 89 when he died Feb. 11.

He once said if he could re-live his stormy role in Quincy's political history he wouldn't change a thing.

In 1964 he told this writer:

"Looking back over the years, I wish to go on record as saying if I were to do it again I'd do things exactly as saying if I were to do it again I'd do things exactly as I did.

"Without counting just how many votes I'd gain or lose on any issue that came before the council.

"The verbal lashings I gave certain department heads were all well deserved and the lashings I gave certain individuals who set themselves up as dictators were equally well deserved."

He outlived just about all of his colleagues, supporters and critics who were part of that colorful and controversial chapter in Quincy's political history.

Finds Therapy There 'Mind-Boggling'

Physical Therapist Returns From Volunteer Service In South Africa

By MICHAEL WHALEN
Alfred Roncarati is used to helping people.

As a registered physical therapist in Quincy, Roncarati, 52, routinely works with patients suffering from sprained backs, rotator injuries and other physical ailments.

But he never saw anything quite like what he witnessed during a recent four-week visit to Transkei, South Africa, as a volunteer for the international organization Orthopedics Overseas.

"It was mind-boggling," said Roncarati. "Physical therapy in Transkei is not the same as physical therapy in the United States."

Roncarati, who said he joined Orthopedics Overseas at the suggestion of a colleague, noted that there are several ways in which physical therapy in South Africa differs from what is offered in this country.

"There's virtually no (physical therapy) equipment," he said. "There's a shortage of every component that is used in physical therapy; it does not exist in Transkei."

"Also, one is considered ready to go home from a hospital as soon as he can walk, whether it be with one crutch, two crutches, a limp or whatever. Physical therapy there just means improving someone functionally so that he can ambulate well enough to be discharged."

Roncarati, who volunteered at Bedford Hospital, a 160-bed orthopedic facility in Transkei, said there is also a "shortage of professional people" in the area which makes the need for volunteers particularly crucial.

"There's only one physical therapist at the hospital," he said. "That's why volunteers are needed, to help supplement the patient load."

Roncarati said most of the patients either suffer from tuberculosis, which is "rampant" in South Africa because of the lack of pasteurized milk and "unclean" living conditions; or "multiple-trauma" injuries usually sustained in car accidents. South African roads are often crowded with cows and other animals, Roncarati said, and natives usually travel in mini-vans known as "combies" which hold up to 12 people but also increase the chance of multiple injuries in one accident.

A number of the patients are paraplegics and quadriplegics who suffered the impairment of their limbs through either accident or disease, according to Roncarati.

"Most of the trauma population we just tried to help walk," he said. "They're very willing to try and walk because they want to leave the hospital as soon as possible. Usually they go from the parallel bars to the walkers to the crutches and then they're gone."

"The paraplegics and quadriplegics, whose stays in the hospital were much longer, we helped through stretching and strengthening exercises designed for the neurologically impaired."

PHYSICAL THERAPIST Alfred Roncarati of Quincy (right) with a patient suffering from tuberculosis of the spine at the Bedford Hospital in Transkei, South Africa. Roncarati recently spent four weeks at the hospital as a volunteer for the international organization Orthopedics Overseas.

Orthopedics Overseas volunteers are generally responsible for paying their own travel expenses, although Roncarati said he did receive some assistance from the University of Massachusetts at Boston School of Nursing, where he is on the faculty.

Regardless of any personal cost, however, he said the trip was well worth it.

"I (went to Transkei because I) wanted to take a little turn in life and give something back to society, and I gained more from the experience than I gave," he said. "I learned about culture and geography and politics, and most importantly, I realized how much we have in this country. I left with a greater appreciation of what we all have, and that's sincere."

"This trip is not for everyone, but anyone who makes a trip like this will become a more enriched human being—you can't help it."

Quincy's Yesterdays

Austin Urges Cross Town Connector

City Councillor Edna B. Austin urged construction of a cross-town route connecting the coming Southeast Expressway and Southern Artery in order to protect and expand the downtown retail section.

"We must make a start this year," she said, "and by a start I mean an adequate study so that we will have our plans made by the time the expressway is completed."

"Off street parking has in the past few years caused Quincy's shopping and business center to develop a point where it is the envy of many communities in this section of the country."

"But we cannot afford to let traffic bypass Quincy Center on both sides."

SURGERY UNDER HYPNOSIS

Two hospital employees underwent surgery at City Hospital—one for extraction of infected teeth, the other for removal of a scar on the arm—under hypnosis, rather than the usual anesthesia.

"To the best of my knowledge no other hospital in Massachusetts has used hypnosis as an anesthetic in such operations," said Dr. Naif L. Simon, director of the Anesthesia Department, who performed the hypnosis.

Dr. Sidney R. Cutler operated on Mary Sullivan for removal of the teeth and Dr. William P. Ridder operated on the arm of Elsie McKinley. Both women returned to work minutes after the surgery.

LAND SWAP OKAYED

The City Council authorized completion of a land swap between the city and the Grossman interests which would clear the way for Grossman to construct an office building on the site of Quincy Depot.

Grossman would give the city a plot of vacant land behind City Hall in return for a 50-year lease on the depot land. Grossman would also provide a waiting room for New Haven railroad passengers.

JUNIOR COLLEGE URGED

The directors of Newton and Holyoke Community Colleges, the only ones in the state, advised the School Committee to appoint a director and get moving on the job of establishing a Quincy Junior College.

James Laurits of Newton and George Frost of Holyoke said their schools were set up in local high schools in 1946 primarily to handle veterans returning to school under the GI Bill.

Flavin of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce announced that Billy De Wolfe Wolfe, the Quincy-born stage and screen actor, will be the guest of honor at the 59th annual meeting April 6 at the Neighborhood Club. A 1948 Packard was $345 at Stonberg Motors, 485 Washington St. Newly organized Cub Pack 7 at the Adams Shore Community Church received its charter from retired Scout Executive W. Edgar Wylie. Three Quincy firefighters, Thomas F. Maguire, Cornelius E. O'Connell and John R. Menz, were certified for promotion to Lieutenant at a yearly salary of $4,450. The City Council authorized the expenditure of $1,000 for an industrial survey of the Old Squantum Naval Air Station. Rep. Clifton H. Baker predicted passage of a bill that would permit Quincy to elect a mayor by popular vote rather than by the City Council as specified under the Plan E charter. Hot cross buns were 39 cents a dozen at the Mohican Market, 29 Chestnut St. Natalie Watson, 18, of 48 Elliot Ave., Montclair, the only female member of the Quincy Civilian Air Patrol unit, was cited for proficiency in an examination on general aviation. "Yellow Rose of Texas," starring Roy Rogers, and "On Top of Old Smokey," with Gene Autry, was playing at the Saturday matinee at the Wollaston Theatre. Vandalism broke into the dog pound and freed four dogs, but Patrolman James A. Mackay said three of them returned wagging their tails, one of them carrying a bone.

Scallops And Fish Delight

It is a rarity at our house when I actually cook for two. But last week when my husband and I were returning home from Boston, our conversation turned to, what else but food! And what we wanted for dinner that night. He suggested one of his favorites, fish in tomato sauce with peas.

However, instead of using just the fish, we decided to mix string beans and scallops as well and the combination was so flavorful!

The following recipe was made for the two of us, but after many years of cooking for a crowd, there was actually enough for four. The next day our son Dom came in around lunch time and he had a helping, and then I sent another portion to our daughter Nancy at work.

Scallop and Fish Delight

About 8 ounces of haddock or cod

About 6 ounces of scallops
1 cup to a cup and a half of tomato sauce (I used crushed tomatoes)

1 small can peas
2 cloves of garlic
1/2 of a small onion (chopped)
1 small can string beans parsley and basil to season salt and pepper to taste
2 tablespoons olive oil

In hot oil, saute the garlic and the onion. Add the tomato sauce and the seasonings. After this has cooked for about 10 minutes covered, place the fish, scallops, and the peas and string beans in the sauce, cover and cook until fish are tender. Our fish was thick so it took a good 15-20 minutes to cook. I made a plain white rice to accompany this entree and it tasted like I spent a lot more time than I did.

Sheriff Marshall To Address Quincy Citizens Association

Norfolk County Sheriff Clifford Marshall of Quincy will be the guest speaker of the Quincy Citizens Association meeting Wednesday, Feb. 24 at 8 p.m. at the Atlantic Neighborhood Center, Hunt St.

Marshall, elected to a fourth term last November, will give an update on the new Norfolk County Correctional Center in Dedham and the situation regarding the Boot Camp in Plymouth. He will also answer questions on crime, treatment and rehabilitation of offenders.

Refreshments will be served.

Early Canada Topic For Historical Society

U. Ernest Buchner, director of the Pilgrim Society and the Pilgrim Hall Museum in Plymouth, will speak at the Quincy Historical Society, 8 Adams St., Thursday, Feb. 25 at 7:30 p.m.

The topic "British North America in the Times of John and John Quincy Adams," will focus on British Canada, its often troubled relations with the U.S. during that time period, and its development during those years of its own identity. The presentation will also provide a perspective on the contemporary Canadian political situation.

Buchner is a Canadian of Loyalist stock, whose ancestors left New Jersey in the 1770s. He has previously served as director of the Ontario Historical Society and the Montclair, N.J. Historical Society.

Admission is free. Refreshments will be served. For more information call 773-1144.

Volunteer Drivers Needed For Cancer Patients

An urgent appeal for volunteer drivers to take South Shore cancer patients to hospitals for treatment has been issued by the South Shore Unit of the American Cancer Society.

The agency operates a free transportation service out of a "hot line" headquarters in Hersey House, Hingham, serving patients in Quincy, Braintree, Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Milton, Norwell, Scituate and Weymouth.

"We have had an unusually large number of requests for transportation recently, and a number of our regular drivers, being retired persons, are not available in the winter months," said Susan McVeigh of Cohasset, chairwoman of the Service Unit of the Committee. "We don't want to turn down any requests because it is impossible for many of the patients to get to the hospitals any other way. The treatment programs often require them to go daily for a period of 5-7 weeks."

The requests have increased partly because publicly-funded agencies, such as elder services, have been cut back and are not able to share as much of the load. Recently the service has been supplying transportation for as many as seven or eight patients a day to different hospitals.

Volunteers are asked to pledge one trip per month, are covered by blanket insurances and may be reimbursed on a mileage basis if necessary.

For more information call the Hersey House office at 749-2535 or the Unit office at 341-4210.

Friends Of The Homeless Seeking Volunteers

Shore families in need from the Weymouth Furniture Bank;

•People willing to provide hospitality services, and a variety of other support services for shelter guests in Quincy, Braintree, Canton, Cohasset, Hanover, Hingham, Holbrook, Randolph, Scituate and Weymouth.

Interested individuals or groups can call Shelley O'Neill at 335-8429, days.

Our Policy On Engagement Photographs And Wedding Announcements

The Quincy Sun will continue to publish photographs with engagement announcements as it always has.

The Sun will also continue to use in wedding announcements the names of all members of the wedding party including maid or matron of honor, best man, parents, bridesmaids, ushers, flower girls and ringbearers, etc.

We invite engaged couples to submit their photos with their announcements and when submitting their wedding photo to include a complete listing of the wedding party.

Black and white photos are preferred. The Sun can convert most color photos to black and white for publication but the photo loses some clarity in the process.

We suggest that when you have your engagement photo taken, you request the studio to send a copy to The Sun with the reminder that The Sun is continuing its policy of publishing engagement photos.

The Sun also publishes articles and photos of wedding anniversaries beginning with the 25th anniversary.

And, as in the past, there is no charge.

Quincy Heights Receives Clinical Excellence Award

Quincy Heights Center for Emotional Health, the 20-bed inpatient psychiatric unit based at Quincy Hospital, has been named "Clinical Program Director of 1992" by Horizon Mental Health Services, Inc.

"This award demonstrates the outstanding effort of our staff to provide innovative, quality patient care," said Ellen Zane, director of Quincy Hospital. "This unit was developed to meet an identified need for mental health services for those over the age of 55 years. Since it began accepting patients in September 1990, this unit has done remarkable work in providing creative and caring treatment to its patients."

Horizon Mental Health Services, Inc. manages 50 inpatient psychiatric programs nationally, of which Quincy Heights is one. In a recent clinical audit by Horizon, these programs were evaluated for their program development and monitoring, assessments, treatment planning, clinical interventions, unit safety and therapeutic milieu. Quincy Heights received one of the highest scores ever achieved by any Horizon program.

The unit specializes in treating depression and anxiety problems over 55, and treats younger adults suffering from emotional illness as well. This is the second national award for the unit. In 1991, Brian Casey, M.A., director of the unit, was named Program Director of the Year by Horizon.

A patient satisfaction survey developed by the Quincy Heights staff is used as a model for other Horizon programs. The survey tool is used to continuously improve patient care.

Staff members have also served as consultants for Horizon in the areas of marketing, quality improvement, program development, survey preparation, regulatory matters, implementation of policies and procedures, and other key clinical areas.

"We have a very dedicated group of professionals who have created an exceptional environment for patients and families to work together to rebuild social, physical and emotional skills," said Halbert

Miller, MD, medical director of Quincy Heights. "The need for this type of program in this region and the quality of our program allowed us to surpass all expectations for utilization of the unit. In fact, we developed an outpatient program for older and younger adults a year ago because the number of inpatients highlighted the need for continuity of care in an outpatient setting.

"It is very gratifying to offer such a valuable service to the community and be recognized for the quality of that service on a local and national level."

ELIMINATING RUST

There is only one way to deal with the rust that forms on a car's body panels - eliminate it completely. Just as the dentist would not leave some decay behind and fill in a cavity over it, an auto body technician should never fill or paint over rust. To do so only invites "rebound rust" to return after body work has been completed. It also does not necessarily hold true that "getting down to bare metal" will assure success at eradicating rust. Most rust develops from the inside out. Only by removing panels can the complete rust problems be seen. If the rusted areas can be excised and treated, the rusted metal should be punched or cut out. Once replacement metal is in place, it should be cleaned, treated, primed, painted, and undercoated.

HINT:

On today's frameless cars, underbody rust can compromise the structural integrity of the car.

We think servicing your car is a very serious business, but we also think it can be done in a relaxed, friendly way. Our professional technicians at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO, look forward to putting their years of training and experience to work for you and your vehicle. You'll find us conveniently located at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree, 843-1550. Hours: Mon.-Fri. 6am-9pm, Sat. 7am-9pm, Sun. 9am-5pm. "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer."

Spotlight On HEALTH AND FITNESS

How to make your computer easier on your eyes

Eye complaints rank at the top of health problems reported by computer users, says the American Optometric Association.

A study of New York state employees using computers found 91 percent with complaints about their eyes. In a survey of private business, 74 percent had eyestrain complaints.

The association offers these tips on how the 46 million workers who use computers can make their video display terminals (VDTs) easier on their eyes.

• Don't take a vision problem to work. VDTs do not cause vision problems, but they can aggravate existing problems — even minor ones. An annual eye examination is a must to keep vision functioning efficiently and to maintain eye health.

• Be alert for symptoms of vision problems, such as blurred vision, burning or itching eyes, headaches, backaches, painful neck, eye fatigue, irritability and lower productivity.

• Be sure your prescription glasses meet your job's vision demands. Tell your optometrist about your job tasks and measure your on-the-job seeing distances. You may need special occupational glasses, such as wide-band filters, or a mild prescription to wear on the job to reduce vision stress.

• Take rest or alternate-task breaks. A 15-minute break every hour or two, depending on your workload, will relax your eyes. Generally, you should take a break whenever your eyes feel tired.

• Minimize reflected glare from windows with shades, drapes or blinds.

• Cut overall room lighting in the VDT area in half by removing some light bulbs. Use desk lamps for other deskwork.

• If there are lighting factors you cannot control, ask your optometrist about eyeglass lens tints and coatings that can reduce glare.

• If management has supplied adjustable furniture and VDT equipment, take a moment to adjust it for your comfort. This includes screen brightness and contrast controls. You will save time in the long run because you will work more efficiently.

• Place reference material as close to the VDT screen as possible and at the same distance as the screen. This helps avoid frequent head and eye movements, as well as having to change focus when looking from one to another.

Don't Hibernate: Be Winter Wise, Exercise

Hibernation can be a health hazard.

In fact, physical inactivity—especially when coupled with extra eating during the winter holiday months—can lead to obesity and high blood cholesterol, which are risk factors for heart disease.

So one word of winter wisdom: exercise.

Exercise alone can't prevent or cure heart attack or stroke. But it can help reduce the risk of developing them and improve your chance of surviving them. It can decrease your blood pressure, weight and triglyceride level. And it can increase your level of high density lipoproteins, known as "good" cholesterol, which may carry cholesterol out of blood vessels.

Exercise can also help you feel, look and work better. It can improve your circulation and your ability to breathe. And you can better fight anxiety, stress and depression related to winter weather and holidays.

These are some of the reasons why the American Heart Association suggests you exercise aerobically at least 30 to 60 minutes three times a week. Your workout should be at moderate intensity over a continuous period, though levels vary according to condition and health.

'Dance For Heart' At World Gym Tonight

The third annual 'Dance For Heart' will be held tonight (Thursday) beginning at 6:30 p.m. at World Gym Fitness and Aerobic Center, 95 Holmes St., North Quincy. The event will feature step masterclass with Roberto Milani, international presenter, and members of the American Heart Reebok Step Demo Team. Cost is $5 and all proceeds will benefit the American Heart Association.

MORE BAD NEWS FOR MOMS WHO SMOKE

Physicians have long warned pregnant women against smoking. One reason is that smoking is known to put women at greater risk of having babies of low birth weight. More recent research has turned up two other reasons to kick the habit. Babies born to smoking mothers may have narrowed breathing passages, and they may be left with neuro-psychological problems as well. Due to inhibited growth of the bronchial tubes in utero, lung functions may be reduced by as much as 50 percent in such infants. Studies of children ages six to nine found that those whose mothers had smoked during pregnancy did significantly worse than their peers in areas of speech and language development, motor skills, visual abilities and academic achievement.

P.S. The children born to women who were passive smokers (who inhaled someone else's smoke) also showed evidence of problems.

Although quitting smoking can seem daunting, it can perhaps be easier with the knowledge that this gesture can be the greatest gift you give to your unborn child. If you would like to learn what you can do to stay more healthy and ward off the dangers of heart attacks, feel free to call COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE at 472-2550. If necessary, we will refer you to another medical professional. Office hours are by appointment at 101 Adams St., Suite 24, in Quincy. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals.

Podiatrists Recommend Flexible Shoes That Fit

Shoes are the most expensive piece of apparel that parents will buy for their children because, before a child reaches age 10, their foot size will change more than 30 times. This fact isn't meant to discourage parents, so much as it is to encourage careful and educated shoe buying.

The American Podiatric Medical Association (APMA), which is based in Bethesda, Maryland, also believes that young children do not need shoes until they begin to walk in areas that could potentially harm their feet, such as rough or dirty surfaces. When shoes are worn, they should be flexible and fit properly to ensure normal development of the foot.

Dean Wakefield, director of public affairs for the APMA, says that children's feet attain almost half of their adult size in the first year. Thus, it is extremely important for parents to measure a child's foot every four to six weeks to make sure shoes still fit. Shoes that are too small, for example, are harmful because they restrict growth and development.

"A common mistake parents make is to buy shoes that are too big, believing their children will eventually grow into them. In fact, shoes bought too big can cause a child to trip or to get blisters," Wakefield says. The APMA recommends shoes that are wide enough at the ball of the foot and in the toe box. The length of the shoe should be a thumb's width longer than the child's longest toe.

Saving used children's shoes for younger siblings and friends may seem practical and cost-effective, but this is not healthy for a child's feet. Shoes conform to the shape of an individual's foot, which means that size and fit cannot be guaranteed in a hand-me-down pair of shoes. In addition, fungal and viral organisms can be transferred. The best way to avoid these problems, Wakefield says, is to discard children's shoes when they've been outgrown, even if the shoes remain in good condition.

CANVAS, RUBBER-SOLED SNEAKERS are recommended by researchers at the University of Southern California as the best footwear type for young, developing feet. The American Podiatric Medical Association adds that flexible shoes that fit properly are the best, most healthy alternative.

Questions About Acupuncture

People who have never received the benefits of acupuncture sometimes show a fear of being needled. However, it only takes one visit to overcome this fear. First-time visitors to the acupuncture clinic usually like to questions, such as the ones below:

Will Symptoms Improve During Treatment? This happens, but most patients will experience slow and gradual relief spread over days or weeks.

What if my Pain Changes to Another Area? Sometimes, pain may disappear in one area but reappear in another. For example, the pain may move from one side of the shoulder to the other. If this happens, the therapist will change the points prescription.

For more information, call Acupuncture Associates of the South Shore at 471-5577.

Does Acupuncture Hurt? Acupuncture needles are very fine, and a special technique is used which makes insertion painless. Patients are always surprised that needles have already been inserted; they had imagined it much worse.

What Needles are Used? In ancient China, sharp splinters of stone were used. Today's solid steel needles are much thinner than needles used for injections and thus not painful.

Is There A Danger of AIDS? Absolutely not. Sterile disposable acupuncture needles are used. There has never been a single documented case of AIDS transmission via acupuncture needles.

How Many Points Will be Used? This depends not only on the illness but also on how long the patient has had his problems, areas of the body involved, if there are concomitant diseases to be treated, age, etc. Sometimes two needles may be enough, and sometimes a dozen are needed.

Which Areas Need Treatment? The areas that receive needling may bear no obvious link to where the problem is. For instance, it is often possible to help a headache with a single needle in the foot.

He was a positive, purposeful patriot who built a great country and established a great nation by positive action. He was too busy leading the brave to berate those without courage, and too busy building a government which would inspire loyalty and patriotism to spend his time berating those with lesser devotion. ### Quincy Edges North In Overtime, 58-57

By TOM SULLIVAN

The Quincy and North Quincy boys' basketball team have had disappointing seasons, but Quincy came up with its biggest win last Friday when it edged North Quincy, 58-57, in overtime, avenging an earlier loss to the Raiders.

The win improved the Presidents' record to 6-12 while North fell to 8-11.

North Quincy wound up the regular season last night (Wednesday) at Boston College High, coached by Quincy's Brian Buckley.

Quincy finished the regular season Tuesday and last night when it hosted its annual invitational tournament featuring Marshfield, Stoughton and Scituate.

The loss to Quincy was the sixth for North by three points or less and the second in overtime.

The Presidents won despite being outrebounded, 29-15, and shooting only 17 for 33 from the free throw line. However, they got the key rebound and hit the crucial free throw in overtime.

With five seconds left in overtime Robbie Kane (11 points) missed a lane jumper, but John Russell (13 points, seven rebounds) grabbed the offensive rebound and was fouled. He missed his first free throw but hit the second to give Quincy the win.

"This was a Quincy-North Quincy game at its finest," said Quincy coach John Franceschini. "This is what it is all about."

"We haven't been getting the inside calls all year," said North coach Ted Stevenson. "I think it probably stems from fact that we go inside so much."

The President trailed by as many as nine points in the second half as Sean Donovan (12 points, nine assists) hit two free throws to give the Raiders a 35-26 lead with 11 minutes left.

Tom Malvesti (seven points, four steals) scored a layup off a fine Matt Dwyer (15 points, four steals) pass and Joe Kelly (seven points) hit a jumper and Quincy was within three, 37-34.

Jon Gangi scored his only two points of the night as he put in an offensive rebound to tie the count at 43.

The Raiders then ran off seven in a row as Luke Sheets, having a tremendous season, scored five of his game-high 25 points for a 50-43 North lead.

Dwyer hit a three-pointer and Russell and Malvesti hit layups as the Presidents climbed back, 51-50. Bo Smith (10 points) hit a layup for North with 1:50 left and North was held scoreless for the rest of regulation. Kane hit three of four free throws in the final 19 seconds to tie the game at 53 and send it into overtime.

Earlier in the week North Quincy dropped a 60-58 squeaker to Bridgewater-Raynham.

Sheets had 20 points, Smith 15 and Donovan 10 for the Raiders.

Quincy lost to Silver Lake, 62-51, with a two-minute scoreless streak late in the second half hurting.

"We missed two key layups when the game was within three points (47-44)," said Franceschini. "The shots just didn't drop when they had to, and that was the difference in the long run."

The Lakers wrapped up the decision when it went 12 for 12 from the free throw line in the final minute and a half.

The Presidents were led by Kelly, who scored 16 points, 11 in the first half.

MIKE KAVANAUGH, center, signs a letter of intent to Holy Cross College during a recent ceremony at Quincy High School where he is a senior. Kavanaugh, a top academic student and an outstanding football player, received a football scholarship which will finance most of his college tuition at HC. Ranked 10th in his graduating class with a 3.8 GPA, he was a first team league all-star the last two years playing offensive guard and linebacker for the Presidents. Looking on are his sister, Carolyn Kavanaugh, left, and mother, Jean Kavanaugh. Standing are School Committee member Dan Raymond, left, a 1965 graduate of QHS and a 1969 graduate of Holy Cross where he co-captained the football team; and football coach Jack Raymer for whom Mike played.

North Girls Complete Sweep Over Quincy

The North Quincy girls' basketball team defeated the winless Quincy girls, 47-33, last Thursday to complete a three-game sweep over Quincy.

The North girls (9-9) earlier had defeated Quincy (0-18), 57-30, and 47-31 in the consolation round of North's Christmas Tournament.

The North girls finished the regular season last night (Wednesday) at Stoughton while Quincy has ended its season.

Once again the North girls were led by their outstanding freshman, Sara Stanton, who scored 18 points. Joanne Currier added eight.

For Quincy Christie Richmond led the scorers with six points.

Stanton is one of several outstanding freshman players this year on the South Shore.

She is averaging 13.7 points a game, currently leads the team scoring and is averaging 10 rebounds and four steals a game.

"It took her a while to get going because she was nervous about shooting," said coach Ken Panaro. "She didn't want the other kids to think she was a ballhog. The kids all told her to shoot and I told her to shoot. I told her that's her job. The girls support her and she's a true member of the team. She's going to be a force in this league once she gets a little more seasoning."

"This was just a great win for us," said coach Tom Benson. "We needed it to make the tournament and everyone did a tremendous job. Sean Connolly again was outstanding in goal and our back checking was excellent."

Saturday night the Raiders avenged an earlier loss and defeated Quincy, 4-2, dropping the Presidents' record to 8-9-2 with one game left.

Sheets Recommends No Demolition For Hancock Lot Project

•Be positioned in such a manner to allow interaction by shoppers with Dennis Ryan Parkway, Cottage Ave., Hancock St. and Revere Rd.

•The retail existing on Hancock St., Cottage Ave. and Mechanic St. around the Hancock lot area remain as it is. "The small business, village type atmosphere on the Southern end of Hancock St. should remain."

After meeting with merchants from that area, Sheets said they indicated that most businesses are sound and have an established customer base. The village type or small town type theme fits with what we would like to do in the downtown, he said.

•The back side of the buildings on Hancock St., Mechanic St., Cottage Ave. which would about the new project should have created for them a road which passes behind their shops for deliveries and pick-ups by customers. The new retail complex would be positioned in such a manner that customers have access to the rear of retail stores on Hancock, Cottage Ave. and Revere Rd. if desired by the retail store owners.

"Support for existing retail stores can best be promoted in this manner," the mayor said. "Having access to the back would strengthen retail already on Hancock St."

The mayor likened this set up to the T.G. Maxx and Paperama business in the Parkway. He said business at those two locations is generated, and vice versa, from Woolworths and other businesses on that side of Hancock St.

"We have to make Hancock St. stronger by creating business on both sides of the street."

•The height of the retail area should match the height of the retail on the eastern side of Hancock St. and not exceed two stories.

•Representatives of the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association and merchants that about the Hancock area will be part of the planning process.

"Everyone who is affected by it will be a part of it," the mayor said.

Sheets said a cross-town connector, which some believe is vital to an economic resurgence in Quincy Center, would not impact the project. "I don't see the connector impacting this project. I will make a recommendation on the connector issue very shortly," he said.

As for financing the multi-million dollar project, the mayor said his recommendations and the fact that the city owns the land the project would be built on should help to secure the necessary funding.

"The city owns the property, there would be no expenses for taking or purchasing property. This substantially reduces the cost of the project."

"My recommendations for the project makes financing the project much easier and clarifies a lot of the issues," Sheets said. A cost figure should be known in two to three weeks.

Asked whether the project will definitely go through, the mayor replied, "We going to move forward. There's clearer definition of what we want to accomplish."

"It's a doable project. I think it's going to be successful."

Charles D'Aprix, executive director of Quincy 2000, said the private-public partnership would assist the project by locating financial partners, marketing additional retailers and assist with leasing space.

D'Aprix also said Quincy 2000 would assist with the communication to "make the public fully aware of the project."

"We want to work as closely with the merchants as possible. The door is always open. We want to meet with them," D'Aprix said, adding he expects there will be "broad-based support" for the project.

Planning Director Richard Meade said 12 other firms took RFPs (Request for Proposal) out but Dickinson was the only one to return the bid. He said he thought at least one other company would submit a bid but "I guess things just didn't fall into place."

The RFP was first advertised in the Central Register in the Secretary of State's office Dec. 23. Officials extended the deadline to submit bids from Jan. 25 to Feb. 16 after a request for more time was issued by some firms interested in the project.

Meade said Chapter 30B of the state's general laws forbid the city to divulge the contents of Dickinson's 50-page bid until it is reviewed and a recommendation is made to the mayor.

Dickinson Development Corp. has developed several well known local buildings, including Home Depot in West Quincy, 200 Newport Ave. office building in North Quincy, the Braintree Executive Park off Union St. and a retail mall in Methuen.

It also refurbished the Willard School in West Quincy. The company now uses the building as its headquarters.

City Mails Census Forms To 46,000 Households

Quincy's 46,000 households should receive a city census mailing from the Quincy Board of Registrars today (Thursday) or Friday.

The annual census forms were mailed Wednesday as a follow-up to last year's door-to-door census which counted 85,370 residents. City Clerk Joseph Shea, chairman of the Board of Registrars, said, "I think it (the count) will maintain itself. I hope we'll go up a bit."

Shea said the state mandates municipalities to compile a residency list each year. The biographical information will be used to compile up-to-date street listings and jury listings.

Shea said the census mailing is less expensive than going door-to-door. He estimated the mailing will cost about $15,000 which covers postage and hiring census workers to compile and record the data.

Last year, the door-to-door survey cost $22,000.

The census form asks households to list biographical information on all residents within that household. That data consists of name, address, sex, birthdate, place of birth, occupation or school name.

For students, there is a section which asks whether he or she has a high school diploma, a U.S. citizen or is a special needs student.

Residents are instructed to indicate any address change for each household member who has moved. Those who did not live at this address last year should fill in "Address Last Year" where indicated.

Anyone who has changed his or her name by marriage or any other means must re-register in person to remain on the voting list.

The mailing also includes an optional three-part questionnaire pertaining to Quincy 2000 and the public-private partnership's goal to revitalize Quincy Center.

The three questions are:
•What do you like most about Quincy Center?
•What do you like least about Quincy Center?

•What type of retail store would most complement the existing retail mix in Quincy Center.

Respondents are not required by law to answer the questions. Shea said responses will help the city in improving its services.

Inside the mailing will be an envelope addressed to the City Clerk. Census forms should be mailed in this envelope. Postage is required.

Shea said he would like all forms mailed back to City Hall within a month. "There will be some follow-up phone calls if we don't hear from people," he said.

Forms can also be dropped at the City Clerk's office, first floor, City Hall (James McIntyre Government Center).

For more information, call 376-1141.

In An Attempt To Get Federal Clean Water Act Reinstated

Kolson Wants City To Withhold MWRA Sewer Assessment

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Frustrated by skyrocketing sewer bills and the lack of federal support for the Boston Harbor cleanup, Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson is urging Quincy and 42 other communities in the MWRA district to stop paying their assessments in a radical attempt to get the federal government to reinstitute the Clean Water Act.

"I am asking that the 43 communities in the MWRA to stop paying the sewer portion of their assessment, not the water portion, that's not the problem," Kolson said in an interview Tuesday.

"It's the added sewer tax, it's not a bill, it's a tax that we're being asked to pay because of the harbor cleanup.

"If the Clean Water Act were still in existence, we wouldn't be facing these tremendous and overly burdensome bills. The rest of the state has said to the 43 communities, 'you're the people who polluted the bay, you clean it up.'"

Moreover, if more federal money is not forthcoming soon, Kolson, who represents Ward 1, said he wants the cleanup project stopped.

"What I'm trying to do is draw attention to the fact that we are deadly serious about this and we cannot take it anymore. (Without the Clean Water Act,) we have to stop the project. We have to stop and catch our breath financially and let's see where we going."

To illustrate the financial burden of the cleanup, Kolson compared the $8 billion project to the national deficit. In 1975, the national deficit was $55.8 billion; in 1980 it was $72.8 billion.

"If we take the 1980 figure on the deficit, out of that, 43 communities are being asked to pay eight billion of that. We're being asked to pay eight billion of what used to be the national debt. That's about one-ninth of what the national deficit was 13 years ago.

"This is what we're stuck with. There's no end to this. It's totally frustrating."

Kolson, who has been fighting the costs associated with the cleanup for six years, has collected nearly 5,000 signatures from area residents in support of more federal assistance for the project. However, he said action may speak louder than words on this issue.

"We tell them (federal officials) at the public hearings they've held in Washington, the over 4,000 signatures that I've gathered, people feel a tremendous frustration with this. There just doesn't

Quincy 2000 Developing Comprehensive Plan

The Quincy 2000 Corporation, a newly-formed public-private development corporation is in the process of developing a comprehensive plan of action according to Executive Director Charles (Chuck) D'Aprix.

"An appointed planning committee is working to develop a full-scale plan of action for approval by the Quincy 2000 Corporation Board of Directors," D'Aprix said.

D'Aprix said he expects the plan to be presented to the Board of Directors for approval some time in the next few weeks.

"This plan, when approved, will establish a wide-ranging agenda for the organization and will go a long way toward establishing a clear identity for Quincy 2000," he said. "Many people think we are a city agency...we aren't. We are a public-private organization drawing support from all quarters-- this is a community-based organization--not a governmental one."

The organization will work with all sectors of the community to implement the plan. Small business will be an integral part of the process.

"It is essential that people know what we are, what we intend to do, and how we will get the job done," D'Aprix said.

A great deal of research and planning has led up to the development of the comprehensive agenda. The Quincy 2000 Planning committee spent considerable time reviewing options and making recommendations, D'Aprix said.

"People will be surprised at the scope of the plan when announced," he said. "It will address a significant number of economic development initiatives. When fully developed, the plan will be presented to the entire community and altered over time in order to accommodate the changing economy."

Established by state legislation as an official development corporation, Quincy 2000 is governed by an elected board of directors representing a diverse cross section of the city's public and private sectors. The Quincy 2000 Corporation is a private, nonprofit organization designed to serve as a catalyst for economic and commercial development in Quincy's business districts including, but not limited to, Quincy Center, Wollaston and Norfolk Downs.

Dumpsters Must Be Fenced In By March 10

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The Quincy Health Department will work on a case-to-case basis in implementing an ordinance which requires all dumpsters owned by Quincy businesses to be fenced in by an enclosure and placed on a cement or asphalt pad by March 10.

Health Commissioner

Jane Gallahue said the department has sent a package of information on the ordinance, including waiver requests for those who feel they can't comply, to all affected businesses in the city.

"There are certain instances where the dumpster cannot be enclosed," said Gallahue.

"Right now, we're just looking at each case (individually)."

The ordinance was passed Dec. 31, 1991 and initially required only new businesses to comply with its restrictions. Extension dates of March 10, 1993 for established businesses and March 10, 1994 for

Request To Rent Out Inn Kitchen Postponed

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The Quincy License Board Tuesday postponed indefinitely a request from the manager of Quincy Bay Inn to rent the inn's kitchen facilities to start a separate business.

The matter had been continued from the board's Feb. 16 meeting because of the board's rule that all requests having to do with Common Victualer and/or All-Alcohol Licenses be reviewed twice.

Quincy Bay Inn manager Kenan Nacar had told the board Feb. 16 that he wanted to rent the inn's facilities to begin a food service called Five Star Pizza & More, which would focus mainly on deliveries and take-out orders.

At Tuesday's meeting, however, Quincy Bay Inn owner Al Nacar told the board that his son wanted time to reconsider whether he wanted to rent the facilities or "make another arrangement."

Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers, who said he had visited the site since the board's previous meeting, requested that the board leave open the date for the next hearing to give Nacar adequate time to make a final decision on the request.

THE VEGETABLE GARDEN LOCATION, LOCATION, LOCATION

Yes, it's the same answer for a successful garden. Look for an area with six to eight hours of full sun maximum. A well drained soil and easy access to a water source, also are essential to start the garden. Next, develop a rich soil base by adding humus, either in the form of well rotted mulch, manure, or peat moss.

Before planting or even buying seeds, sit down and plan out the garden. How much energy do you want to expend on this project? How big an area will be needed to provide enough material to feed my family? What are my favorite veggies, and how much does each variety produce?

If you can follow this simple system you'll be up to your ankles in vegetables by the end of July.

Studds Meets With EPA For Harbor Cleanup Funds

By MICHAEL WHALEN
Congressman Gerry Studds will meet today (Thursday) with the head of the Environmental Protection Agency in an attempt to obtain funds for the Boston Harbor cleanup, according to a spokesman.

Brendan Daly of the Studds organization said Tuesday the congressman will discuss the matter this afternoon with EPA Administrative Head Carol Browner.

Daly noted that Studds was "disappointed, but not upset" when he learned that President Bill Clinton's economic plan unveiled last week does not currently include anything earmarked for the cleanup efforts.

"He (Studds) is working with the president on a variety of issues, including this (cleanup) one," said Daly. "He supports the president's plan overall, but he wants to see if he can get the funds for this as well.

"It's far from set what the budget for the harbor cleanup will be. There's no way ratepayers can pay for the entire cleanup themselves."

Asked if Studds had a timetable in mind for the cleanup funds, Daly said only that the congressman hopes to obtain them "as soon as possible."

AMERICAN RED CROSS South Area volunteers are busy planning this year's annual Dinner Dance benefit which will be held Friday, March 5 at Lantana in Randolph. ## Ayers Wants Community Meeting On Liquor, Amusement Licenses Request

The Quincy License Board Tuesday postponed for four weeks a request from KNK Enterprises, Inc. d/b/a O'Keefe's Sports Pub, 78A and 78B Sagamore St., for a Common Victualer/All-Alcoholic License and pool table, pinball and amusement licenses.

Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers told the board he wanted to hold a community meeting at the Atlantic Neighborhood Center in North Quincy to inform residents of the request before a decision was made on the matter.

"I want time to arrange a community meeting to explain the proposal to my constituents," said Ayers.

Police Chief Francis Mullen agreed with Ayers' actions.

"I think the community has to be in on this," said Mullen. "I think that's most important."

Atty. Mark Fitzsimmons and applicant John Keefe agreed with Ayers' suggestion that the matter be postponed until the board's March 23 meeting.

At press time Ayers said he did not have an official date for the community meeting but added that the time he wants is Thursday, March 18 at 7:30 p.m. at the Atlantic Center, 12 Hunt St.

License Granted For Quincy Point Restaurant

The Quincy License Board Tuesday granted a request from Cannon's Corporation, Inc. d/b/a Fore River Neighborhood Eatery for a Common Victualer/All-Alcoholic License at 520 Washington St.

The matter had been continued from the board's Feb. 16 meeting because of the board's rule that all requests having to do with Common Victualer and/or All-Alcoholic Licenses be reviewed twice.

Ward 2 Councillor

Theodore DeCristofaro, who along with Building Inspector Matthias Mulvey had noted at the board's previous meeting that he wanted to visit the site to see exactly what kind of signage was planned for the restaurant, said Tuesday he was satisfied with what he saw.

"Everything's fine as far as I'm concerned," said DeCristofaro.

Local Building Inspector Kathleen Nugent, sitting in for Mulvey at Tuesday's meeting, said the Building Department was also satisfied with the restaurant's plans.

DeCristofaro, who also had told Kelly Feb. 16 to "dress the place up and make it look nice," said he was pleased that with the action Kelly has taken at the site.

"They're already doing some of the things I suggested," he said.

The site was formerly the location of the Knotty Pine Restaurant and Dimitri's Restaurant.

Did Not Favor

Telecommunication Tower

Editor, The Quincy Sun:
It was noted by me that recent stories in the local papers state that I had written a letter to the Zoning Board of Appeals in favor of the tower placed at Ricciuti Drive.
That statement is in error.

My written comments to the Zoning Board of Appeals members relative to the July 9, 1991 hearing, specifically case
#3036, applicant Francis DiRico was, "The applicant will provide subdivision approval prior to any building permits being issued if the Variance and Special Permit are not granted." I would hardly think that any reasonable person would take that statement as a letter in favor of the project.

It should be noted, however, the Quincy
Zoning Ordinance Chapter
24, as amended, Article V,
Section 56 exempts:
"wireless or broadcasting towers and other like unenclosed structures" from the height restrictions of the ordinance. The tower would use as much energy as 10 100-watt bulbs. The variance granted was for anchor pad locations.

Are Licenses Granted By Misinformation?

Editor, The Quincy Sun:
A liquor license was recently granted. The Ward 3 councillor is quoted by the lawyer representing the Quincy Center establishment as being "in full support."

The councillor in his letter to the editor and to the media and me says he was "not in favor" but told the licensing board he was "not opposed."

The issue now is, was a license granted because a lawyer gave false information or a ward councillor gave the lawyer one statement and the residents and newspapers a different statement?

Should this license be nullified? Was wrong or inaccurate information given to the Licensing Board as testimony? I say it should! Licenses must not be granted based on inaccurate information.

A 700-foot communications tower was recently built because the Zoning Board was informed that the Police and Fire Departments needed it. Now the police and fire departments state they do not need it.

Who is fooling the various boards?

Action On School Front

There's a little early action on the School Committee political front.

Margaret (Peggy) King, who is filling out the unexpired term of Mary Collins, says she will probably run for the seat this fall.

King was appointed to the seat by the City Council and School Committee in April 1992, after Mary Collins resigned because of health reasons.

"I'm considering it," says King. "I probably will run although I haven't definitely made up my mind."

She says she will make a final decision in the spring—but she sounds like she will run.

Incumbent Frank Santoro who has served two four year terms on the board has been telling friends he probably will not seek re-election this year.

Ron Mariano, also up for re-election this year, has not made a final decision yet whether to seek another term. Those close to him think he will.

Meanwhile, there is a definite candidate in the School Committee field.

Ron McCarthy of Norton Rd., Merrymount, a teacher in the Massachusetts school system for nine years, is already off and running.

He has a fundraiser set for Saturday, March 13, from 7 to 10 p.m. at Pat Flanagan's Pub in Parkingway, Quincy Center.

And he's already putting together his campaign team.

Sean Barry who ran two years ago, is also considering a run for the School Committee this year. However, if City Council President Charles Phelan decides to run for the City Council at-large, Barry could go for the Ward 5 seat instead.

Another potential School Committee candidate is Jo-Ann Bragg, who also ran in 1991.

KING

TOLAND

FORMER COUNCILLOR Pat Toland's name will be officially submitted to the City Council Monday, March 1 by City Clerk Joseph Shea as his nominee for the assistant city clerk post.

The council is expected to confirm the appointment that night. Toland has at least five votes, the number needed for confirmation. The vote, however, could be delayed if one councillor moves that the matter be tabled until the next meeting.

Councillor Michael Cheney has doggedly opposed the appointment hoping to have the assistant clerk's job abolished or reduced to part-time.

Toland resigned from the council last month to pursue the job that became open when Shea moved up to succeed John Gillis as city clerk.

THE VOTE TO confirm Toland for the assistant clerk's post will set the stage for the return of Joseph LaRaia to the City Council.

LaRaia, who was the council at-large candidate runnerup in the last city election has sufficient votes among the councillors to get the nod to fill Toland's unexpired term.

LaRaia could be voted in Monday night. But if the Toland vote is delayed, his will be also.

Registrar Reminds Motorists To Report Change Of Name

Motor Vehicles Registrar Jerold Gnazzo reminds motorists that the law mandates any individual under whose name a motor vehicle or trailer has been registered must report any change of name, residential address or mail address in writing to the Registry of Motor Vehicles within 30 days after the date the change was made.

The same rule applies to every individual issued a learner's permit or a license to operate motor vehicles.

Written notification of change or address should be mailed to: Registry of Motor Vehicles, 100 Nashua St., Boston, MA 02114. Another option: use a change of address card available at a Registry office. Once completed you can leave the card at the Registry.

"It is to your advantage to keep the Registry informed if you've moved, married or changed your name," Gnazzo said. "Let the Registry know of the changes to keep your license and registration records accurate. Be aware that the Registry of Motor Vehicles may revoke or suspend the license, certificate of registration, or learner's permit of any person who fails to report changes of name and address."

Quincy 2000 Office Signs Lease

The Quincy 2000 Corporation announces the signing of a lease for new office and meeting space.

Executive Director Chuck D'Aprix said the new space will serve as the headquarters for Quincy 2000, the newly formed public-private development corporation.

"The space is on the first floor of the North Tower at President's Place, Quincy Sq., and will be the public access on a regular basis," he said.

"Boston Five, owners of Presidents Place, were very cooperative and professional," said D'Aprix. "Boston Five understood the importance of Quincy 2000 being in a visible location and worked with us to identify appropriate space."

Quincy 2000 expects to begin occupancy around

March 1 and will be inviting members to a private reception some time shortly thereafter. The organization is temporarily housed at 1150 Hancock St.—Suite 410 in the Office Collective—a shared office center. Quincy 2000 can be reached at 847-1454.

Established by state legislation as an official development corporation, Quincy 2000 is governed by an elected board of directors representing a cross-section of the city's public and private sectors. ## Some Special Memories

Deputy Chief Joseph Jackson Retiring After 42 Years' Service

By MICHAEL WHALEN
Where were you on Nov. 11, 1950?

Even if you're old enough to have been around, you probably don't recall. But for Quincy Deputy Fire Chief Joseph Jackson, the date has a special meaning.

"I certainly remember it," he said. "It was Armistice Day, which is now known as Veterans' Day. That was my first day on the job."

Jackson, who celebrated his 65th birthday Feb. 8, will retire at the end of the month after more than 42 years on the job. He spoke wistfully of his long career with the department, saying what he'll miss the most are the strong relationships he formed over the years with his co-workers.

"It's the camaraderie I enjoyed most of all," he said. "We'd kid with each other a lot, but when the chips were down, we'd always be there for each other."

"There's probably not another job where you can be as close and where the camaraderie is so strong, with the possible exception of the military."

Jackson received several promotions during his career, becoming lieutenant in September 1958, captain in June 1965, and deputy chief in July 1979. While he said the job was "always very gratifying, very exciting, very rewarding," he added that "not all rewards came from fire-related experiences."

"One of my most memorable experiences came in the '70s from what we thought would be a routine medical call for a person having difficulty breathing," he said. "The person was a 10-day-old infant boy who, when we arrived, seemed to be doing fine. I suggested to his mother that the boy be checked out by a doctor and we (firefighters) started to go."

"Just as we were about to leave, the boy went into full cardiac arrest. No pulse, no respiration, and he was turning blue. I gave him CPR, and I guess you could say between God and myself, we restored the baby's breathing."

"Approximately 12 years later, I was responding on a routine motor vehicle accident in the same neighborhood. One of the spectators at the accident was a tall, handsome lad with a million-dollar smile. He walked up to me and introduced himself, and it was the boy I'd given CPR to when he was 10 days old."

"Words could never express the feeling you get from an experience like that."

Naturally, some of Jackson's work experiences were not so joyful. He recalled a four-alarm fire in a Sea Street apartment house "in about 1984 or '85" where he and two other firefighters, temporarily trapped on one of the upper floors, were almost consumed by smoke. The trio managed to escape by removing a window and scurrying down a ladder raised up from one of the engines outside the building.

"It gave me a great appreciation of how people feel when they're trapped in a fire," Jackson said, adding "yet there were no fatalities in that fire. It's a tribute to the firefighters who worked that night. Those kind of results make you proud that you're a firefighter."

Jackson admits, however, that while he always felt this pride in his work, he sometimes wondered why he chose his profession in the first place.

"Sometimes you question your sanity for coming on the job," he said with a laugh. "We do a job that we feel a lot of people wouldn't want to do and one a lot of people couldn't do. We're a pretty cocky lot, you know."

On a more serious note, Jackson said he hopes some of the economic dilemmas facing today's firefighters can be eliminated in the days to come.

"One of the problems facing fire departments in cities and towns throughout the country is trying to maintain an acceptable level of efficiency with less manpower and apparatus," he said. "Hopefully, the economy will turn around and provide more in the near future."

DEPUTY FIRE CHIEF Joseph Jackson stands outside fire headquarters at 40 Quincy Ave. Jackson is retiring at the end of February after more than 42 years with the Quincy Fire Department.

Wollaston Parents End School Strike

A week long strike of parents of 117 Wollaston School children ended when they voted at a mass protest meeting to accede to School Committee wishes and transfer their youngsters to the Montclair School.

The action came shortly after Superior Court Judge Lewis Cox denied them an injunction that charged the School Committee with "gross abuse of its discretionary powers" in making the transfers.

Nathaniel Golden, attorney for the parents, cited traffic hazards, cold lunches and the long walk in bad weather as reasons why the young children should not be sent to the Montclair School.

On the first day the new policy went into effect, 30 mothers and three fathers representing more than 100 youngsters showed up at the Wollaston School with their children seeking admittance.

They left quietly when Principal Austin refused their request.

The strike began coming apart on the third day when the parents decided that 48 of the youngsters, those in the fourth, fifth and sixth grades, were old enough to make the transfer to Montclair.

POLICE UNIFORMS

City Councillor Alfred N. La Breque, chairman of the Finance Committee, told police officers that the city will no longer be able to go to the expense of buying their uniforms. "With all the unemployment and difficulty our citizens are having, meeting their taxes," he said, "I, as city councillor, do not feel I can justify a vote to spend $10,000 for uniforms."

Marie's Kitchen

By MARIE J. D'OLIMPIO

Jane's Superb Microwave Treat

It was no ordinary baby shower for David James, our friends, Keith and Connie's son. Instead, it was a combination of foods for all the grown ups.

Naturally, I always find one which I can report to all of you. It was an appetizer made by Connie's friend, Jane and the easiest recipe ever. It only has three ingredients, but they are magic when put together.

Jane's Superb Microwave Treat
8 ounces of mayonnaise

8 ounces of grated parmesan cheese
1 large can of artichokes (not marinated)

Cut the artichokes into small pieces and mix with the cheese and the mayonnaise until well blended. It can be made ahead of time, and then when you're ready to serve put it in the microwave for about 4 minutes or until it's bubbly. Then serve with pieces of French bread. It got the most raves because of its smooth consistency and great flavor.

Our Policy On Engagement Photographs And Wedding Announcements

The Quincy Sun will continue to publish photographs with engagement announcements as it always has.

The Sun will also continue to use in wedding announcements the names of all members of the wedding party including maid of honor, best man, parents, bridesmaids, ushers, flower girls and ringbearers, etc.

Black and white photos are preferred. The Sun can convert most color photos to black and white for publication but the photo loses some clarity in the process.

Dumpsters Must Be Fenced In By March 10

residential complexes with eight or more units using a dumpster were allowed at that time.

Enclosures, as described in the ordinance, should be no more than 10 feet tall and should be capable of obscuring the dumpster from the public's view, according to the commissioner.

Gallahue noted, however, that there are several reasons why the Health Department would allow an enclosure to be waived, including financial constraints of the business owner and the physical surroundings of the dumpster.

She added that although most dumpsters are already set on cement or asphalt pads, those business owners who keep their dumpsters on a wooden pier—a situation Gallahue termed “rare”—may also ask for a waiver of the pads.

Gallahue also said that the Health Department is prepared to be more than lenient in implementing a $50 fine on those businesses which openly defy the ordinance.

“At this point we want to work with people on a case-to-case basis and have them submit their concerns,” she said. “We realize there are certain conditions where the dumpster cannot be enclosed.”

“Our main goal is to cut down on the number of overflowing dumpsters with litter blowing everywhere and leakages and rodents, which we have received so many complaints about.”

Gallahue said those planning to submit waiver requests to the Health Department should do so by March 10 if possible. She also noted that an extension date of June 1 is being allowed for dumpsters which do not have cement or asphalt pads, since such pads are difficult to install during the winter.

To receive a waiver request form from the Health Department, call 376-1273. For more information on the ordinance and its effect on local businesses, call 376-1279 or 1281 Monday through Friday from 8:30 to 9:30 a.m., 11:30 a.m. to noon, or 3:30 to 4:30 p.m.

Breast Cancer Prevention Discussion At Quincy Hospital

Although the number of women developing breast cancer remains high, new research indicates promising ways to reduce your risk for this disease.

Dr. Therese Mulvey, cancer specialist at South Shore Hematology/Oncology, will speak about the Breast Cancer Prevention Trial tonight (Thursday) at 7 p.m. at Quincy Hospital. This nationwide project has been undertaken to study whether the medication tamoxifen may prevent breast cancer from developing in women who are at increased risk.

More than 16,000 women over the age of 35 will participate in the study. Dr. Mulvey will discuss those factors which put women at increased risk for breast cancer, and the uses of tamoxifen in the treatment and possible prevention of breast cancer.

The breast cancer program is part of Quincy Hospital's Women's Health Series this spring. Upcoming programs include menopause, March 25; endometriosis and infertility, April 22; and pre-menstrual syndrome, May 20.

All programs are at 7 p.m. in the Quincy Hospital Education Center, and are presented free of charge as a public service. Advance registration is required.

To register, or for more information, call the Quincy Hospital Public Relations Department at 773-6100 ext. 4016.

Helpful Reminders For Taking Prescriptions Properly

The more politicians you ask, the more answers you'll get for the country's problem with skyrocketing medical costs. Yet everyone can have a part in one possible solution—ensuring they take their prescription medications properly.

"It sounds simple enough, but studies have found many of us fail to follow all the directions we get with medications," said John Weber, a pharmacist with Walgreens. "When properly taken, medications potentially can save a patient thousands of dollars in hospital costs."

One example is the anti-ulcer drug, Tagamet. The yearly cost of successful drug treatment for an ulcer is about $1,000, compared to the $25,000 overall cost for an ulcer operation. In 1976, 155,000 operations were performed to save the lives of patients with bleeding ulcers. By 1984, just eight years after the introduction of Tagamet, less than 16,000 ulcer cases required surgery.

However, patients won't receive the full benefit of medication unless the drug is taken properly. "Patients must comply with all the directions that accompany their medicine," Weber said. "A pharmacist will provide all the information needed. But it's up to the patient to follow through on what the pharmacist has said."

Weber said the most important items for patients to remember about their medication are:

- Do not increase or decrease the dose of your medicine, unless your doctor specifically suggests it. "Some patients, especially those on fixed incomes, may try to make their medication last longer by taking, say, one pill a day instead of two, as their doctor prescribed," Weber said. "We try to inform patients of the consequences of doing that, so they understand the importance of following the directions precisely."

- If instructed to use all the medicine, make sure to finish the bottle. "This is particularly important with antibiotics. Even if you're feeling better, finishing the medicine will help ensure you get over your sickness," Weber said.

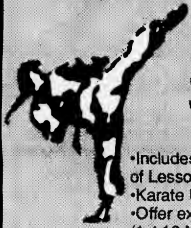

- Check to make sure you are taking the proper medication by reading the label first.

- Don't take medication after the expiration date on the bottle—it may have lost its potency.

- Don't use old medications to treat a condition you believe is similar to one you had before. Outdated medication should be safely discarded.

- If you any questions about your prescription, ask your doctor or pharmacist.

VICIOUS VARICOSE VEINS

There is nothing pretty about varicose veins, and they can hurt like crazy. They typically appear on the calf as thick, blue bulges or red spider-like lines. Either way, they are signs that the veins are not doing well at their job of helping recycle blood back to the heart. Elastic stockings, elevating the legs and certain exercises can ease or help prevent varicose veins. Another recourse is sclerotherapy, a technique of injecting a solution that causes vein walls to collapse, closing up the vessel. In some cases, surgery to close off or remove veins may be recommended.

Although serious complications of varicose veins are rare, consult your doctor if you notice pain, redness or inflammation near a vein. P.S. Conditions such as pregnancy can trigger varicose veins, but genetics probably have the biggest say in who develops them.

People who work on their feet all day are more likely to suffer from varicose veins. If you fall into this category, you may wish to consult your physician about exercises that you can do to help stave off the problem. For more information on this topic or on the prevention and treatment of heart disease, call COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE at 472-2550. We focus on treating the patient, rather than the disease. Office hours are by appointment at 101 Adams St., Suite 24, in Quincy. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals.

JOHN KELLY, M.D. (right), a physician who utilizes the Medifast program to treat the overweight, works with his patient to develop her weight loss program, which includes behavior modification, exercise and realistic goal setting. Kelly advises that medical supervision is important to safe and effective dieting.

Stop The 'Yo-Yo Syndrome'

Why do so many people go on diets again and again and never seem to keep the weight off? Are they just destined to be overweight? What's the problem?

John Kelly, M.D., a member of the American Society of Bariatric Physicians, who specializes in the study and treatment of obesity, says 34 million (or one in every five) Americans are overweight and trying to diet at any given time. "But most of them are missing a critical point. They don't seek medical advice on the weight and diet that will be best for their health."

As a result, Kelly, who prescribes the Medifast Weight Loss Program in treating overweight patients, says most people set themselves up to gain the weight back and experience the "yo-yo syndrome" by depriving themselves of the nutrients their bodies need and by falling back into old, bad habits — namely overeating and no exercise.

So, where do you start to be sure you're on the right road to safe and effective weight loss and weight control? Kelly says you need to begin with your doctor to determine what's healthy for you. Then, consider the "Five Medifast Tips for Success" that can help you stay on track.

1. Behavior modification and exercise are the key. The success of your diet is up to you. The most effective weight loss program won't work for long if you don't learn to change your outlook on food and break old habits, beginning with an exercise program that is right for you.

Work simple exercises into your everyday life. Take the stairs instead of an elevator. Make a brisk, 15-minute walk part of your lunch hour. Park your car at the farthest end of the parking lot and walk the extra distance to your destination. Conduct all conversations while standing — it burns double the calories as expended while sitting.

2. Evaluate the timing of your weight loss plan. It is not a good time to begin a diet if you are moving, starting a new job, or coping with family or personal problems.

3. Set a realistic goal weight. Work with your doctor to determine your healthful weight based on your body shape and height, age and lifestyle. It's not realistic to strive for the tall, lithe model look if you are 5-foot-3.

4. List your reasons for wanting to lose weight. Discuss these reasons with your physician to zero in on the meaningful ones that will help reinforce your commitment to the diet. Review this list throughout your program for continued motivation.

5. Consult with a physician both before and during your weight loss program. To get you started with a brief self-test on what your healthy weight should be, Medifast, the physician-supervised weight loss program, developed the "How Does Your Weight Rate?" brochure. To obtain your free copy, simply call 1-(800) 662-7300, or write to "How Does Your Weight Rate?", Jason Pharmaceuticals, Inc., 11435 Cronhill Drive, Owings Mills, MD, 21117-0370. HF925159

What Is This Thing Called Acupuncture?

According to history, ancient Chinese warriors hit some sore body areas with their arrows and found that illnesses were relieved or cured. Through 2,500 years of experience, the Chinese discovered over 800 acupuncture points on the body.

Acupuncture does not treat disease but rather the cause of disease. Chinese medicine believes it is important to treat the cause of disease because symptoms are signals of a deeper problem. If only symptoms are treated, a patient will still be diseased and the ailment will manifest itself in other ways at it further worsens the body. For example, western medicine treats skin problems with steroid creams. But ninety percent of people with this bronchopulmonary failures, however, have had past skin problems. Is this coincidence or are we repressing symptoms without treating the cause?

Through pulse readings, we can measure the vital energy of meridians. If testing of a meridian reveals that its energy flow is excessive or deficient, it can be corrected. For example, if there is an excessive energy flow of the Heart meridian, there will be nervous tension, irritability, restlessness, impatience, difficulty in pronouncing words, fast heartbeat, and insomnia. If there is a deficient energy flow, the reverse will be true. The person will be drowsy, sluggish, passive, and have a decreased heartbeat.

Some persons suffer with fatigue and lack of zest. Pulse diagnosis often reveals a deficient energy flow of the kidney meridian. Acupuncture can repair this defect, transforming one's health to renewed vitality.

If an automobile engine is not functioning well, a tune-up is needed. Similarly, if there exists an imbalance in the flow of energy causing dysfunction of our organs, acupuncture can correct this with a "body tune-up."

People who receive acupuncture often experience a feeling of well-being. They feel more energetic and cheerful, and more relaxed. But unlike the effects of drugs or alcohol, there is no impairment in judgement, power of concentration, or ability to drive.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

SCOTT DEWARE

"Pray, don't find fault with the man who limps or stumbles along the road unless you have worn the shoes he wears or struggled beneath his load. There may be ticks in his shoes that hurt his feet though hidden from view. Or the burden he bears . . . placed on your back might cause you to stumble, too.

Don't sneer at the man who's down today unless you have felt the blow that caused his fall or felt the same that only the fallen know.

You may be strong but still the blows that were his . . . if dealt to you in the self same way at the self same time might cause you to stagger, too.

Don't be too harsh with the man who sins or pelt him with word or stone, unless you are sure, Yes, doubly sure that you have no sins of your own - For you know that perhaps if the tempter's voice should whisper as softly to you as it did to him . . . when he went astray it might cause you to falter, too . . ." - Author Unknown

Donovan's 30 Sparks North In Tourney

Sean Donovan, who finished the regular season with 1040 career points (only the second North player to reach the 1000-point plateau) scored a season-high 30 points Monday night to lead the North Quincy boys' basketball team to a 64-51 victory over Brookline in the preliminary round of the Eastern Mass. Tournament.

The Raiders (seeded 26th) last night (Wednesday) played at 11th-seeded Catholic Memorial.

The winner of that game will play at sixth-seeded Brockton at a date and time to be announced.

North raced out to a quick 9-0 lead over the smaller Brookline team and never looked back. Donovan scored seven of the first nine points, including two three-pointers.

"We jumped out early and had a 10-point lead (36-26) at the half and built it up to 18 in the second half," said North coach Ted Stevenson. "These small, quick teams were the ones that gave us the most trouble during the season, but the kids never let them get started tonight."

Senior center Luke Sheets, who has had an outstanding year, had 12 points for the Raiders. Bo Smith had 11 and 6-8 Jason McLeod had another big game on the boards, taking down 12 rebounds and played strong defense.

North's frustrating season ended in typical style when it lost to Boston College High, 63-56, in overtime.

The loss was the Raiders' third in overtime. They lost six games by three points or less.

Since the series with B.C. High, coached by Quincy's Brian Buckley, was renewed three years ago, the Eagles have won all three. Last season, B.C. won on two last-second free throws.

"We wanted to renew this rivalry because the schools are so close and so many kids from North go to B.C. High," Buckley said. "It's for bragging rights and hopefully it's here to stay."

With less than a minute to play North held a 50-47 lead, but with three seconds left in regulation, Matt Fennessy, one of five Quincy players on the Eagle squad, hit an off-balance layup to send the game into overtime. Fennessy had 18 points, seven rebounds and nine assists. Keith Driscoll clinched the game with seven points in the overtime session.

North got off to a fast start as Sean Donovan (14 points) scored three baskets within 70 seconds, including two three-pointers, to give the Raiders an 11-2 lead. However, the Eagles bounced back and took a 25-24 halftime lead. They widened their lead to 33-24 at the start of the second half.

Two baskets by Luke Sheets (13 points), who had an outstanding season, broke a scoreless streak and, although North regained the lead on another Donovan three-pointer, it was never able to pull away.

This was a typical game for us," said North coach Ted Stevenson. "We've done this all year, where we play well in spurts and badly in spurts. We just let them get too far ahead."

Third Time Still Fails Quincy

By TOM SULLIVAN

The Quincy boys' basketball team hoped a third meeting with Old Colony League rival Weymouth would bring better luck, but the Wildcats defeated the Presidents for the third time, 59-43, Monday night in the preliminary round of the Eastern Mass. Tournament at Weymouth.

During the regular season Weymouth had defeated Quincy, 61-58, and 57-49.

"We were very flat," said Quincy coach John Franceschini, whose team had finished strong, winning its last three games of the season. "We lacked intensity early and that put us behind the eight-ball. We're disappointed because we had a chance to get it under five points late in the game, but we couldn't make the shots. Weymouth out-hustled us in certain situations."

Weymouth broke from an early 9-6 lead with an 11-4 run, highlighted by two Joe Paolucci three-pointers and an Alex McPhee full court drive to take a 21-10 lead. The Presidents closed the gap to 21-16 on a Robbie Kane three-pointer and a Brian Clifford hoop on a fine pass from Matt Dwyer.

Quincy's chances were dimmed when center John Russell, who had a fine season, was lost in the first half with an ankle injury.

Without Russell the Presidents had no inside threat down the stretch and had to rely heavily on their outside shooting.

Kane, who finished a brilliant season, hit a three-pointer to bring Quincy within four, 27-23, opening the second half.

Quincy finished a disappointing season in fine style, winning its final three games of the year, starting with a big overtime win over North Quincy and finishing with its biggest win of the year, an 88-84 upset decision over Scituate, which came into the game with an 18-1 record. The win gave the Presidents their first title in six years in their annual invitational tourney.

Robbie Kane, who had a brilliant season, led Quincy to its win over Scituate with a career-high 43 points after scoring 22 points in the Presidents' 60-57 overtime win in Stoughton in the opening round.

"One of our objectives was to stop Robbie Kane," said Scituate coach Roger Kvan. "We were up in his face all night long but he just kept hitting. We played poor defense against some of the other players, but against Kane we tried it all but nothing we did stopped him."

Kane had plenty of support in a game that saw the Presidents lead by 18 points with a little more than eight minutes left but only by two points with 11 seconds left.

North Girls Face N. Bedford In Tourney

The North Quincy girls' basketball team will open Eastern Mass. Tournament competition tonight (Thursday) at New Bedford at 7 p.m.

North is seeded 20th and New Bedford 13th.

If it wins tonight, North Quincy will play fourth-seeded Bridgewater-Raynham Saturday afternoon at 3 p.m.

The North girls will be led by their sensational freshman and leading scorer Sara Stanton.

Also playing prominent roles for North have been Eileen McDonough, Regina Murphy, Joanne Currier, Maureen McCarthy and Julie Ramos.

The past two years North lost in the first round to teams it had defeated twice in regular season games.

Last year they lost to Plymouth, 39-38, and two years ago bowed to Silver Lake by the same score.

North Quincy and New Bedford did not meet in the regular season.

Third Time Still Fails Quincy

John Russell, a tourney all-star with Kane, had 23 points, 13 rebounds and five steals and Mike Bartlett came off the bench and had seven rebounds and three assists. Tom Malvesti scored only three points but hit two free throws, giving Quincy an 86-81 with 32 seconds left.

"This was a team effort propelled by a great individual performance," said Quincy coach John Franceschini. "We wanted to hold (Walter) Brown (who averaged 24.4 points a game) to one shot and we did that for the most part, although he had 28 points and eight rebounds. We knew even with the big lead they would come back. I know the two overtime wins in the past week have instilled a lot of confidence in this team. We came into the tournament with the very best preparation and it paid off."

The tourney win and three straight wins gave the Presidents some momentum going into the Eastern Mass. Tourney.

Kane hit a 10-foot jumper with two seconds left in regulation to send the Stoughton game into overtime tied at 53.

In overtime he made an important steal and fed junior Joe Kelly, who was fouled. Kelly hit the pair of free throws to give the Presidents 58-57 lead with 24 seconds left.

On the ensuing possession, Russell came up with a loose ball under the Quincy basket and was fouled. He hit both foul shots and gave the Presidents their final 60-57 lead with three seconds left.

"I knew I didn't want anyone but Robbie (at 5-8 one of the smallest players on the floor) with the ball for the last shot in regulation," Franceschini said. "Fortunately, Stoughton was playing man-to-man defense and Robbie got off a good quick shot and he hit it."

Quincy had a 40-36 lead with 11:30 left in regulation, but poor shooting enabled the Knights to climb back. In the final 10 minutes Quincy managed only two field goals and Stoughton went on a 16-5 run, taking a 46-45 lead with 3:23 left in regulation.

For the game, Quincy shot a dismal 33 percent from the field (15 for 46).

Pat Mitchell hit a three-pointer to give the Knights a 52-48 lead with 1:18 left. However, he missed the front end of a one-and-one with 39 seconds left and Stoughton went into the loser's bracket.

Marshfield, coached by former North Quincy coach Ed Miller, easily defeated Stoughton, 60-46, in the consolation game. Marshfield had lost to Scituate, 66-49, in the opening round.

Hockey

North Quincy Finishes With 13-5-2 Record

By TOM SULLIVAN

The North Quincy hockey team finished off a fine season by going unbeaten in its last four games, winning three and tying Boston College High 4-4, last Friday.

The Raiders finished with a 13-5-2 record (8-5-1 in the Old Colony League) and qualified for the state tournament for the sixth time in 11 years and the second straight time for third-year coach Tom Benson.

B.C. High (10-6-3, 7-3 in the Catholic Conference) had already qualified for the tournament by finishing second in the conference.

"We didn't prep too much for this game as we have been in the tournament for the past three games," Benson said. "B.C. High is a very quick team and I told the kids to play well defensively and the offense will come around—just let the chips fall."

Goalie Sean Connolly, who had an outstanding year, again was the difference for the Raiders as he had 29 saves, including 14 in the final period when North was out-shot, 15-5.

"Sean did another tremendous job, just as he has all season long," Benson said. "He was the difference in several games."

B.C. took a 1-0 lead in the opening period but North Quincy took a 2-1 lead in the second period on goals by Mike DesRoche, who finished the season with 51 points, and defenseman John Gladu, who played outstanding defense all season but hadn't scored a goal until the last three games.

The Eagles came back with two goals in 1:08 for a 3-2 lead. At 8:05 of the period North tied it as Lee Hughes scored on a fine pass from Jim Kelley.

Gladu scored his second goal at 6:56 of the final period as he beat Brian Manning (11 saves) from 10 feet out. Less than two minutes later B.C. tied the score as sophomore Sean Sullivan took a pass from Chris Silvestro and scored when both teams were skating three aside.

Despite out-shooting North, 35-18, the Eagles had difficulty finding the net.

"It's been a problem the whole year," said coach Joe McCabe. "I felt late in the game our depth would pay off and we'd get more chances. We did get more chances but I give North Quincy a lot of credit. They came to play."

Earlier in the week North had followed up a great win over Milton (Milton's only loss) with a 6-1 win over Westwood.

DesRoche, a four-year veteran who had a terrific season, had two goals and an assist to pace the Raiders to their second victory over Westwood.

Joe Carinci, Dave Pacino, Jim Sapiezna and Kelley had the other North Quincy goals.

Sophomore goalie Mike Manganaro, making only his second start, earned his first varsity win.

Quincy Closes Out With A Bang

Quincy's hockey team ended an up and down season with a bang, wallowing Taunton, 9-3, last Thursday to finish with a 9-9-2 record.

The Presidents, enjoying their best season in several years, came within two wins of qualifying for the state tournament for the first time in more than 10 years.

"This was a fine year for us, but it was disappointing not to make the tournament," said coach Bob Sylvia, who completed his 29th season as Quincy coach. "I honestly felt we had a good chance at the tournament when we had a five-game unbeaten streak, but then we lost three tough games by one goal. Especially frustrating were the losses in our second games with Falmouth and Barnstable, both of whom we had beaten earlier."

"In both games we outshot them by wide margins, but their goalies had fantastic games, making all kinds of spectacular saves. But this season proved our program is on the way up. We had a very young team and had a fine sophomore goalie in Mark Smith, who carried the load all season long. He should be a great one next year."

Sylvia had a roster of 40 varsity and junior varsity players and 32 of them will return next season.

The veteran coach again will have to find some scorers as three of this year's four top scorers will graduate.

In the romp over Taunton, Jeff Craig finished an outstanding season with a hat trick and two assists. He finished the year with 40 points on 23 goals and 17 assists.

Steve Miller had two goals and two assists and Sean McArdle, Dan Morrell, Dave Mullen and Tim Messing had a goal apiece.

Jamie Schatzl as the team's number two scorer with 35 points on 13 goals and 22 assists and Sean McArdle and sophomore David Cooper were tied with 25 points apiece.

Cooper had 14 goals and 11 assists and McArdle had 11 goals and 14 assists.

"Cooper came along fast and we will be building our offense around him next season," Sylvia said.

Craig, Schatzl and McArdle are seniors and the other players who will graduate are top defensemen Mark Gilmore and Morrell, Mullen, Peter Caruso, Michael Wilson and Michelle Malone.

After being outscored by wide margins the past several years, the Presidents outscored the opposition, 88 goals to 75 this season.

--TOM SULLIVAN

Mite C's Second In Tourney

Quincy's Mite C hockey team placed second in the Cranberry Tournament, losing to Milton, 3-1, in the championship game.

Quincy blanked Providence, R.I., 5-0, in its opener with Jordan Virtue scoring two goals and Andrew Ross, Joey Fitzpatrick and Billy Ryan one each. Billy Ryan and Matt Conso had two assists apiece, and Matt Moriarty, Farr, Callahan and Fitzpatrick one each.

Quincy then tied Milton, 3-3, with Fitzpatrick scoring twice and Ross once. Fitzpatrick and Joe Callahan had assists and Matt Tupe had a fine game.

Quincy squeezed by Providence, 1-0, to move into the finals with Virtue scoring the lone goal and Ryan assisting. Tupe was outstanding in net.

In the championship game, Ross scored the goal and Sean Moriarty assisted.

BROADENING YOUR PERSPECTIVE

Nearly every highway driver has been startled by a car approaching from the rear which seems to "appear out of nowhere." This usually happens when the startled driver changes lanes and the once-invisible car emerges from behind from his or her "blind zone." This is the area of the driver's rearview vision that is out of the field of view of both the inside and outside mirrors. Drivers create blind zones by lining up their outside mirrors so that a portion of their own car is visible from the driver's position. To eliminate rearview blind zones, drivers are encouraged to widen their fields of view by rotating their outside mirrors 15 degrees further outward. This will remove any overlap (blind zone) in the field of vision of inside and outside mirrors.

HINT: More widely-set outside mirrors also eliminate headlight glare from behind by changing the angle of reflection.

Kolson Wants City To Withhold MWRA Sewer Assessment

seem to be any relief in sight.

Kolson said his sewer bill has increased from $500 in 1991 to $700 in 1992 and $1200 this year. "That's the average and the average bill is projected to go up to close to $2000 a year by 1995. In some cases the sewer bill is exceeding people's mortgages.

"And it's going to get worse. That doesn't make any sense. We simply can't afford it. Stop the project. The judge has to be sympathetic, the Congress and the state of Massachusetts House of Representatives, Senate and governor have to be more sensitive to the needs of the 43 communities.

"The water bill is not the problem. The sewer tax that they're putting on to complete that project is. We have to have that Clean Water Act reinstated to get some relief. That is the only way.

"The reason I am calling for this is to show that we mean business. The only way this can work is if we stand together. Is this civil disobedience, yes. Is this unlawful, probably. But as a political figure and as a community leader and activist, I want to use my office to help the people I represent and to come to some finality on this."

Kolson wants Quincy, and the other 42 communities receiving sewer service by the MWRA, to stop paying their assessments for that service. He sent letters to heads of government in those 42 communities Monday "to join with Quincy in helping us help ourselves."

Quincy's 1993 total sewer and water assessment is nearly $12 million. Of that figure, Kolson wants Quincy to keep the $9,303,672 billed for sewer service but pay the $2,623,724 for water. Compared to last year, the sewer assessment has climbed 27 percent.

However, there is a financial risk involved. If a municipality withholds a sewer assessment, the MWRA has the authority to ask the state for that money directly. In that case, the assessment is subtracted from a community's state local aid amount and added to the MWRA's budget.

A municipality's sewer assessment is paid by sewer users, primarily homeowners, businesses and apartment owners, who are receive sewer service from the MWRA. Thus, boycotting payments could impact a city or town even more if individual sewer bills are not paid to that municipality. That could, in the end, be a bigger drain on a municipal budget.

"I totally understand the ramifications," Kolson said. "This is a situation where they can take this assessment out of our Cherry Sheet (local aid). But I feel if all 43 communities stand together on this, politically we can put a lot of pressure on not just the state but also the federal offices."

"I think the price in the long run is worth paying. We're going to have to stand up and say 'we're going to have to do this differently. It's not fair.'"

Thomas Koch, executive secretary for Mayor James Sheets, said the mayor is also frustrated by soaring sewer bills and failed attempts to get relief. However, he said the mayor, who is out of the city until next week, would likely draw the line at withholding the sewer assessment.

"His strategy is to lobby Washington for more money, lobby Beacon Hill for more money, and keep the pressure on the MWRA Board of Directors to keep costs down.

"We think that is the right approach" Koch said, noting Gov. Weld has indicated the state may kick in more money for the cleanup.

Approve $3 Million Bond Issue

Early Childhood Center, Bernazzani Addition Get Council Green Light

By MICHAEL WHALEN

To the delight of School Committee members, teachers, parents and children, the City Council Finance Committee Monday night approved a bond issue in excess of $3 million for an Early Childhood Center to be built on the site of the former Lincoln School in South Quincy.

The unanimous decision also clears the way for a four-classroom addition to West Quincy's Bernazzani School. Mayor James Sheets sought the funds for the two-pronged project, which is being initiated to put a stop to an overcrowding problem that has developed at both the Bernazzani School and the Lincoln-Hancock School in Southwest Quincy.

A total of $2,172,540 from the bond will be put towards the ECC, while $905,000 will fund the building of the Bernazzani addition. An additional $127,540 from private donations will complete the funding necessary for the ECC.

Ward 4 Councillor Thomas Fabrizio said he was delighted that the project has finally been approved.

"This started a long time ago," said Fabrizio. "I was proud to see the work that the Ward 4 Neighborhood Association has done toward this. The group does not get the credit it deserves because it does not have a community center."

"The Lincoln School site will always serve as an educational center for the youth of this city."

Other councillors expressed similar sentiments.

"It's a great, great project and I'm pleased that it's going to happen," said Ward 2 Councillor Theodore DeCristofaro.

"This is probably the most important vote of my six years on the council," added Ward 3 Councillor Lawrence Chretien.

"It's a win-win situation," agreed Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers.

Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson said he once toured the Bernazzani School with recently retired Principal Morrie Hibbard and discovered that at least one group of

Wants Air Traffic Study On Structure Reviewed Studds Urges FAA To Hold Tower Hearing

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Congressman Gerry Studds has asked the Federal Aviation Administration to call for a public hearing on the impact of a 700-foot communications tower constructed in West Quincy.

In a letter written Monday to FAA acting administrator Joseph DelBalso, Studds also urged the administration to review a decision by the New England Region Air Traffic Division pertaining to the tower. The study stated the tower presents no hazard to air navigation.

Since the tower first appeared, residents in West Quincy and East Milton have demanded the imposing structure be dismantled and taken down. The residents also want a chance to air their concerns about the tower.

They are outraged that they were not notified of the developer's intent to locate the tower off Ricciuti Drive.

At a July 9, 1991 Zoning Board of Appeals meeting, tower developer Frank DiRico said the structure would have little, if any, effect on the surrounding neighborhoods. Because the tower is positioned more than 300 feet from any dwellings, nearby abutters were not notified.

There is strong interest in this matter, not only in the aeronautical community but among residents of the West Quincy and Milton areas. A thorough airing of all safety issues is critical to a responsible decision," Studds said.

"The fact that this tower has already been built should not preclude the FAA from revisiting this decision," the congressman continued. "When issues of safety are concerned--for those conducting flight operations in the air, their passengers and for those on the ground as well--a developer's financial interest should not supersede the paramount interests of public safety."

"When a developer proposes to erect a structure in or near navigable airspace, whether it is a 20-story building or a communications tower, the average citizen relies on the FAA to determine--reviewing all available evidence--whether it poses a hazard to air navigation."

"This is an appropriate and necessary governmental role. Were the FAA to refuse this review," Studds said, "many people might well lose faith in the agency's ability to look out for their safety, only further eroding citizen trust in government."

Studds said before determining the effect of a proposed construction of navigable airspace, the FAA "normally consults with interested parties

'Feel Like A Newcomer'

LaRaia Returns To City Council

Joseph LaRaia is back on the Quincy political scene after a six-year hiatus.

LaRaia was unanimously elected by the City Council Monday night to fill the councillor-at-large seat vacated by Patricia Toland, who left the council to seek the city's assistant clerk position.

Although he will have to run in the September election if he wishes to keep the seat beyond the end of the year, LaRaia, who has been in and out of political office in Quincy since 1960, said that for now he's simply happy to be back on the council.

"I feel like a newcomer," he said after being sworn in by City Clerk Joseph Shea. "This is the first time in 5 1/2 years I've been in the council chambers--as a councillor."

"I just want my express my gratitude to the council for its vote," LaRaia added. "I know that they could have taken other avenues to do this."

The council appointed LaRaia to the seat by virtue of the fact that he finished fourth in the battle for the city's three councillor-at-large seats in the September 1991 election, behind Councillor Timothy Cahill, Councillor Michael

DeCristofaro Announces Bid For Seventh Term

Ward 2 Councillor Ted DeCristofaro announces he will seek re-election to a seventh term.

In announcing his candidacy, DeCristofaro pointed out a ward councillor is the closest link that residents have to City Hall—and how important it is to be responsive to constituent concerns.

DeCristofaro, who has served as Ward 2 councillor since 1982, has worked in a cooperative manner with two mayoral administrations. He attends most meetings of the License Board and the Zoning Board of Appeals. DeCristofaro presently chairs the City Council's Veterans Services Committee and the Public Health and Hospital Committee.

DeCristofaro was an early opponent of the siting of a sludge plant at the Fore River shipyard. He led in the successful fight against Clean Harbors to locate a toxic waste incinerator at the Fore River basin. He has pledged to continue his efforts to monitor current operations of the MWRA and those of Procter & Gamble relative to health issues.

DeCristofaro was listed in Who's Who In Government Services 1991 as an honored member. He has also been awarded commendations by veterans' organizations, including the Quincy Veterans' Council, the Disabled American Veterans sponsored by the Quincy-Cavanaugh Chapter 79 and the Jewish War Veterans Post #193 and the Beth Israel Brotherhood.

DeCristofaro, a lifelong resident of Ward 2, is known for speaking out at

TED DeCRISTOFARO

Council meetings only when he has something pertinent to say; and then for getting right to the point.

He is a graduate of Quincy schools and is married to the former Betty Petzoldt. Prior to his election to public office, he was actively involved in community affairs. He is a co-founder of the Ward 2 Civic Association and the recipient of many awards.

DeCristofaro has been involved in such community issues as public safety with regards to the fire station in Ward 2, the condition and maintenance of the streets, and since 1982 has fought for improved safety of the Fore River bridge. In the near future, the state DPW will initiate major improvements on the bridge; work will continue over the next year.

DeCristofaro has also worked to increase the number of police and firefighters as well as a permanent foot patrol on Washington St.

He said he will continue to work with the people at the Fore River shipyard to secure as many shipbuilding projects as possible.

DeCristofaro has filed an ordinance which imposes a substantial penalty for the illegal dumping of infectious or hazardous waste materials within the city. He was able to bring about the completion of necessary work at the intersection of Water St. and Quincy Ave. that was such an unsightly area for many years.

DeCristofaro has been a friend of education for the City of Quincy. He was recently selected by The Friends of Quincy High School as "The Best of the Best Friends of Quincy High School" for his active role in supporting Quincy High School.

If re-elected, DeCristofaro said he looks forward to working with and representing the people of Ward 2 for another two years. He pledges to continue to work to improve whatever needs to be done to prioritize public safety and provide a better quality of life for the residents of Ward 2 and the rest of Quincy.

Shea, 5 Councillors Firm On Toland As Asst. City Clerk

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Despite a temporary setback at Monday night's City Council meeting, City Clerk Joseph Shea said Tuesday he intends to pursue the nomination of former City Councillor Patricia Toland to Quincy's assistant city clerk position.

Toland's bid to attain the position was blocked at the meeting when Councillor Michael Cheney objected to the order that would have allowed the council to elect Toland to the assistant city clerk's post.

Cheney's action forced the council to table the matter until its March 15 meeting.

The position has been open since Shea vacated it to replace former City Clerk John Gillis, who retired in October. Toland resigned from the council in January to pursue the position.

Cheney has argued that the position should either be abolished or reduced to part-time status, in order to save the city money. Toland has also received opposition from District 925, a labor organization that says the job is a union position and should be posted so that others may apply for it.

The assistant city clerk's position is represented by the Hospital, Library and Public Employees Union, which voted last week to join District 925, a division of the Service Employees International Union.

Shea, however, says he is "still abiding by the city solicitor's (Stephen McGrath) opinion that we don't have to post it."

McGrath has said that the city ordinance creating the position supersedes the union contract and that Shea should be allowed to choose whomever he wants as his assistant.

Toland also still has the votes of at least five councillors--Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers, Councillor Timothy Cahill, Ward 3 Councillor Lawrence Chretien, Ward 4 Councillor Thomas Fabrizio, and Council President Charles Phelan--for the position.

Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson and Ward 2 Theodore DeCristofaro have both expressed reservations about voting for Toland. Joseph LaRaia, who was elected by the council last night to fill Toland's councillor-at-large seat, said he was undecided.

Only a majority of the city's nine councillors are needed to elect Toland to the position.

Phelan said at Monday night's meeting that a recent letter from the union in opposition to Toland's appointment should have no bearing on the decision because it was sent anonymously.

"I think this letter is irresponsible and reprehensible," said Phelan, "that someone wouldn't have the guts to sign it. I'm just very disappointed (in whoever sent the letter).

"I do respect the councillor's (Cheney) right to object, but I think the position is needed."

Other councillors also spoke in support of Toland.

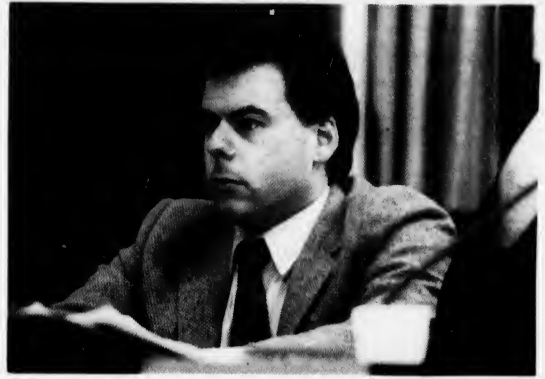

"Now that this position is available, we have to look at the qualities we want for this position," said Chretien, who made a motion to nominate Toland. "Patricia Toland is an intelligent person, and an educated person, and has run for office and been voted in by the voters of Quincy every time."

"I'm convinced that Patricia Toland is going to be able to work quite well in the position of assistant city clerk."

"Patricia Toland could step right into the position without having to learn how things in Quincy work," said Cahill. "The longer we delay, the more trouble we'll be in. Right now there's a general mess in the clerk's office, and that's not a reflection on Joe (Shea), who has done an excellent job."

"One of the problems I see with this is that we're interfering with a department head. With all respect to my fellow councillor (Cheney), we should respect the city clerk's position. It's his choice, and it's our choice to vote 'yes' if we agree with the decision--and I do--and 'no' if we respectfully disagree."

License For New Cafeteria Gets Preliminary Approval

By KURT MOFFETT

A new cafeteria in Quincy is close to opening.

The License Board indicated Tuesday it will grant Gardner Merchant Food Services, Inc., on 25 Newport Ave., a Common Victualer license provided it passes its next inspection, Chairman Joseph Shea said.

The Board told applicants Linda D. Wimer, the regulatory sanitarian, and Jill MacKinlay, the cafeteria manager, that Local Building Inspector Kathy Nugent must verify that the cafeteria's fire extinguisher is recharged, the emergency lights are fully functional and the kitchen preparatory area is cleared of paper cups and boxes before it will grant the license.

Shea said the license will allow Gardner Services to run an in-house cafeteria for the building.

The 36-seat cafeteria passed all other departmental inspections and will not have to appear before the Board again, Shea said.

Patrick Gullins: In Memoriam

[The following was submitted to The Quincy Sun in memory of Patrick M. Gullins, 22, who was recently killed in a Wollaston shooting.]

Editor, The Quincy Sun:
He was my brother and godson, uncle to my children, godfather to my second son, who he remains named after.

He filled these roles with such great ease, and they were just a few. He was kind, sensitive, thoughtful, loving, with a smile for all he knew. A loving son, a brother, an uncle to 15, a boyfriend, friend, and neighbor, worker, cousin too.

A life can touch so many, in so many different ways. I hope you will all remember we still love him every day. I held him on his day of birth and cried with such great joy, and then again on the day he died, the sorrow fills my soul.

He just turned 22 years old, still playful like a boy, yet had to still be like a man, so quick to give my mom a hand. He only saw the good in people and overlooked the bad. For this he lost his life, and will forever make us sad.

He was killed for something he didn't do, so senseless was this act—that his friends came forward with all the clues to help us with the facts. Knowing they could hurt themselves, but in the end could help their friend. They made us proud and eased the pain and hopefully will show the blame.

They say life isn't measured by its length, but by its depth. We know this pain is very deep, also affecting friends, so I'll take it as a tribute and hope that time can mend.

I've always had a thing for stars, and Patrick was our brightest. So if I tilt my head some night and see a twinkle there, know my darling Patrick—that we will always care. Rest in peace...

Love, your godmother, sister and friend,
Linda Jablonski

P.S.—Thanks to the Quincy Police Department, especially Lt. McDonough, Det. Murphy and Det. Curtis for the kindness shown to the Gullins family in recognizing the love Patrick Gullins portrayed and the outstanding job done in their search for the truth.

Things Are Really Tough

Things must really be tough.

Uncle Sam is out of work and job hunting.

Quincy's Uncle Sam Rounseville sent out an SOS (Save Our Symbol) the other day hoping to land a job with a company to "take advantage of my creative salesmanship."

"I want to be America's cheerleader," he says. "I want to promote the American Way."

The former Leroy Lincoln (as in Abe) Rounseville legally changed his name to Uncle Sam by court decree on Flag Day, 1991 "to promote a renewed sense of patriotism."

Since then—on his own—he has travelled around the country and overseas as Uncle Sam in full regalia.

He has visited 109 cities in 42 states promoting voter registration and visiting hospitals, nursing homes and schools.

He was there cheering the U.S. on at the Winter and Summer Olympics and was at the Democratic and Republican National Conventions.

He sat with actor Jack Palance at President Clinton's inaugural. And met Secretary of Commerce Ron Brown and super-model Christie Brinkley and had his picture taken with them.

A lot of great contacts. But no job.

Rounseville owned a former fabric store in downtown Quincy and was a textile salesman for 25 years. "I like to sell and I have the experience," he says.

What he would like to do is hook on with a company to represent them at special promotions and events. And for good public and community relationships, to represent the company at schools, hospitals, nursing homes, etc.

Or, even better, to be recognized as the nation's official Uncle Sam and become an Ambassador of Goodwill "to promote patriotism."

Uncle Sam lives at 77 Adams St.—just down the street from the Adams Mansion.

"John Adams and John Quincy Adams are my neighbors," he likes to muse.

He is actually listed in the telephone directory as Uncle Sam. The number, appropriately is 774-1776.

If you have an opening for Uncle Sam, you can reach him there.

Maybe Bill Clinton who wants to put people back to work might be interested in helping Uncle Sam land a job as a good start.

But maybe Uncle Sam would do better to talk with Hilary Clinton first. If she says yes, they might even find a White House office for him.

"We need a full-time Uncle Sam with the way things are today," says Rounseville. "Not just a Fourth of July Uncle Sam."

Maybe he'd make sacrificing a little easier to endure.

We might even get to smile a little while coughing up those new taxes.

UNCLE SAM

seats on this year's ballot.

A captain in the Army Reserve who was called up during Desert Shield, he will be making his first political run. He and his wife, Marie, are parents of a five month old daughter, Elizabeth.

IN CASE YOU'RE thinking of hitting the campaign trail this year, nomination papers will be available May 17 notes City Clerk Joseph Shea.

The preliminary election will be held Sept. 14 and the final Nov. 2.

THE FOURTH ANNUAL Salute to St. Patrick hosted by Rep. Steve Tobin and his wife, Francine, is set for Tuesday, March 16 from 7 p.m. to midnight at Pat Flanagan's Pub, Parkway, Quincy Center. A buffet and Irish band is on the agenda. Tickets are $12 per person.

A BLACK SHEEP in the illustrious Adams Family? Stephanie Adams who was last November's centerfold in Playboy, is now strutting her stuff in a New York strip club and reportedly wowing 'em.

Stephanie, who is 22, claims to be a direct descendant of Presidents John and John Quincy Adams.

Things could be worse. What if she was named Abigail!

PERSONAL: Congratulations to Dolly and Jeff Newman on the birth of Kellie Christine, their first child, Tuesday at South Shore Hospital. She's gorgeous!

SMILE DEPT: Councillor Peter Kolson doesn't know who wrote it (neither do we) but he sent it along thinking you might get a chuckle out of it. (Maybe recognize yourself).

It's entitled "I Can't Remember" and goes like this:

I CAN'T REMEMBER

Just a line to say I'm living, that I'm not amongst the dead,
Though I'm getting more forgetful, and mixed up in the head.
I've gotten used to my arthritis, to my dentures I'm resigned,
I can manage my bifocals,
but how I miss my mind.
For sometimes I can't remember when I stand at the foot of the stairs
If I must go up for something, or have I just come down from there.

And before the fridge so often,
my mind is filled with doubt,
Have I just put food away, or have I come to take it out.
And there's time when it is dark with my nightcap on my head,
I don't know if I'm retiring, or just getting out of bed.

So, if it's my turn to write to you, there's no need for getting sore
I may think that I've written, and don't want to be a bore.
So, remember that I love you, and wish that you were near,
But now it's nearly mail time, so I must say good-bye, my dear.
Here I stand before the mailbox, with my face so very red,
Instead of mailing you my letter,
I have opened it instead.

THE U.S.S. SALEM, a Quincy-built heavy cruiser shown above in the Mediterranean Sea in 1951, will return home as early as next month to become one of three featured ships at the planned U.S. Naval Shipbuilding Museum at Fore River. The Salem will be joined by the U.S.S. Salmon, a diesel-powered attack submarine; and a destroyer, perhaps the U.S.S. Cogswell or U.S.S. Benson.

Quincy's Yesterdays Bond Issue Sought To Aid Parking Area

Acting mayor Clifton H. Baker led a delegation of Quincy residents to a State House hearing before the Committee on Municipal Finance in support of a bill to improve the Ross Parking Area.

The legislation, which was filed by Rep. William W. Jenness of Quincy, would permit the city to borrow up to $300,000 to level, pave and install parking meters in the lot.

March 4-10
1949
44 Years Ago

Alexander, Purdon of the Chamber of Commerce told the hearing the area is hazardous; it becomes a pond in rainy weather; and it is so rough that women are afraid to drive their cars in it.

"The plan contemplates the installation of parking meters," he said. "If the national average of $6 a month per meter is maintained, the income from these meter would be in excess of $50,000 a year."

CHRISTMAS LIGHTING FOILED

Meanwhile, the Legislative Committee on Cities and Towns rejected a bill, filed by Rep. Avery W. Gilkenson of Quincy, that would have permitted the city to contribute $2,500 for Christmas lighting.

The Chamber's Purdon said the total cost of lighting Quincy Sq. for the holidays had reached $5,300, an amount that was difficult to raise through contributions from merchants and the public.

"We told them to put their money in the treasury and the City Council would match it if they see fit," said City Auditor Leo E. Mullin, who spoke in opposition to the bill.

Shipyard Past To Come Alive At Naval Museum

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

For most of the 20th century, the Quincy Fore River shipyard bustled with activity, producing more than 700 proud Navy vessels as well as cargo and passenger ships from 1903 to 1986.

But when General Dynamics closed the yard seven years ago and the MWRA purchased the massive site for part of the Boston Harbor cleanup project, many observers thought its maritime legacy had passed into history, only to be remembered by the thousands of workers who helped manufacture some of the world's mightiest ships.

Not quite.

A group of dedicated volunteers, led by Bill MacMullen, are quietly assembling the necessary pieces and doing the legwork to establish a United States Naval Shipbuilding Museum and permanent home for the Massachusetts Military Archive. The museum, which organizers hope to open on a six-acre site on the banks of the Fore River in the fall, will feature three Navy ships and eventually two buildings full of exhibits and artifacts explaining and detailing the yard's past.

Someday soon, visitors will relive the yard's history by touring three ships, the U.S.S. Salem, a heavy cruiser; the U.S.S. Salmon, a diesel-powered attack submarine; and a destroyer, either a Fletcher class or Benson class "tin can."

The Salem (CA-139), built by Bethlehem Steel and launched at the Quincy shipyard in March, 1947, is the largest of all the "big gun" cruisers built for the USN. MacMullen, the museum's executive director and driving force, said earlier cruisers had a propensity for sinking. The Navy redesigned the cruiser to make it faster,

A THREE-INCH 50-caliber anti-aircraft gun donated by the U.S. Navy recently arrived at the Quincy shipyard where it will become part of the planned United States Naval Shipbuilding Museum. The gun, which came off a Cootz-class destroyer commonly built near the end of World War II to 1960, was the type of gun most frequently installed at the Quincy shipyard, according to Museum Executive Director Bill MacMullen, left. The gun will be used for instructional purposes. A similar gun will be placed outdoors on a "training green" with other Naval artifacts. The guns were shipped to Quincy from Baltimore by Shaughnessy Trucking. With MacMullen are museum staff volunteers Polly Walker and Don Timmins.

tougher and more heavily armed.

For example, the Salem has 8-inch guns with automatic firing; a rate five times faster than its predecessors. At 718 feet long, it is longer than any battleship attacked at Pearl Harbor in December, 1941.

It was also the first cruiser equipped with air conditioning. As such, the Salem, which is currently dry docked at the Philadelphia Navy Yard, was deployed in warmer climates, including the Mediterranean as the flag ship of the Sixth Fleet.

The U.S.S. Salmon (SSR-573), part of the Sailfish submarine class, is still in use. Commissioned in 1956 from the Portsmouth Naval Yard, she is presently berthed in Groton, Conn.

At 350 feet long, the Salmon runs quieter than nuclear powered boats. As a result, the Navy uses the Salmon in "adversarial training." Because the Salmon's technology is similar to submarines in other countries, including the USSR, the Navy uses it in training missions to see if nuclear subs can "hunt it down."

The Salmon, unlike the Salem and the destroyer, will be taken out of the water and put on land for educational purposes. There it will be made accessible inside and out with part of its hull exposed.

Visitors will be able to see how a diesel sub works. Also, unlike other museums, the tower with functioning periscopes will be open to visitors.

"We may set it up so that visitors look into a periscope and see the Salem," MacMullen said.

The Fletcher class destroyer considered for the museum is the U.S.S. Cogswell (DD 651), now part of the Turkish Navy under the U.S. "Lend-Lease" program. In some respects, the Cogswell would be the museum's crowning jewel.

"The Fletcher class destroyer represents the high point of Naval technology," said MacMullen, a naval systems planner. "It is the most graceful, has the most firepower, it's the most versatile. It's the ultimate in design."

"Today's destroyer doesn't resemble her World War II predecessor," MacMullen added.

Built in 1943 in Bath, Maine, the Navy still owns the Cogswell and has given MacMullen permission to pursue her. Alan Shepard was an ensign on the Cogswell during World War II before becoming the nation's first astronaut in 1961. He commanded the Apollo 14 moon-landing Jan. 31, 1971.

The U.S.S. Benson, a Benson class "tin can," is the other destroyer mentioned for the museum. Now in Taiwan, it's in "excellent shape," MacMullen said.

The Benson (DD421) was built in Quincy by Bethlehem Steel and launched November, 1939.

MANET COMMUNITY HEALTH CENTER was recently awarded a $250,000 grant as part of a statewide $10 million appropriation for uncompensated care provided to patients. Charles Baker, secretary of Human Services, right, presents a symbolic check to Ellen Hafer, center, executive director of Manet Community Health Center; and Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson, during the secretary's recent visit to the local health care center.

$250,000 State Grant To Manet Center For Patient Health Care

The state will provide a $250,000 grant to Manet Community Health Center, Inc. for eligible patients who cannot afford to pay for their health care.

The grant was announced by Secretary of Human Services Charles Baker at a recent visit to the health care center located at 1193 Sea St. The money is made available through the Health Care Financing Law which covers uncompensated services for patients.

Ellen Hafer, executive director of Manet Community Health Center, said the money will enhance the financial stability of the health center and they access of uninsured and underinsured individuals to primary health care services. She said she hopes the grant becomes an annual appropriation.

Speaking to members of the Manet Community Health Center, Inc. Board of Directors and clinical staff, Baker recognized the important role of independent licensed health care centers in providing access to health care statewide. There are 56 community health care centers statewide, including 28 independently licensed health centers. They provide services to more than 200,000 Massachusetts residents annually.

Manet Community Health Center provides more than 32,000 visits annually at its three sites. Just over 18 percent of its patients have no insurance and many are underinsured. Independent health centers will now be recognized under the health financing bill that also continues to recognize hospital services and hospital licensed health centers.

Baker spoke with Manet board directors including Gertrude Peter, president; Judith Kolson, program chairperson; Anne Kane and Betty Swanton, as well as the medical staff led by Dr. Frederick Dolgin, M.D., and Jane Maffie-Lee, R.N., clinical services director.

Joining the meeting for a discussion of changes in health care policies and patient needs were Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson and James Hunt, executive director of the Massachusetts League of Community Centers.

Statewide, Massachusetts will provide $10 million in payments to independent health care centers over an 18 month contract period for uncompensated care provided to patients.

Our Policy On Engagement Photographs And Wedding Announcements

The Quincy Sun will continue to publish photographs with engagement announcements as it always has.

The Sun will also continue to use in wedding announcements the names of all members of the wedding party including maid or matron of honor, best man, parents, bridesmaids, ushers, flower girls and ringbearers, etc.

We invite engaged couples to submit their photos with their announcements, and when submitting their wedding photo to include a complete listing of the wedding party.

Black and white photos are preferred. The Sun can convert most color photos to black and white for publication but the photo loses some clarity in the process.

We suggest that when you have your engagement photo taken, you request the studio to send a copy to The Sun with the reminder that The Sun is continuing its policy of publishing engagement photos.

The Sun also publishes articles and photos of wedding anniversaries beginning with the 25th anniversary.

And, as in the past, there is no charge.

JEAN PETITTI

Jean Petitti Quincy Hospital Employee Of Month

Jean Petitti, a clerk in the Quincy Hospital medical records department, has been named the hospital's Employee of the Month for December.

Recruited by the hospital to work as a junior clerk after graduating from Quincy High School in 1976, Petitti's work involves filing birth certificates, compiling birth and death statistics, and providing medical records subpoenaed by the courts.

"Her work is consistently accurate and timely," says Laura Hunziker, RRA, director of Medical Records.

Petitti says the department is much busier than when she started, and that the work is more challenging. "The switch to the new computer system went very smoothly and now we have the capability of pulling up all previous dates for every patient, and that's a real advantage."

Priscilla Kutchmanich, a colleague, says, "Jean always pitches in, she always ready to help out."

Other co-workers agree. "She has a great deal of knowledge about the medical record systems," Hunziker says. "What I feel sets her apart from others is her instinctive ability to take the leadership role during difficult or trying situations."

"Jean's not afraid to pitch in with any task, in fact I rarely have to ask for her to do it."

Petitti lives in Quincy. She has a large family nearby, with six nephews and five nieces, a number of close friends throughout the hospital.

The Communities Listed Below Committed Less Of Each Budget Dollar To Their Children's Schools Than Did Quincy:

Adams	Boston	East Brookfield	Mt. Washington	Orleans	Spencer
Athol	Chilmark	Gayhead	Nantucket	Provincetown	Tolland
Barre	Danvers	Gonolod	Norwood	Royalton	Wakefield

Since 1990, not much seems to have changed. Tentative figures for F.Y. 1991, provided by Massachusetts Teachers Association research, ranked Quincy 332nd for that year. Quincy's sad lack of commitment to its own (your) children is reflected in its poor treatment of your children's teachers. Our state pay scale ranking has fallen to 296th for beginning teachers, and 166th for experienced teachers. Quincy must commit to its teachers to commit to its kids. The first step, is for Quincy to pay teachers the "going rate" for area teachers, and to treat its own children as they deserve.

Exercise Your Way To A Healthy Life

Most people know that aerobic exercise can help them lose weight, strengthen and condition their muscles, and increase their energy. Yet many people don't fully understand that aerobic exercise can play an important role in enhancing our quality of life and, more significantly, preserving it.

"Exercise is a lot more than a beating heart and a sweaty brow—it's an opportunity for people to take charge of their lives," says Jeff Zwielfel, M.S., exercise physiologist and director of The National Exercise For Life Institute. "Following a regular exercise program adds years to your life and life to your years."

Exercise for a healthy heart

Recent research has shown that exercise can be an effective weapon against the nation's number one killer, heart disease. In fact, health authorities, such as the Centers for Disease Control, are now saying that people who don't engage in exercise run twice the risk of developing heart disease as those who exercise regularly.

"Aerobic exercise helps people reduce the risks of developing heart disease by controlling high blood pressure, reducing cholesterol, managing stress, and maintaining ideal body weight," Zwielfel says. "People who exercise regularly increase the power and size of the heart and blood vessels, which enables that muscle to pump more blood with less effort. Vigorous exercise also conditions the lungs, tones the muscles, keeps the joints supple and builds stamina," he notes.

Any form of physical activity is good for your health, but only regular, brisk and sustained exercise— aerobic activities— such as jogging, swimming, rowing or cross-country skiing, will improve the efficiency of the heart.

Exercise for a longer life

According to the August 1991 issue of the University of California, Berkeley Wellness Letter, an editorial originating in the Annals of Internal Medicine is stated that, "functional aerobic age is probably lowered by the conditioning effect of repeated exercise." In other words, exercise can make you body younger.

Recent studies have revealed that older people can start an exercise program at any age and quickly experience physiological benefits, as well as a reduced incidence of chronic diseases. Research conducted at Washington University School of Medicine in St. Louis found that heart function in men and women in their sixties improved by 25 to 30 percent after a year of aerobic exercise.

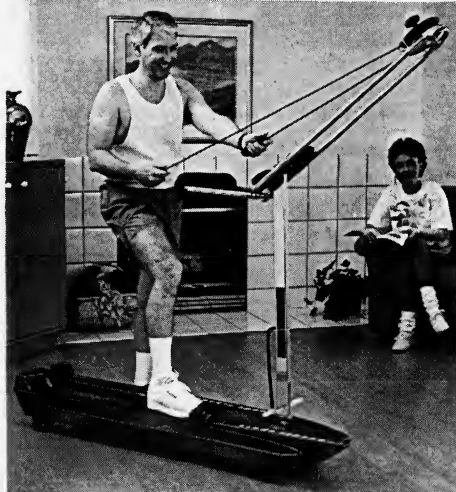

"For every hour of physical activity, another hour—or more— may be added to one's lifetime," concludes Dr. Ralph Paffenbarger, a researcher who studied the exercise habits of nearly 17,000 Harvard alumni over the course of 25 years. Paffenbarger found that subjects who were physically active lived longer—as many as two years longer— than their sedentary counterparts.

RELIEF FOR JUVENILE ARTHRITIS

Rheumatoid arthritis is a cruel, incurable disease whenever it strikes, but never more so than when its victims are children. Juvenile rheumatoid arthritis results in inflammation of the joints, causing pain, stiffness and swelling. The condition can eventually lead to destruction of the joints. One of the torments of juvenile arthritis has been that anti-inflammatory drugs, the main avenue of treatment, do not ease the painful symptoms of at least one-third of young patients. Now, however, doctors are finding that the drug methotrexate, a common cancer medication, can be effective in treating children with arthritis. There is even hope that the drug may slow the destructive course of the disease.

P.S. Some 71,000 children in the United States suffer from juvenile rheumatoid arthritis.

Methotrexate is bringing new hope to the families of juvenile rheumatoid arthritis sufferers. If you would like to learn more about this topic, or about how you can modify your lifestyle to help ward off heart disease, call COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE at 472-2550. Office hours are by appointment at 101 Adams St., Suite 24, in Quincy. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals.

What About That Pain In The Neck?

We've all heard the expression, "You give me a pain in the neck," meaning that stress can affect us in a painful way, especially if there is weakness in one's neck.

The neck is the most delicate part of the spine and the most easily injured. It is comprised of seven separate bones that are loosely connected together by ligaments and muscles. The structure of the neck allows for great mobility but also predisposes it to injury. Poor posture, occupation, falling asleep in a chair or on the couch, car accidents, falls, twists and strain take their toll on the neck (cervical spine).

The part of the nervous system housed within the bones of the neck is an extension of the brain. Displacements or misalignments of the neck bones may cause pressure on the adjacent spinal nerves commonly referred to as "pinched nerves."

Some of the symptoms seen most often with pinched nerves in the neck are: headache, sinusitis, dizziness, neck pain, shoulder pain, and pain, numbness, and/or tingling into the arm, hand or fingers.

One should always consult a chiropractor after a motor vehicle accident, fall or strain even if you do not think you are hurt. If you have any questions or would like to make an appointment, please call Dr. Mark Jaehnig, a lifelong Quincy resident, at Quincy Chiropractic Office, 110 Billings Rd., North Quincy, MA. 773-4400.

More Adults Working To Be Fit

The "fitness boom" may finally be booming.

Frequent adult participation in seven classic fitness activities increased 29.1 percent, from 32 million Americans in 1989 to 41.6 million in 1991, according to a study by the National Sporting Goods Association (NSGA).

"In 1991, one out of every four American adults was a frequent participant in fitness activities," said Thomas B. Doyle, NSGA director of information and research. "This is a dramatic improvement from the one out of five we had seen in our previous two studies (1989 and 1987)."

The number of non-participants declined to 65.2 million in 1991, from 66.8 million in 1989 and 69 million in 1989 and 69 million in 1987. "The improvements were seen across most segments of the adult population," Doyle said. Only younger adults, ages 25-34, showed no improvement in the non-participation rate.

Who's in the Lead?

The most dramatic increases in frequent fitness participation came in the 55-plus age group. Among adults 55 and older, 14.6 million were frequent participants in 1991 compared to 10.9 million in 1989. Slightly more than 27 percent were frequent fitness participants in 1991, compared to 20.9 percent in 1989.

The 51.2 percent non-participation rate among adults 55 years of age and older remains the highest among all age groups. Among 35-54 year olds, the non-participation rate was 36.2 percent in 1991; among 25-34 year olds, 31.1 percent.

Among those 55 and older, women were more likely than men to be frequent participants in fitness activities. In 1991, 57 percent of the frequent fitness participants in this age group were women. Exercise walking was the most common fitness activity among both women and men.

Women do a better job than men at maintaining a fitness regimen, the survey showed. Among women, 27.7 percent are frequent participants in adult fitness activities, compared to 22.9 percent of men. Only 34.9 percent of the women are classified as non-participants, compared to 45 percent of men.

Women dominate aerobic exercising (75 percent of frequent participants), exercise walking (64 percent of frequent participants) and swimming (57 percent). Men lead as frequent participants in running-jogging (69 percent), calisthenics (57 percent) and bicycling (54 percent). Men and women exercise with equipment frequently on an almost equal basis.

For the NSGA study, a frequent participant is an adult 25 years of age or older who is active in a fitness activity at least twice a week.

How Acupuncture Can Help You

Healing through acupuncture has been handed down over thousands of years in China. It offers a technique for treating many illnesses by using a few thin, almost hair-like, needles. With these, the practitioner is able to regulate the energy of the human body, according to the rules of traditional Chinese medicine.

This theory teaches that all living bodies have a kind of field energy which is channeled through pathways called meridians. Distributed along this network are the controlling energy centers, the acupuncture "points," of which more than 800 are now known.

It is at these points that the skilled practitioner tries to influence the energy flow. Modern techniques are not limited to acupuncture needles but may consist of needle-less electrical stimulation, heat, ultrasound and other high-frequency modalities as well as manual stimulation therapy.

Acupuncture and western medicine have the same goal: to help the patient. They do not compete but complement each other. Paracelsus, the 14th century physician, said: "The doctor has only one duty and that is to cure. If he succeeds it will not be important which method he used." More recently, the World Health Organization has concluded that "acupuncture must be taken seriously as a clinical procedure of considerable value."

Patients are often surprised when problems with insomnia, headaches, abdominal pain, back pain or other physical complaints clear up at the same time they are treated for other disorders. This is a fringe benefit. Acupuncture normalizes the body's vasomotor reflect system which, in turn, influences the blood vessels, constricting those that are abnormally dilated and dilating those that are abnormally constricted.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

SCOTT DEWARE

There is a big difference between a sterling silver plate and a silver plated one. One is silver all the way through and is expensive; the other is silver plated on the outside only and costs less. The silver on the plated plate can wear off after use and the copper or metal underneath becomes visible. The sterling silver plate becomes more beautiful with use.

We all know 'silver and silver plated' human beings. At first glance they may look alike, but what happens when a bad crisis comes up? ... A test of character comes up? ... A time of definite decision comes up? ... In a silver plated person, the 'copper or metal' underneath soon shows through. It is not hard to recognize a plated person ... It may take more time to recognize the sterling person because at first glance he may look the same as the plated person. You have to see this person in his successes, his failures, his hopes and dreams, his disappointments and his joys. When the 'copper' doesn't show through, you know that this person has a sterling character ...

Yes, like silver, it costs more to be a sterling person; much more in terms of integrity, honesty, unselfishness and patience ... But in the final analysis, there is no comparison with the cheaper product ...

Shipyard Past To Come Alive At Naval Museum

MacMullen said Franklin D. Roosevelt, who was secretary of the Navy before becoming president, had a strong affinity for the Benson class and kept appropriations for six ships alive in 1936. The Benson, which shares the name of its class, served in the Atlantic and Pacific, including Normandy.

Besides the three ships, there will be hundreds of artifacts, displays and exhibits as well as other amenities at the museum.

Among the exhibits will be shipbuilding in Quincy, naval life, ship models and ship design. Visitors will also be able to speak with the crew and take part in actual drills and more.

Guests will visit a memorial for all members of the Armed Services as well as exhibits at the Massachusetts Military Research Center and Archive. The latter will include artifacts from all U.S. military engagements up to and including Operation Restore Hope.

The museum will also feature hands-on exhibits of artillery, tanks and other equipment both from U.S. forces and their adversaries.

For example, 2 three-inch 50-caliber anti-aircraft guns donated by the USN arrived at the shipyard last week. The guns, which came off a Coontz-class destroyer commonly built near the end of World War II to 1960, was the type of gun most frequently installed at the Quincy shipyard, MacMullen noted.

The guns, like many of the other artifacts, will be used for instructional and educational purposes.

The volunteers have also received the last American flag to fly on the Salem before it was decommissioned. The flag was donated by James Walker of Quincy, who served on the cruiser.

To help make the museum a reality, MacMullen is appealing for private donations. He emphasizes no state or city revenue is being used for the project.

"This is not a city project. There are no public tax dollars, city or state, going into this. So we really need the public's support," he said.

Initially, MacMullen said $50,000 is needed to pay for lawyer's fees and for technical, engineering and architectural purposes. Those donating to the museum will receive certain benefits based on the level of funding.

The top contributors, those giving $1000 or more, will receive a lifetime museum membership with the benefactor's name inscribed on a plaque at the museum. These benefactors, called "plank owners" will be on board the Salem when it arrives at Fore River in the spring.

To date, MacMullen has secured 19 plank owners, ranging from accountants to restaurant and tavern owners. His goal is 100.

Those wishing to contribute to the museum can visit the museum's office at Presidents Place, suite 105 N, 1250 Hancock St., Quincy Center, or call 479-7900.

Of course, the museum will need more than private donations to construct the facility and berth the ships. By the end of next month, MacMullen said he hopes as much as $5 million in bonds are floated. This money will be used to construct all museum buildings and to prepare the ships. The bonds will be repaid through admissions revenue.

The museum has already received a helping hand on the preparation end. Bath Iron Works has offered to paint the Salem free of charge—amounting to 690 gallons of gray paint.

The ground floor of the museum's first of two buildings will contain artifacts, the military archive and a theatre which will show vintage film festivals and interviews with shipyard workers.

Located on the second floor will be the curator's office and old documents dating back to John Quincy Adams, who established the Navy during his presidency, and war records from Massachusetts cities and towns.

On the third floor will be administrative offices

THE THREE-DIMENSIONAL model of the planned U.S. Naval Shipbuilding Museum at Quincy's Fore River Shipyard. The museum will be located on a six-acre site on the banks of the Fore River and will be accessible from the traffic rotary off Washington St., Quincy Point, (upper right hand corner.) Organizers hope to open the museum in the fall.

and a function room with catering accommodations for up to 800 people. MacMullen said 29 ship reunion groups have indicated interest in visiting the museum, with 300 people generally in each group.

The reunions, coupled with a trolley system connecting Quincy's other historic sites to the museum and business promotions, could attract as many as 500,000 people to the city annually for a welcomed economic boost, MacMullen said.

"If Fall River and Battleship Cove can draw 165,000 people a year, we certainly can draw a lot more," the director said.

The site will contain 1500 parking spaces. The museum will also be linked by water shuttle with the Charlestown Navy Yard, home of "Old Ironsides," the U.S.S. Constitution. Visitors will be able to tour the Constitution, board a shuttle, and then visit the museum, and vice versa.

MacMullen pointed out the Navy Yard should have one of its biggest years ever in 1997, the 200th anniversary of the Constitution.

Quincy will also be designated a port of call for foreign ships. "Ships could tie up at the museum and visit Quincy for the day," MacMullen said.

The Salem is expected to arrive first, perhaps by the end of April or May. The Salmon is still in service and will likely arrive about eight months after the Salmon.

Because the Cogswell and the Benson are both involved in foreign navies, MacMullen said it will probably take a year to get either ship due to the paperwork involved.

The museum's main building will probably take six months to construct. If all goes according to plan, the museum will open in the fall.

For the last 13 months, MacMullen and his volunteers have been working long hours trying to put the museum's pieces together without compensation.

MacMullen, who has visited 20 other museums throughout the country, is convinced the determination is paying off. "We are farther along than any of those other museum developments were at the same juncture in time. Considering we are a volunteer effort, that's great."

"I'm really proud of all the people who have pitched in. We're making history here."

Shea, 5 Councillors Firm On Toland As Asst. City Clerk

"There's no reason not to vote on this tonight. I think she (Toland) is the right person for the position."

Cheney, however, would not waver from his position.

"This (assistant clerk) issue is an issue I raised at a budget session long before any candidates were discussed," said Cheney. "It was not an issue of Pat Toland, but the council chose to ignore it."

"That's why I've been stomping my heels on this issue. I feel very strongly that if a councillor ever had an issue to debate, I would always give that councillor the opportunity to do so. How can anyone say this position is or isn't needed if it hasn't been debated?"

"I'm not prepared to vote on this tonight, and I'm invoking my right to object to the order."

After the meeting, Toland expressed confidence that she would be appointed to the position in two weeks and responded to both Cheney and the union.

"There was knowledge of who the candidates were," she said in reference to Cheney's comments. "Public names were offered in The Quincy Sun's 'Sunbeams' column, which all of the political people in the city read, a month before the budget session. That's an inaccuracy on his (Cheney's) part."

Several names, including Toland and Cheney, appeared in the "Sunbeams" column last April. This was a month before Cheney proposed the assistant clerk's job be abolished.

Regarding the letter from the union, Toland said she agreed with Phelan.

"You don't pay attention to anonymous letters," she said. "You have to stand up for your convictions (and sign your name) if that's what you really believe. I don't know what 'union' this is; maybe it's a couple of disgruntled people."

"Two men (in similar situations) were appointed to positions that weren't posted before me."

Cheney, and Toland.

"We did the same thing with the School Committee (when there was a vacancy)," said Cahili. "We chose the person who finished fourth in the election."

Ward 2 Councillor Theodore DeCristofaro also spoke in favor of the nomination.

"Joe LaRaia is the perfect person for the job," he said.

LaRaia was first elected to office in 1960, when he became Quincy's Ward 2 councillor. He has since served as councillor-at-large, mayor, and most recently as councillor-at-large again from 1980-87.

Speaker will be Jane

Asked after the meeting if he felt his in-again, out-again political career has been more interesting than most, he said he did.

"Definitely," he said with a smile. "If I had been in here for 20 straight years, it would have been dull."

LaRaia said that he was especially proud of his two years as mayor (1976-78), but added that he may have been a bit too active while serving in that position.

"Like (Quincy Sun Publisher) Henry Bosworth has said, I did too much too soon," he said. "I did an awful lot in two years, but there's a price to pay for that."

"When you change things quickly, it's like a bull in a china closet. It's too quick for a lot of people, who don't want change too quickly. They want an afternoon tea."

"With all due respect to others who have served as mayor in this city, I accomplished quite a bit in two years, where other mayors have tried to spread it out over a few years."

LaRaia said it would take him some time to become acclimated to serving on the council again and was not certain as yet which issues he would first turn his attentions to.

Basketball

Catholic Memorial Too Much For North

The North Quincy boys' basketball team's disappointing season came to an abrupt end last week when it was overspun by Catholic Memorial, 91-65, in the first round of the Eastern Mass. Tournament.

The Raiders, who had defeated Brookline, 64-51, in the preliminary round, finished with a 9-13 record, as compared with last year's 15-5 mark.

North never had a chance against CM, which raced out to a big 53-25 halftime lead.

The Raiders couldn't stop Bruce Higgins, who had a game-high 35 points, including 20 in the first half.

Everything went right for CM, which employed a stifling half and full-court press to keep the Raiders from gaining their footing, and also forced coach Ted Stevenson to go with shorter, speedier players in order to keep up with the quick winners.

Stevenson had one of his tallest teams this year but the smaller, quicker teams have North the most trouble and it was the same story in the CM game.

"I didn't want our intensity to drop," said CM coach Joe O'Day. "We were up by nearly 25 and a couple of times they nearly got going and if they closed to 15 then Sean Donovan could have tossed in a couple of three-pointers."

Donovan, only the second player in North history to score 1000 career points, scored 14 to finish with a career total of 1084 points.

The Knights shot only 44 percent from the field and scored only 10 field goals in the second half when O'Day cleared his bench.

North played with composure and hustle as Mike Patch and freshman Matt Beston had seven points each, Tim Byrne scored six and Joe Welby had five. They all played well down the stretch.

"It was one of those nights," said Stevenson. "They played extremely well throughout and we had a horrible night. They definitely were on. We didn't quit, and I'm proud of our kids, but CM was on its game. We prepared for their pressure because we knew it was their strength, but we couldn't handle it."

Meanwhile, the North Quincy girls were eliminated from the tournament in the opening round for the third year in a row.

However, in contrast to the past two years when they lost by a single point to teams they had defeated twice during the regular season, this time the North girls were never in the game as they lost to New Bedford, 48-30.

The Whalers, seeded 13th with a 12-6 record, had a 29-9 halftime lead and increased it to 40-11 with 14 minutes to go.

Joanne Currier led 20th-seeded North, which finished at 9-12, with eight points.

Legion Baseball

Butkuss, O'Connor Receive Top Quincy Legion Awards

Garett Butkuss and Rob O'Connor received the major awards at the annual Quincy Legion baseball dinner held recently at the post home.

Butkuss received the Brian Spring Memorial Scholarship award as the player who excelled not only in baseball, but also as a student.

Butkuss, who attends Northeastern University, is listed in the national academic "Who's Who."

O'Connor received the George French Memorial Award as the player who exemplified what Legion baseball stands for.

He played for the Abp. Williams high Div. II state championship team last spring.

The speaker was Ray Cattaneo, present manager and former longtime coach of the Morrisette Legion baseball team.

Cattaneo spoke of his days in the Boston Braves minor league system.

He also spoke on what Legion baseball has done to provide boys with a place to not only expand on their skills but to help them grow as individuals off the playing field.

"It gives a player a chance to learn about how to deal with the good times as well as the bad times, sportsmanship and loyalty," he said.

Track

North Girls Tie For 9th Spot

The North Quincy girls' track team tied for ninth place in the all-state championships with 12 points.

The top performance was turned in by North's captain, Heather Rendle. On a day when many had trouble clearing heights in the high jump, Rendle cleared a personal best 5-4 after clearing 5-0 and 5-2, finishing second behind Stoughton's Joanne Durant, who set a new all-state record with a leap of 5-8 1/2.

North's Suzanne Lewis ran a slow, conservative first mile, then help off several competitions to place third in a season's best 11:34.8. In the two-mile.

Lewis and Rendle qualified for the New England championships March 13 at the University of Rhode Island's new Mackel Athletic Center.

North Quincy received some excellent performances in the State Class B championships held the previous week at Harvard.

In the boys' competition, Jeremy Gott placed second in the 600 in 1:16.2, the fastest time in a decade. Gott ran conservatively early and turned it on in the final lap of the three-lap race, almost catching John Lehan of Xaverian, one of the premier runners in the state.

"Jeremy is ready to take his place with the state's top runners," said coach Geoff Hennessy. "And he's only a junior."

In the girls' competition North finished seventh in the 31-team field with 20 points.

In the two-mile Lewis took second behind Newton South's Eliza Beardslee, the top distance runner in the state.

In a surprise, Stacie Minukas placed fifth in the shot put and the 4X880 relay team of Mel Gaziano, Katie McNamara, Jessie Ceurels and Eric Doherty placed fourth.

Rendle, who missed the entire dual meet season, cleared 5-2 on her first attempt to lock up third place behind Joanne Durant, who the Class B record of 5-8 leap (the old record of 5-6 1/2) was set in 1981 by North Quincy's Kara Crehan), and Debbie Levy.

"Heather is doing the most important thing a high jumper can do," said Hennessy. "She's clearing heights on the first attempt, but now she's got to make the big jumps and 5-4 is just a matter of time."

Seamans Clocks 92 Miles In Ski-A-Thon, Raises $3,500 To Aid Blind

Quincy's Bob Seamans took part in last weekend's Waterville Valley Ski for Sight Ski-A-Thon to help newly blind persons and, although he had to drop out of the 24-hour cross-country event after 151 1/2 hours and 92 miles, he raised about $3500 in pledges. The event benefited the Carroll Center for the Blind.

"I fully intended to go the full 24 hours but the weather caught up with me," Seamans said. "My hands were nearly frost-bitten and my toes were bothering me. I also had chills up my back. There were two warming huts but you couldn't get warm.

"It was 13 below zero at the start of the event and it got up to about 20 but it was still beautiful with the sun out and no wind. However, the wind picked up after the sun went down and it was bitterly cold at 7:30. I finally had to stop at about 11 o'clock."

Seamans is a member of the Board of Directors of the Carroll Center. His wife, June, also participated and skied eight miles.

"I want to thank every one who made pledges in my behalf and despite my dropping out, I'm happy I could assist in this wonderful cause."

North Quincy Wins Tourney First Round

By TOM SULLIVAN

The North Quincy hockey team, which finished the regular season unbeaten in the last four games (three wins and a tie), continued its hot streak last Sunday night when it defeated Chelmsford, 5-1, at Merrimack College in the preliminary round of the state tournament.

The Raiders (14-5-2), seeded 12th, were scheduled to meet fifth-seeded Everett (14-3-2) last night (Wednesday) at Merrimack. If they win the game they will face the winner of the Somerville-Walpole game Saturday in the quarterfinals at a site and time that hadn't been decided at press time.

North Quincy started slowly against 21st and last-seeded Chelmsford (9-6-4) and fell behind after only 29 seconds of play.

However, that quick goal didn't upset North coach Tom Benson. In fact, he was happy to see it.

"I'm glad they scored first and I'm glad it happened quickly," he said. "Every time we score the first goal we lose. When Chelmsford scored that goal, I turned to my assistant coach and told him we were going to win this game. It's that time of situation that gets our team going."

North bounced back quickly and goalie Sean Connolly had another excellent game, blanking Chelmsford the rest of the way and coming up with several fine saves among his 21.

North tied the game at 1:01 when Mike DesRoche took a Andrew Vermette pass and skated in alone on Matt Stanton. DesRoche, who scored 51 points during the regular season, fired a shot past Stanton's right skate for his 29th goal.

His 30th goal followed at the 10:05 mark of the period when he took a Brian Kelley pass and slide the puck under an outstretched Stanton for a 2-1 lead.

Chelmsford had out-shot North, 9-3, until that point.

After failing to get a shot off during a power play to open the second period, the Raiders took a 3-1 lead at 4:55 when Brendan O'Brien took the puck away from a Chelmsford defenseman, and fired a slap shot. The shot caromed off the right post, beating the surprised Stanton.

Connolly faced only five shots during the period but he made a great save off Eric Ryan on a breakaway with 4:32 left. North extended its lead to 4-1 when DesRoche passed to Jim Sapienza, who lifted a backhanded over Stanton from the right faceoff circle.

The Raiders were held to three shots in the final period but Sapienza made one count as he scored his 16th goal on a power play with DesRoche (now with 54 points) and A.J. Carthas assisting.

"I really didn't think Chelmsford had much out there," Benson said. "I thought they were weak and we played down to their level at times. But Connolly again came up with a couple of big saves in the third period. We will have to play much better against a good Everett team."

earlier loss to South Boston by beating Southie, 6-2. Lefebvre had his second hat trick, Carloni two goals and Sullivan one. Assists went to Nestor, Gaeta and Lumaghini. Brian Correlia and McCusker had fine defensive games and Pizziferri and O'Donnell again were outstanding in goal.

The team played two games last Saturday at Marlboro and won both by shutouts as goalie John Laukkanen had outstanding games with fine support from backup goalie Greg Burke.

Quincy sneaked by South Boston, 1-0, with Jeff Glynn scoring the goal and Snaith assisting.

Later that day Quincy overpowered Tri-City, 9-0, paced by Manning's hat trick.

Gamel scored twice and Gates, Smith, Glynn and McGann once each.

DISC VERSUS DRUM BRAKES

The two types of brakes available on automobiles are drum brakes and disc brakes. Drum brakes work by two curved brake pads pushing outward on a rotating drum. Many cars use drum brakes on the rear wheels because they tie in easily to the parking brake system. However, drum brakes can fade, heat up and lose their braking ability. Disc brakes are fade resistant and often used on the front wheels of cars because the front wheels are deemed most important to stopping. As a car stops, its weight shifts forward, giving the front brakes a greater braking role. Disc brakes' stopping power comes from two flat brake pads that push inward on a rotating disc (rotor). Because this setup provides better performance and reliability than drum brakes, some cars feature disc brakes on all four wheels. HINT: Brakes should be inspected every six months. For most of your cars maintenance needs including whatever needs to be done with your brakes, rely on our technicians at LEO & SWALT'S SUNOCO. Here at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree, 843-1550, we have a Computerized Brake Analyzer from Hunter. With this expensive piece of equipment, we can analyze your brake system including brake balance, parking brake, slide/slip etc. There is no charge for this additional service. We also invite you to take advantage of our All-Data Computer System. Come on in and we'll tell you about both these items. "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer."

Superior teamwork by Quincy held off strong Medfield attacks, even in the last minute when Medfield pulled its goalie and had a 6-4 player advantage.

assisting on Murray's goal. Ryan Kruger had an excellent game in goal and Jamie Parisi and John Katsarikas played strong defense.

Morrissey Urges Full Funding For 'Quinn Bill'

State Senator Michael Morrissey (D-Quincy) has urged the House Ways and Means Committee to follow the Governor's recommendation in his budget submission, and fully fund the Quinn Bill for Fiscal Year 1994 (FY94).

The Police Career Incentive Pay Program, better known as the Quinn Bill, was passed in 1970 to provide an incentive for law enforcement professionals to further their formal educational training. The legislation called for the state and local community to each pay fifty percent of the cost of the incentive.

Due to recent budget restraints, the state has not fully funded the provisions of the Quinn Bill since 1988, leaving municipalities to pick up the difference. The Norfolk Superior Court recently ruled in favor of 30 communities who had filed a suit against the state for payment of monies owed under the Quinn Bill.

Morrissey, in a letter to Ways and Means Chairman Thomas Finneran, urged the Committee to fully fund the Quinn Bill because it is "...imperative that we meet our financial obligations to cities and towns under the Quinn Bill" and that cuts in the budget should "...not come at the expense of public safety. The Governor has stated his past support for public safety, but this is the first year he has proposed fully funding the program and that has only come about as a result of the Court decision against the state."

Funding for the Quinn Bill was capped at $6.7 million in 1988. The Governor has asked for full funding for FY94 at $13.7 million. The funding level for FY94 does not address past monies owed to municipalities as a result of the recent court case. "We must also redress the Court decision requiring the program to be funded," Morrissey said.

Kolson Asks Council To Join MWRA Protest

By MICHAEL WHALEN
Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson asked his fellow city councillors Monday night to join him in a protest directed at the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority.

Kolson last week urged leaders of the 43 communities that currently pay a sewer tax along with their water bills to the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority to hold back in escrow that sewer portion of the bill.

Kolson said at Monday night's City Council meeting that he also plans to petition President Bill Clinton to visit the City of Quincy so that he "can learn first hand" the economic impact the sewer bill is having on local residents and communities.

The councillor referred to the MWRA's method of charging for its services as the "economic raping" of this region.

"It's not rocket science," said Kolson in reference to the financial burden placed on communities by the MWRA. "People are hurting."

Councillor Michael Cheney agreed, urging the rest of the council to support Kolson in his actions.

"People are on fixed incomes right now," said Cheney. "Soon people will have to be outside the MWRA district to afford a home."

Kolson said after the meeting he planned to fly to Washington, D.C. today (Thursday) with the city's congressional delegation to present letters and petitions he has collected against the rates to U.S. Congressman Gerry Studds.

Earlier in the evening, City Solicitor Steven McGrath said at a meeting of the council's Environmental Control Committee that the Sheets administration is continuing to lobby for state and national funds in excess of $200 million in order to help alleviate the burden of the MWRA rates.

McGrath said with an infusion of such funds, less money would have to be borrowed for the Boston Harbor cleanup during the next fiscal year.

"That way, there would only be an increase (in the rates) of about eight percent, instead of the 30 to 40 percent we've been experiencing," he said.

McGrath also said that "six or seven" other communities have expressed interest in joining Quincy in a lawsuit against the MWRA because of what McGrath termed its "unfair" rates.

The MWRA currently charges some communities, such as Quincy, based on population, while others are charged on a "flow-based" system based on actual water usage.

McGrath said Tuesday that the City of Boston pays about $17 million a year less under the "flow-based" system than it would by population. Quincy, charged by its population, pays approximately $1.5 million more than it would under the "flow-based" system, he said.

Dumpster Fencing Deadline Extended

The City Council Monday night passed with emergency preamble an amendment to an ordinance regarding the proper care of dumpsters in the City of Quincy.

The ordinance was passed Dec. 31, 1991 and initially required that dumpsters owned by new businesses in the city be fenced in by an enclosure and placed on a cement or asphalt pad.

Extension dates of March 10, 1993 for established businesses and March 10, 1994 for residential complexes with eight or more units using a dumpster were allowed at that time.

The amendment passed Monday night extended those dates to June 10, 1993 and June 10, 1994 respectively. Council members agreed to the amendment because such physical changes to dumpsters are more difficult to make in the winter months.

"I don't see a problem with a three-month delay," said Councillor Timothy Cahill. "Nobody in the Health Department will be jumping down people's throats if they can't physically do it."

"Three months will give smaller businesses more of a chance to comply with this," agreed Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers.

"We've had a tough winter," added Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson. "I'll vote in favor."

Studds Urges FAA To Hold Tower Hearing

such as the Massachusetts Aeronautical Commission and those parties conducting flight operations in the area.

"In fact, the code of federal regulations encourages such consultation."

Such consultation includes soliciting comments from all interested persons as well as exploring objections to the proposal and attempts to develop recommendations for adjustment of aviation requirements that would accommodate the proposed construction or alteration.

The MAC regional effect of the proposed construction or alteration on the safe and efficient utilization of the navigable airspace.

$1 Million Family Entertainment Center Planned

A $1 million, 40,000-square foot family entertainment center is planned for Quincy.

Bill Morrill, president of Creative Fairs, Inc. of Quincy has notified the Quincy Planning Department of his plans to open the facility later this year.

Three or four sites in Quincy are under consideration, he told The Quincy Sun.

"We expect to provide over 150 full and part-time jobs at our $1 million facility," Morrill said in a letter to City Planning Director Richard Meade.

Morrill asked the Planning Department and the newly formed Quincy 2000 group to help him find a building large enough to house the entertainment center.

Morrill noted the city has lost privately owned recreation facilities in recent years.

"With the loss of two bowling alleys and the city's only miniature golf course, there is an overwhelming need for a family center in Quincy," he said.

The center would have a miniature indoor golf course," he said.

"The demand for family entertainment was best demonstrated at the Quincy First Night celebration when thousands of families came together in Quincy Square last New Year's Eve," he said.

Morrill said the family center will cater to the younger set-ages toddler to pre-teen-and will feature children's amusement rides such as a merry-go-round, mini ferris wheel, skee ball and interactive games of skill.

There will also be a large play port area to highlight physical fitness, he said, and a redemption featuring a Children's Corner with books, video tapes and games for sale. A food area geared toward the family will also be included in the center.

Morrill said plans are already underway for special events featuring local artists and entertainers. Local artists will be invited to display their works.

The family center will specialize in birthday parties, family celebrations, corporate events and field trips, he said.

facilities where she developed deficiency-free programs and obtained JCAHO certification and an accommodation. At Elihu White, she will be responsible for on-going nursing activities and the implementation of new programs and specialties.

Rosman was selected as a "Most Outstanding Young Woman in America" in 1986 and was included in "Who's Who in Nursing" in 1988 and 1989.

the students were being forced to use a broom closet as a classroom.

"There are many reasons to support this (project), and most of them are under four feet," Kolson said in reference to the children in the audience.

"To turn this down, we would be sending the message that we don't care about the school children of Quincy," added Finance Committee Chairman Timothy Cahill.

Councillor Michael Cheney praised Fabrizio, School Committee member Peggy King, Superintendent of Schools Eugene Creedon, and "especially the parents" of both schools for working to make the project a reality.

"It's been a long time since we built or added to any of our facilities," said Cheney.

Although a public hearing was not scheduled, two audience members were allowed to speak on the matter before the vote was taken.

Representing the Lincoln-Hancock community, Stephen Linskey of 27 Alton Rd.

spoke of some of the overcrowding problems the school has experienced in past years and thanked Creedon, the Ward 4 Civic Association, and the School Committee for helping to prepare the project for Finance Committee approval.

"We await your favorable and intelligent vote," he said.

Linda Monaco of 21 Glendale Rd. spoke for the Bernazzani contingent.

"It feels like we've waited an eternity for this," she said. "There is no better time than now for our children. You can make a difference in the lives of our children. Please vote in favor."

The ECC and Bernazzani votes were done separately, and each was greeted with a thunderous burst of applause from the audience.

Creedon said last month the Bernazzani addition, once begun, should be completed by the opening of the 1993-94 school year. The superintendent has also said that the ECC would take longer because it requires the construction of a completely new building, but should be open by sometime in the fall.

Students who attend the ECC, which will be built for children ages preschool through Grade 1, will not be inconvenienced if the building is not ready for the start of school, according to Creedon. Those students would simply remain at the locations where their classes are held now.

Ayers Calls Meeting On Sagamore St. License

Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers will hold a community meeting Thursday, March 18 at 7:30 p.m. at the Atlantic Neighborhood Center, 12 Hunt St., North Quincy to discuss the application received by the Quincy License Board for a license to operate at the site of the former Sagamore Inn.

Ayers has also distributed a survey flier to the neighbors of the former Sagamore Inn for their input in making a decision on the license. Ayers, the residents of the area, and the new group of officers of the Atlantic Neighborhood Center, have been working to improve the Welcome Young playground and have initiated new programs at the center for youngsters, adults and seniors.

In the past, there have been problems at the site of the former Sagamore Inn. Neighbors have expressed the concern that a new establishment could generate a similar movement.

"I believe a councillor's most important role is to be a voice for the community and to protect the residents' interests," said Ayers. "By having this meeting on March 18, all will be given the opportunity to express their concerns. I urge everyone to return their survey flier and to attend the meeting. This is the residents' opportunity to control what happens in their neighborhood."

The License Board was originally scheduled to review the license request at its Feb. 23 meeting but postponed the matter until March 23 because Ayers requested that a community meeting be held first.

Rate Up 5.5% In 1992

Mullen, Sheets: City Holding Own In Crime Fight

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

The number of misdemeanor and felony crimes reported and detected in Quincy rose an aggregate 5.5 percent during 1992 and the amount of serious crimes alone increased 6.5 percent during the same period, according to statistics released by Police Chief Francis Mullen.

Compared to 1990, the number of misdemeanors and felonies fell 4.2 percent last year while serious crimes increased 1.8 percent.

According to the statistics, there were 5,777 reported misdemeanors and felonies during 1992, up 319 or 5.5 percent over the 5,458 reported in 1991. For serious crimes (felonies), there were 3,620 reported last year, up 233 or 6.5 percent from the 3,387 reported in 1991.

For 1990, there were 6,025 reported crime incidents, of which 3,556 were felonies or serious crimes.

Mullen said Quincy is "holding its own" as far as policing and crime fighting, especially compared to cities similar in size to Quincy.

"As I look over our statistics and the statistics from other cities in Massachusetts, we about the eighth or ninth largest city. I think there's much more crime in other cities and towns.

"I think we're holding our own for a city our size. We're addressing problems as they arise.

"I think we're maintaining our level. There are certain crimes we don't have any control over."

Mayor James Sheets agreed. "It's my opinion that the crime has basically levelled off. If you look at the statistics, in some instances they are up, in other instances they are down.

"I'm very pleased with the work of the Quincy police department. Ten to 12 years ago, we had 188 patrol officers; today, we have 133. I think we're getting a tremendous response from our police department.

"I think our crime fighting has become more effective and that affects our crime rate," the mayor added.

Mullen and Sheets said Quincy's crime fighting is compounded by its proximity to Boston, transit system and access to major highways.

"We have a lot of people coming into Quincy (and committing crimes)," the chief said.

While Quincy is among the 10 largest cities in the state with approximately 88,000 residents, the chief noted Quincy fares better in certain crime categories than other cities comparable in size.

For example, the city of Lynn with 81,000 people had 12 murders last year. Quincy had one. Lynn also reported 921 assaults compared to Quincy's 620. The number of burglaries was also dramatically different, with 2,003 in Lynn and 968 in Quincy.

"In Quincy, we try to target certain areas where there are problems. We try to get in there and correct the problems," Mullen said.

Regarding serious crimes in Quincy, there was one murder in 1992, the same as 1991 and 1990. The number of rapes, which includes assaults with intent to rape, rose slightly, from 26 in 1991 to 27 in 1992. In 1990, there were 28 reported rapes.

"This hasn't changed," Mullen said referring to the number of rapes. "It's not abnormal."

Of the 27 reported rapes, 17 suspects faced court, six were not

Over $340,000 Spent So Far

Old Man Winter Depletes Snow And Ice Budget

This winter's weather has taken its toll on the city budget, depleting the snow and ice removal budget for the first time in four years.

According to DPW Operations Manager Lester F. Gerry, the city has spent $340,338 on snow and ice removal this winter. The figure, which does not include last Friday's storm, will increase the tab to at least $350,000, some $50,000 over budget.

More than four feet of snow has fallen on the city this winter.

As in past years, the city set aside $300,000 for snow and ice removal this winter. When costs exceed the budget total, money is generally transferred from free cash. If there is no free cash, money is taken from the following year's budget.

The last time the city's storm reserve was exhausted was 1989 when Quincy spent nearly $400,000 to clean snow and ice from city streets. Besides the $300,000 reserve, another $98,000 was spent.

There are four main expenses which account for the $340,000: salt and sand, parts and repairs, rental equipment and overtime.

The cost of salt and sand was the highest at $101,023. The price for salt and sand, $25 per ton, is set by the state.

Parts and repairs to DPW storm-removal equipment totaled $96,215 followed by $78,669 in overtime and $61,729 in rental equipment. The final figures do not include last week's storm or other miscellaneous items such as food for employees who work overtime.

MAYOR JAMES SHEETS, left, and DPW Commissioner David Colton stand with the city's new front-end loader which was delivered Tuesday. The $115,000 piece of equipment, purchased through a bond issue, replaces a 21-year-old loader which was in need of overhauling. The loader performs many functions, including loading sand and salt onto trucks, managing leaf compost and cleaning up storm debris.

Officials Welcome New DPW Front-End Loader

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

A new front-end loader was delivered to the city Tuesday and could not have arrived at a better time.

The 1993 Michigan L120B American-made front end loader replaces a 1972 Trojan front end loader which the city had used for more than 20 years and recently broke down. The city's other two loaders, a Michigan 1976 and a Case 1970, are in equally poor condition.

The Michigan is currently experiencing engine and transmission trouble. DPW officials estimate the loader needs $12,000 in parts plus mechanics time to put the Michigan back in working order.

The Case is a smaller machine of limited usefulness.

The new black and yellow loader equipped with a modern hydraulic system, four-cycle diesel engine and a safety and comfort tested and approved cab, cost $115,000, said DPW Commissioner David Colton.

The loader, the first purchased in more than 20 years, was bought after a bond was floated by the City Council at the request of Mayor James Sheets earlier this year.

City officials figured it was time to buy a new loader. Repairing one of the department's older loaders or leasing a newer one would have cost the city additional money in the long run, they said.

For instance, Colton said the cost to repair the Trojan would have been approximately $50,000. It needed a new engine, center pin and bucket. Even after the repairs, the commissioner said the city would still be left with a 1972 machine requiring increased maintenance.

In addition, the cost to rent or lease a loader is approximately $90 to $100 an hour. A loader leased during the last snow storm would have cost the city $5000 to $6000, Colton said.

The loader, equipped with a four-cubic-yard scoop, can perform a myriad of daily public works functions and tasks, said Operations Manager Lester Gerry.

It can load all DPW dump trucks as well as all material for sewer and water breaks. The truck has the capacity to load 2,000 tons of sand, 1500 tons of salt and calcium for snow storms.

The loader stock piles salt in the DPW storage shed and mixes 50 percent sand/50 percent salt for snow and ice covered hills. The truck can turn more than 5,000 yards of leaves for the city's composting program, and then loads them for reuse.

The loader can also act like a crane to load equipment and material and stock pile waste material from water, sewer breaks, street sweepers and catch basin material. The material is then loaded into a screener so it can be reused.

In addition, the loader can stock piling cemetery soil, remove snow and help clean beaches. It can also provide emergency services, such as clear roads, travel through flood waters and rescue citizens.

Colton and Gerry thanked Sheets and his administration, the City Council, notably Public Works Committee Chairman Bruce Ayers and Vice Chairman Peter Kolsen, for their support.

Sheets said the new piece of equipment will boost the DPW's functions as well as department morale.

"I'm thrilled to have it because we needed it," Sheets said while noting the city has not had a capital outlay budget in four years. "It's a plus because of what the piece of equipment can do and it's a plus for morale."

Hope To Negotiate Contract Settlement Mediator To Sit Down With QEA, School Committee

By KURT MOFFETT

A mediator will try to negotiate a teachers' contract settlement between the Quincy Education Association (teacher's union) and the School Committee when the parties meet tonight (Thursday).

Teachers have been without a contract since Aug. 31, 1992.

QEA President Tom Walsh said both sides began negotiating last summer before the contract expired, but they still cannot agree on how much teachers' raises will be for the next 2-3 years.

Their last contract included no raise in the first year, a two-percent hike for the first six months of the second year, and an additional two percent for the second six months of the second year.

Walsh said the QEA and the School Committee have decided not to discuss the "fine details" of their current negotiations to the media.

Teachers picketed City Hall in mid-February to protest the unsuccessful contract negotiations with the School Committee and the QEA has advertised in The Quincy Sun that Quincy is not committed to education. One advertisement said that "Quincy has not settled a contract on time with its teachers since 1973!"

A recent report by the Massachusetts Teachers Association ranked veteran Quincy teachers 166th in pay among 325 Massachusetts school systems and starting teachers 296th.

Walsh said that 20 years ago, Quincy teachers' pay was in the "top ten percent" and 10 years ago, was in the "40, 50, 60 (percent) range" in Massachusetts. Teachers are "upset" that this downward trend has continued and "don't see a turnaround" in the near future, he added.

Teachers are still picketing City Hall every day until a new contract is settled.

Tonight's meeting is at 7 p.m. at the Massachusetts Teachers Association, 100 Grandview Rd. in Braintree.

Non-Alcohol Club License Request Continued

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The Quincy License Board Tuesday continued for one week a request from the fraternal organization Sober Friends for a Non-Alcohol Club License at 92 Sagamore St.

Atty. Steven Fleming told the board that the membership of Sober Friends is comprised of men and women with an average age of 45 to 50 years old. He said the members are "both professional and working people, people from all walks of life" who have grown up together and enjoy playing cards, watching television, and other informal activities with each other.

The membership only totals about 50, according to Fleming, and there would be "kind of a come-and-go situation" at the club so that probably no more than 10 to 15 members would be at the site at one time.

Fleming also noted that Sober Friends were willing to take over the responsibility of "policing that area (the site in question) for cleanliness." The site, an abandoned building, has in recent days been covered with litter and broken beer bottles, Fleming said.

City Clerk Joseph Shea said that although Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers was out of town Tuesday, a public meeting was held Feb. 11 on the Sober Friends request and all of Ayers' concerns on the matter have been met.

Police Chief Francis Mullen, however, said he did not want to make a decision on the request until he was able to personally view the site.

"I want to take a look at it. I wouldn't want to do anything (with the request) today," said Mullen. "I haven't had time to make it down there, but I will make time before next week."

Building Inspector Matthias Mulvey told Fleming that the board would also need specifics on the exact square footage of the site, the planned hours of operation, and what parking procedures were planned at the club before a decision on the license could be made.

Let's Calm It Down

A few thoughts on that now much headlined Quincy-North Quincy High School basketball game.

For openers, no one has ever accused Jim Sheets of being stupid. Stupid personally—or politically—he is not. No way!

SHEETS

So, I find it very hard to believe that he would stoop to juvenile jeering of cheerleaders at a basketball game.

I just can't picture him joining in on a chorus of alleged taunts as: "You're all ugly... 1-2-3-4, get the horses off the floor... You're all pigs, oink, oink!"

Quincy High School cheerleaders claim the mayor participated in such antics with North Quincy High fans at a recent basketball game between the two long-time cross-town rivals.

Now it turns out that a videotape of the game made by Sheets' wife Joann, shows him merely sitting in the stands looking at the North Quincy bench while nearby teen-age fans were standing and jeering the Quincy cheerleaders on the gym floor.

Sheets was at the game to cheer on his son, Luke, who is co-captain of the North team.

The videotape would seem to exonerate him. And even if it didn't, the charges just don't make sense.

For a mayor to go to a basketball game between two high schools in his own city and jeer the cheerleaders of one of the two schools would not only be unsportsmanlike but political insanity.

Why would he foolishly risk political repercussions by publicly taunting young cheerleaders from his own city?

Frankly, I wouldn't have to look at the videotape to believe he did not do it.

Jim Sheets is a good husband, a good father, a decent man who believes in family and community values, and a man who has been an inspiration to young people in the classroom as a teacher and in the political field as a candidate.

For him to do what he is accused of doing, he would have had to be completely out of character. He just isn't built that way.

After the videotape became known, the cheerleaders conceded that they never actually heard Sheets jeer them. But they insist they saw him standing next to North Quincy fans and he appeared to be jeering along with them.

"Appearing" to have done something and actually doing it are two different things. Is he guilty by association?

Should a man's political—and personal reputation be tarnished over something that "appeared" to have happened?

They toss cases out of court on flimsy evidence such as that everyday.

The cheerleaders want a public apology. Sheets says he doesn't have anything to apologize about. Unless it was the fact he sat in the North Quincy stands to cheer his son instead of in a neutral section where he usually sits.

The cheerleaders say he won't be welcome at this year's Quincy High School graduation unless he does apologize.

Hey, whoa! Let's not let this thing get out of hand. What the kids thought happened and what actually did happen at this basketball game apparently are two far different things.

This particular unfortunate incident got blown up in a newspaper when it shouldn't have. Not when an outright accusation one day became a something that "appeared" to have happened the next day.

We hope this thing dies a natural death.

Maybe the mayor and the kids could get together and just talk it out and put it to rest.

Putting it to rest, however, may not be that easy if the local daily doesn't let go of it. There seems to be a new installment each day.

Now the North Quincy cheerleaders say they were taunted—including an obscenity—by Quincy High fans at this game.

Two wrongs don't make a right. And if this kind of behavior is going on, it should be of grave concern to school officials and parents.

Such taunting is unsportsmanlike and down right insulting to the cheerleaders, their families and friends. Such antics at the very least spoil the fun of a basketball game or football game for mature fans who go to see the game and not to act like juvenile clowns.

These antics, as School Supt. Eugene Creedon notes, can over time escalate in intensity and suddenly explode into violence.

He says he will crack down on this kind of behavior so that it doesn't get out of hand. If it is nipped now, it may prevent an ugly physical scene in the future. Teachers, parents and fans of the two schools should work with Creedon on this.

The Quincy-North rivalry has spanned 60 years without a major incident. It has been a good healthy one. A few rowdy fans shouldn't be allowed to spoil it.

If they can't behave at a game, they don't belong there.

It should be nice and simple. Behave. Or out you go.

processed for one reason or another, and four remain open cases.

Last year also saw a decline in the number of robberies and burglaries but an increase in larceny.

In 1992, there were 76 robberies, down 23 or 23.3 percent from 99 in 1991. Last year, there were 968 burglaries, down 32 or 3.2 percent from the 1000 a year before.

The number of auto thefts did not change, 725. In 1990, there were 830 auto thefts.

The reason serious crimes climbed last year was larceny. The number of reported larcenies, including those under and over $250, rose 287 from 1536 in 1991 to 1823 in 1992, an increase of 15.8 percent. It was the single highest reported crime in Quincy last year, as it has been the last several years.

"Larceny is very uncontrollable," Mullen said.

In the eight categories comprising misdemeanor crimes, five experienced increases while three went down.

Assaults, vandalism, narcotic drug violations, liquor law violations and disorderly conduct reported incidents increased. Gambling, operating under the influence (O.U.I.), and protective custody incidents declined.

The biggest upswing was in narcotic drug violations which climbed to 235 from 125 in 1991, an increase of 46.9 percent. Mullen credited the crackdown in drugs in part to the department's drug hotline.

Residents can call 328-4527 24 hours a day to report suspicious drug activity. Callers are not required to identify themselves. Police follow-up on the phone calls.

Mullen also pointed to the department's networking with other drug enforcement agencies, notably the South Shore Drug Task Force, federal narcotic agents, Boston police drug unit and immigration service.

"Through the networking and our own hotline, we're aware of our own situation," the chief said. "I think we're holding our own. I'm pleased with our effort."

"We're in a drug society. There's a certain element and that's their bag."

Mullen also noted combating drugs requires a lot of surveillance work which the public may not notice. "It's not an instant thing and the public needs to be aware of that."

The number of assaults, which include aggravated assault, and assault and battery, increased 20 from 600 in 1991 to 620 last year, a change of 3.3 percent.

"Unfortunately, that's (assaults) a common thing today. We live in a society where people tend to assault one another," the chief said.

Family disturbances, from arguments to assaults, also appear to be on the rise. Mullen said there were 1,383 reported family disturbances last year, an average of 115 a month. Most occur on the weekend, he said.

In addition, Quincy police made 305 domestic violence arrests and secured 444 restraining orders.

Asked whether he believed family disturbances are up, the chief replied, "I'm sure it's up. More cases have been reported to us. There has been more publicity and media coverage on it and we encourage people to report it."

Vandalism reports rose slightly from 121 in 1991 to 128 in 1992, an increase of 5.5 percent. "It's a spontaneous thing, usually not done in front of people," the chief said.

Liquor law violations, including minors in possession of alcohol and open containers, increased from 115 in 1991 to 131 last year, a rise of 12.3 percent. Disorderly conduct, which is frequently linked to liquor law violations, was up 26 percent, from 77 in 1991 to 104 last year.

On the downside, O.U.I. offenses declined 5 percent, from 119 in 1991 to 113 in 1992. Protective custody decreased 9.2 percent, from 909 in 1991 to 826 last year.

While Quincy police made 5 arrests for gambling two years ago, no gambling arrests were made last year.

Last April, Mullen, at the request of the mayor, implemented a special operations unit in an effort to crack down on crime in Quincy Center and the city's Red Line MBTA stations.

Over a 37-week period through Jan. 7, the unit comprised of a sergeant and five officers made 337 arrests, an average of 10 a week.

"And that doesn't include what they've suppressed or curtailed because of their presence," the chief explained. "They've cleaned up problems and eliminated some of these problems because of their visibility."

"The unit supplements all area cars. They're a special unit but they all work together with other police units. That's they key."

The special unit's arrests range from traffic violations and protective custody to drugs, trespassing and assault and battery. They have also nabbed suspects for breaking and entering, firearms violations and larceny.

The unit performs uniformed as well as surveillance patrols on foot, in cars and on motorcycles.

"They're flexible, they cover not only Quincy Square and the T station areas but Wollaston Center and Norfolk Downs, Quincy Point and anywhere else where there are certain problems. In essence, we use them throughout the city," Mullen said.

Sheets added, "The special operations unit has cleaned out Quincy Center and made activities like First Night take place without incident."

The chief said he hopes to expand the special operations unit, which is under the direction of Night Patrol Capt. Frederick Laracy and Sgt. Robert Crowley, perhaps

$200 Million Carrier Pact Urged For Yard

The Quincy Shipbuilding Committee, headed by George A. Daley Jr., was preparing to launch a concerted drive to bring a contract for a $200 million aircraft carrier to the Fore River Shipyard.

Daley said the contract would mean jobs for 5,500 workers for a period of three years at the yard, which had a current employee list of 8,100. Said Mayor David S. McIntosh:

"Lack of work causes layoffs and layoffs mean that shipyard workers have greater difficulty in meeting their obligations to the city and that, in turn, means that non-shipyard workers must carry more than their share."

Newly elected Sen. John F. Kennedy had already started the ball rolling for the contract by carrying Fore River's request all the way to Navy Secretary Robert B. Anderson.

MORE SCHOOLS NEEDED

A. Wendell Clark, vice chairman of the School Committee, urged a speedup in plans to construct two small schools in the vicinity of Furnace Brook Parkway covering an area between the Cranch and Wollaston schools.

"We have to have more room and we have to have it soon," said Clark.

Seafood Stuffed Shells

Well, I lost some weight and grew some eyebrows last week when I was flat on my back with the bug! Since I didn't feel at all like eating (a rarity for me), I began to flip through some of my recipes.

Now that I am up and around (my first day), here is a favorite seafood stuffed pasta recipe that I think you will enjoy. After this I plan to reshape my eyebrows!

Seafood Stuffed Shells

3 large fresh shrimp (cut up in small pieces)

4 large scallops, (also cut up small)

1 cup seasoned bread crumbs

1 egg

2 tablespoons cooking sherry

1/2 box of stuffing shells

2 or 3 cups tomato sauce

2 tablespoons margarine

8 ounces shredded cheese

Heat butter and olive oil and saute the shrimp and scallops for a couple of minutes. Add the bread crumbs, egg, wine and stir until blended, or until the mixture looks like stuffing.

Boil the shells about half the time. Drain and then begin by placing a layer of the sauce on a slightly greased baking pan. Place the stuffed shells on this. Pour sauce on each one and top with shredded cheese. Bake uncovered in a 375 degree oven for about 35 minutes. This recipe will serve four.

Historical Society Premieres Sebastian Miniatures March 14

The Quincy Historical Society will introduce its specially-commissioned Sebastian Miniatures of the historic Adams Academy at a reception Sunday, March 14 from 2 to 4 p.m. at the Academy, 8 Adams St., Quincy.

Sebastian sculptor Prescott "Woody" Baston will be present to autograph copies of the Miniature. The reception will officially begin the celebration of the Historical Society's 100th anniversary.

The Sebastian Miniature is available at $30 a copy and will be on sale at the reception. It will subsequently be on sale at the Society's Museum Shop. However, only copies picked up March 14 can be autographed by the artist.

The Adams Academy miniatures are, like all Sebastian works, limited editions, cast from original mold, hand-painted, and individually numbered. The mold will be destroyed at the end of the limited-edition run. The miniatures capture the elaborate detail of the 19th century architecture of one of Quincy's most distinctive buildings.

The Academy, built in 1872, originally housed a boy's preparatory school founded by John Adams and is built over the foundation of John Hancock's birthplace. It has been the home of the Historical Society since 1975.

The March 14 reception will also provide the public's first look at the society's new centennial exhibit, "The Changing Face of Quincy, 1893-1993."

Call the Society at 773-1144 for more information.

Our Policy On Engagement Photographs And Wedding Announcements

The Quincy Sun will continue to publish photographs with engagement announcements as it always has.

The Sun will also continue to use in wedding announcements the names of all members of the wedding party including maid or matron of honor, best man, parents, bridesmaids, ushers, flower girls and ringbearers, etc.

We invite engaged couples to submit their photos with their announcements and when submitting their wedding photo to include a complete listing of the wedding party.

Black and white photos are preferred. The Sun can convert most color photos to black and white for publication but the photo loses some clarity in the process.

The Sun also publishes articles and photos of wedding anniversaries beginning with the 25th anniversary.

And, as in the past, there is no charge.

Ken Medema In Concert At Wollaston Nazarene Church

Ken Medema will be in concert Tuesday, March 23 at 7:30 p.m. at the Wollaston Church of the Nazarene, 37 East Elm Ave., Wollaston.

Born blind, Medema did not let the darkness of his blindness darken his mind. He used what little sight he had to dream dreams and imagine things that have not entered the minds of many sighted people.

He has been writing and performing his own songs since 1970, when he began composing original material for his work as a music therapist in a psychiatric hospital. He is now involved in a full-time performance schedule that has taken him from the North American continent and Australia to Africa and Europe.

Along on the stage with a grand piano, two state-of-the-art synthesizers, and an electronic percussion machine, Medema entertains, inspires and informs. He utilizes musical styles from classical to rock, from ballad to blues, from sacred to secular—always searching for ways for people to connect to each other, enabling them to sense the sacred within themselves and inspiring people.

Recently, Medema has appeared on the TV special, "Crack in the Wall," celebrating the signing of the Americans with Disabilities Act. His involvement in the U.S. Senate Hearing on Music and the Aging (August 1991) was the first performance of music as part of a senate hearing.

Tickets are $6 in advance, $8 at the door, and for groups, one ticket is offered free for every five. Tickets are available at the Eve Bookstore in Quincy and Fellowship Bookstore in Braintree.

Think Spring

How to get through those last few weeks of winter? Thinking spring helps, but spring flowers will definitely do the trick.

Spring flowers are available in profusion now. Daffs, tulips, iris, freesia, lilacs and anemones and you can buy most in cut flower and bulb form. As in most cases look for locally grown material for the best in quality and longevity. Try a "Mantis" bulb basket for someone special.

For an inexpensive treat, try cutting a few branches of dogwood, flowering cherry, crab apple, or forsythia. Place them in a large bucket of water with a packet of preservative (available at your florist) and stand back. Within a couple of weeks you'll have a touch of spring that should get you through until the real thing decides to appear.

Friends For A Better QHS To Present Five Best Awards

The Friends for a Better Quincy High School announce that five selections have been made for its first annual "Best of the Best Award".

The inductees selected will be placed into the Alumni Hall of Fame.

The "Best of the Best Award" has been established by the Friends for a Better Quincy to recognize outstanding achievements or contributions by alumni to their community, Quincy High School or Quincy Vocational Technical School. These alumni set standards of excellence for our students to follow.

Nominations for the "Best of the Best Award" were accepted through Dec 1. A panel of judges composed of members of Quincy High School and school administration including Principal Lloyd Hill, and Joseph Mazzarella, director of Technical Education, were involved in the process.

This year's inductees are:

Ted DeCristofaro, Ward 2 councillor. DeCristofaro, a 1941 graduate of Quincy High School has been active in the QHS basketball boosters as well as an active member of Quincy Point Congressional Church.

He has served as City Council president and donated his time and money o many volunteer activities. He is a true supporter of Quincy and Quincy High School.

Bruce McDonald, English department chairman, Quincy High School. McDonald is a 1952 graduate of Quincy High School. Throughout the past 33 years, McDonald has given of himself unselfishly to the young people of Quincy High School.

Both as an educator and role model, he has made a significant positive impact on thousands of students.

George Peachy graduated from Quincy High School in 1939. Peachy is a retiree who gives untiringly to the Quincy High School community.

He volunteers as an assistant coach in the QHS hockey, baseball and golf programs. He is an inductee and committee member of the QHS Baseball Hall of Fame.

Mr. Peachy has proven to be a person who truly cares for the youth of Quincy High School.

Chris Barrett, a 1963 graduate of Quincy High School, has been a significant contributor to his alma mater. Barrett is the founder of the Friends for a Better Quincy High School and has worked enthusiastically within this group to improve the physical plant conditions as well as the overall environment of Quincy High School.

His success at this is evident to all involved in the Quincy High School Community.

In addition to the Friends, Barrett has been a board member of the Parent Advisory Council, chairman of the Veteran Memorial Committee, a member if the Hockey Booster Club as well as numerous community volunteer activities.

Barrett has been a positive force in preserving pride in Quincy High School.

This year the nominating committee selected to choose an honorary inductee - a person who has made countless contributions to Quincy High School although not a former graduate.

The committee unanimously selected

Charles MacLaughlin, coordinator of the Quincy High Heritage Program. MacLaughlin taught science for 20 years at Quincy High School before taking on the role of coordinator at Heritage. This program groups students in danger of dropping out of school with regular students, performing satisfactorily but needing some sort of guidance with AP students heading towards college.

MacLaughlin bases his program on truth and trust. He serves as a role model for this program and has been quoted as Heritage's "binding energy."

The Quincy High School community is proud of all of the nominees and this year's inductees. The inductees will be honored at an awards ceremony Sunday, March 28 at 2 p.m. at the Three Seasons Restaurant in the Center for Technical Education.

The Friends for a Better Quincy High School are pleased to serve as a host for this award and will continue this as a yearly event. The group looks forward to the future participation of Quincy High School alumni in this activity.

New Owner Planned For Entertainment Cinemas

By MICHAEL WHALEN Entertainment Cinemas, 1585 Hancock St., Quincy Center, should soon be under new ownership.

The Quincy License Board Tuesday granted a request from the Dedham-based company National Amusements, Inc. to take over the licenses owned by the cinemas.

The licenses include Theater, Common Victualer, and Lord's Day Licenses.

National Amusements District Manager Rod Rodrigues said his company planned to close a deal with Entertainment Cinemas as soon as all proper licenses regarding the matter were obtained. He added that he "thought" the date the company was aiming for is March 17.

Rodrigues noted that his company owns about 700 movie screens throughout the country and "a couple" of others in England. He said that no structural changes were planned at the Quincy site, only "cosmetic" changes such as painting and cleaning.

City Clerk Joseph Shea noted that Ward 3 Councillor Lawrence Chretien "has no concerns" regarding the matter since no major changes other than ownership were planned.

National Amusements does, however, plan to change the name at the site to Quincy Cinemas, according to Rodrigues. Building Inspector Matthias Mulvey told Rodrigues that because the cinemas are in the city's historic district, the Quincy Historic Commission would have to be contacted regarding any changes in signage at the site.

Kathleen McDonald To Receive Amelia Earhart Award

The Women's Educational and Industrial Union (WEIU) will present the Amelia Earhart Award Tuesday, March 16 to North Quincy High School senior Kathleen A. McDonald for academic excellence and community service.

McDonald is ranked in the top quarter of her class and has been listed in Who's Who Among International, Students Against Drunk Driving (S.A.D.D.) and the Walk for Hunger. Additionally, she volunteered at Quincy Hospital and at the Massachusetts Women's Political Caucus in July 1992. Next fall, she plans to attend Hollins College in Roanoke, Va.

Applications forms were mailed to area high schools two months ago. Junior and/or senior high school students were solicited and asked to submit their application along with a 1000-word essay written on one woman who their most admire. A special committee reviewed each candidate's application and chose Miss McDonald based upon her overall academic record, involvement in extracurricular activities, service to the community, and essay, written in tribute to her great-aunt who died last fall.

Miss McDonald will read her essay at the ceremony before receiving her award.

Ceremonies are scheduled for March 16 from 6 to 8 p.m. at the Boston Marriott Copley Place. For ticket information, call the WEIU at 536-5651, ext. 132, or stop by their 356 Boylston St. location.

Will Sports Injury Sideline You?

Will you be sidelined by a sports-related injury this season?

Many of America's weekend athletes leave themselves open to injury by not taking the proper precautions, according to a new Roper Poll conducted for Johnson & Johnson COACH Sports Tape and Elastic Bandages. Statistics show that sports injuries are increasing at a rate of eight percent a year.

How can you prevent sports injuries? Miami Dolphins coach Don Shula says, "Injuries--from bumps and bruises to broken bones--are a part of athletics but with good athletic products, they are more treatable and preventable than ever."

For more than 40 years,

COACH products have been available exclusively for professional athletes and athletic trainers. These products, known as "the choice of professionals," are now available to consumers.

With sports injuries on the rise, consumers are advised to add a little extra caution to their workout routines.

According to Shula, all athletes should do full body warm-ups and stretching before sports or exercises. He also recommends that athletes cool down slowly to give muscles a chance to unwind.

Pointers For Parents

Putting One Foot In Front Of The Other

Your baby's first steps are an important milestone and his or her first shoes are just as important. New findings revealed in a major study at an independent Gait Lab Research facility found that babies walk differently than adults and have different footwear needs. So what should you look for in infant footwear? Here are a few tips:

•Flexibility and stability. Babies feet grow and develop at a remarkable rate and need shoes or sneakers that are flexible enough to allow a baby's walking pattern to develop naturally. But structure is important too. Babies' feet need solid support to prevent rollover and protection from obstacles.

•Lightweight and breathable materials. Babies' feet work hard and perspire more than adult feet, so their footwear should be made from natural materials, such as leather, to keep tiny toes dry and comfortable.

•Proper fit. Shoes should fit in both size and width. A shoe that's too small or narrow can restrict growth, while shoes that are too long or wide can cause a child's foot to slip inside the shoe. Look for extra height in the toe box to encourage natural movement.

•Cushioning. Babies walk in a "land and lift" motion, not "heel to toe" like adults. This puts pressure on babies' heel, ball and toes almost at once, so their shoes should have shock absorbing inserts strategically located at high pressure areas to minimize impact.

•Go to the experts. Beginning walkers have different footwear needs than advanced walkers. That's why you should shop at a store that understands children's shoes. For example, Stride Rite's Progression Fit System recommends infant's shoes according to the child's weight and walking ability.

"A sneaker isn't necessarily better than a shoe or vice versa. And price isn't an indicator either," says Dr. Glenn Gastwirth of the American Podiatric Medical Association. "Parents should look for basic features such as flexibility, proper support and fit. These make the difference, especially in infant shoes," he noted.

ON BENDED KNEE

Knees are probably second only to the back in number of complaints patients bring to their doctors. Once you have experienced knee injury or wear-and-tear pain, you may be tempted to avoid vigorous activity. After an initial healing period, however, "weak knees" can benefit tremendously from the right kind and amount of exercise. The key is to consult your doctor before beginning any exercise program, being careful to ask specifically about which exercises would be best for your particular knee ailment. For example, although swimming and bicycling are often recommended as two of the best regimens for problem knees, incorrect techniques can actually further aggravate problems.

P.S. Whatever your exercise choice, avoid ankle weights which can alter your gait and stress your knees and lower legs. Your physician can tell you whether your exercise technique is correct, or whether you are contorting your limbs into unnatural positions.

Get The Most Out of Life; Stay Healthy And In Shape

The ups and downs of dieting

It's January 2nd and Mr. "I-Need-To-Lose-Weight" (Mr. I) has resolved to lose weight and get into shape. He heads to the local gym (the membership is a Christmas gift from Mrs. I), determined not only to burn off that extra ten pounds he gained during the holiday season, but to get into the best shape of his life.

He is adamant, drastically reducing his caloric intake, working out four hours a day, seven days a week. He feels great after the first week, his pants are looser, and he feels stronger and healthier than ever before.

When the going gets tough...

The second week is a little different, though. The hunger pangs start setting in and muscles he never thought he had are giving him pain he never thought existed! But he remains determined. He still makes it to the gym every day and sticks to his diet.

The third week, "drop out" sets in. "Mr. I" begins to realize that he doesn't have the time — or the energy — to devote every free moment to exercise. So he heads to the gym only occasionally that week. The idea of eating another carrot makes him sick, and he keeps having recurring dreams of junk food. "Mr. I" starts feeling deprived, and eventually breaks his diet by eating double chocolate cheesecake à la mode.

Another week goes by, and most of his old habits are back. The rationalization phase starts. "Mr. I" says things like, "Exercise and diets are for weirdos." "If we were meant to be thin, God wouldn't have invented potato chips!" and "I'll try to start my diet again next week."

"Mr. I" trades in his carrots, celery and rice cakes for chocolate, ice cream and cookies. He makes every excuse not to exercise, and resumes his role as "couch potato." By the fifth week he's gained back every pound he lost and even put on a few additional ones, too.

Similar scenarios happen to millions of people year after year. But they can be avoided. The old phrase "slow and steady wins the race" is one "Mr. I" should have subscribed to.

A diet and exercise regimen should be something that's eased into, not jumped into. For someone like "Mr. I," who led a sedentary lifestyle, an intense exercise program is a real shock to the body. Not only did "Mr. I" set himself up for failure, but he could have harmed himself as well (pulled muscles and ripped tendons, just to name a few possibilities.) Ideally, "Mr. I" should have started out with a minimal exercise program and gradually increased the time and intensity as his body got used to the new activity.

Taking the right approach

"Mr. I's" approach to dieting was another mistake. By drastically reducing his intake of calories, he "tricked" his body into "thinking" that it was starving. As a result, his body built up extra fat cells, his metabolism slowed and, in the end, he ended up gaining weight.

Healthy eating habits and exercise should be thought of as a temporary way to get into shape, but as a way to live a healthy life. Hopefully, someday, "Mr. I" will come to understand this concept, but until then, his scale will be having a lot of ups and downs! HF925189

North Upsets Walpole, Advances In Tourney

The North Quincy hockey team has already made school history and the Raiders hoped their Cinderella season continued yesterday (Wednesday) when they faced Matignon in the state Div. 1 South semifinals at Boston Garden. It will be its first visit to the Garden.

Twelfth-seeded North, the lowest seed to make the semifinals, had already made school history when it won two straight tournament games and last Sunday it twice overcame three-goal deficits to upset fourth-seeded Walpole, 7-5. Ninth-seeded Matignon made the semis with a 4-3 overtime win over B.C. High.

In the other semifinal yesterday, second-seeded Woburn met third-seeded Arlington Catholic. The championship game will be played at Boston Garden Saturday either at 6 or 8 p.m. The exact time hadn't been decided at press time.

Jim Sapienza, one of North's most consistent players and the number two scorer behind Mike DesRoche, had his best game against Walpole with a hat trick, including two goals in 17 seconds to tie the score at 5-5.

DesRoche had another big game with two goals (giving him 58 points for the season), including the game winner.

"It was pure individual effort by Sapienza," said coach Tom Benson, who has made the semifinals in only his third year as coach. "We appeared down, but he brought us back. He has the speed and size to do that potentially in every game."

With the Raiders down, 5-3, in the second period and Walpole on a power-play, Sapienza scored two short-handed goals in 17 seconds to tie it.

North overcame 3-0 and 5-2 deficits to gain the cherished victory.

After tying the game, North (16-5-2) peppered Walpole goalie Jeff Todd in the third period. DesRoche skated down the left side and scored the game-winner with 5:07 remaining. DesRoche later scored his second goal into an open net.

Walpole had several chances to tie, firing seven shots in a minute, before North knocked the net off its post and was called for a delay-of-the game penalty. During the Walpole power play North goalie Sean Connolly, who had 35 saves, stopped two more shots (15 in the period).

Connolly, who had had a tremendous season, was at his best in the final period. "He was the difference," Walpole coach Ed Kirrane said.

It appeared Walpole was on its way to a blowout, taking a 3-0 lead in the opening period. Sapienza put North on the board and trailed, 3-1, at the end of the period despite the fact it out-shot Walpole, 16-9.

"They were up, but I knew we were playing well," Benson said. "I told the players that our goal was to be tied at the end of the second period, but I thought it would be 3-3, not 5-5."

Jim Kelley made it 3-2 with Andrew Vermette assisting, four minutes into the period. However, Bryan Moore and Brian Collins scored for Walpole to make it 5-2. Then Sapienza came through. He assisted on a Brendan O'Brien goal before registering his two quick goals.

Among the many Quincy fans at the game was George Peachy, a Quincy High hockey Hall-of-Famer, longtime scorer and statistician for the Presidents, who was extremely impressed with the Raiders.

"Those kids are just remarkable, they never give up," Peachy said. "Tom Benson has done a wonderful job. Not many teams could overcome two three-goal deficits and beat a strong team like Walpole. But they are going to find it much different playing at Boston Garden. It is too bad they couldn't have a practice session there before playing."

In their previous game North faced fifth-seeded Everett, one of the highest scoring teams in the state. Everett had Craig Hardy, the number one scorer in Div. 1 with 83 points (39 goals and 44 assists), twins Jason and Joe Rotondo, with 53 and 52 points, respectively; Sean Panarello with 36 points and Chris DeMato with 32 points.

However, North's defense was superb, holding the Crimson Tide to 17 shots on goal. Benson's strategy was to defense every player through a close-checking game. As a result, Everett had only 10 shots in the first two periods.

North had 44 shots on Chris Antonelli.

DesRoche put North ahead at 8:23 of the opening period with Sapienza assisting.

Everett tied at the 12:51 mark and went ahead at 14:54.

However, North owned the rest of the game as it picked up its backchecking and allowed only five shots on Connolly in the second period. North tied it when John Gladu intercepted a clearing pass at the Everett blue line and fired a slapshot past Antonelli at 7:59.

At 13:36 the line of Vermette, A.J. Carthas and Brian Kelly each got a shot on net. Vermette finally scored, putting North ahead.

DesRoche and Sapienza closed out the scoring for the victorious Raiders.

"I'd have to say this is the biggest game in the history of North Quincy hockey," Benson said. "This even tops our triple overtime win over Walpole in last year's opening round."

"This is the first time we have ever gone into the third round. I thought we'd have to score five or six goals to win, but we managed to hit them at the red line and again at the blue line. They didn't get into our zone once without getting touched."

BRIAN CURRAN, former North Quincy High star, is a sophomore forward for the Bridgewater State College basketball team. He was an outstanding basketball player at North Quincy. He is the son of John and Bernadette Curran.

Squirt Bs Move On To Semi-Finals

Quincy's Squirt B hockey team, sponsored by Continental Cablevision, advanced to the semifinals of the state tournament after sweeping three games over last weekend. The semifinals will be played this Sunday at Milton Academy.

In its opening game Quincy rolled over the tournament hosts, the Tri-County Saints, 7-2, paced by Mike Sullivan's hat trick.

John Sullivan, Chris Cullen, Frank Curreri and Matt Gibbons each had a goal. Cullen had two assists and Paul Burke, Ryan Murray, Curreri and Didier Alther one apiece.

Quincy then upset previously undefeated Holy Name of Springfield, 4-0. Alther, Chris Griffin and Curreri had unassisted goals and Cullen the other. Murray and John Katsarikas had assists as Quincy ended Holy Name's hopes for a tournament playoff. The defense did an outstanding job.

Next came a 5-2 victory over Cape Cod Canal to clinch its division title. Quincy broke a 2-2 tie with three goals in the last period.

Alther scored twice and Mike Sullivan, Katsarikas and Curreri once each. Kiva Tupe, Curreri, Mike Sullivan and Cullen had assists.

Jeff Langille and Ryan Kruger were outstanding in goal in all three games. Matt O'Connell played fine offense and Joe Watson, Jamie Parisi and Domenic Papile played strong defense.

OF ONE MIND ON UNIBODY DESIGN

It used to be that a steel frame served as the foundation upon which the rest of the car was built. However, following the example of many foreign manufacturers, nearly all cars built since the mid-1970's have utilized unibody design.

Unibody construction makes use of the car's interlocking body panels to give the car its underlying structure and rigidity. The result is a lighter car for better mileage, as well as a car that is designed with crumple zones to spare occupants injury upon impact. Collision-damaged cars of unibody design must be repaired to exacting tolerances. It takes state-of-the-art equipment and skilled technicians to meet the high standards unibody design demands. Unless a unibody-design car is repaired properly, it compromises the safety of its passengers.

HINT: It takes specialized equipment such as laser-beam measuring systems and MIG welding apparatus to properly repair a car with unibody design. Here at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO, we have the right tools, the right parts and professional know-how to keep your car properly maintained. Very often, a regular maintenance schedule of every system can save you the headache of getting stuck on a highway at an inopportune time. We're here for you at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree, 843-1550. Hours: Mon-Fri. 6am-9pm, Sat. 7am-9pm, Sun. 9am-5pm. "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer." Happy St. Patrick's Day!

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

It has been said that successful people rarely consider work as just so much labor; they regard it in the nature of an opportunity for service and feel enjoyment in and derive pleasure from it.

Success is not a thing to be acquired; rather it is a spirit. It is not a matter of position or possessions. Success is the satisfying feeling of a life spent in a worthwhile way and feeling of service rendered. Yes, success is a frame of mind...

"Success is in the way you walk the paths of life each day;

It's in the little things you do, and the things you say.

Success is not getting rich, or rising high to fame. It's not alone in winning goals, which all men hope to claim.

Success is being big of heart, and clean and broad in mind;

It's being faithful to your friends, and to the stranger, kind.

It's in the children whom you love, and all they learn from you;

Success depends on character, and every thing you do..."

For those times when the darkness lingers

With the loss of a loved one through death, it is helpful to be able to share the feelings and emotions which we all experience.

For most of us, there are family members, clergy, and friends who are ready to listen in a caring way.

Yet, there are those who find it helpful to share their grief with someone outside their immediate circle of support.

Because of our continuing commitment to the families we serve, Keohane Funeral Service is pleased to announce that Dr. Sherry Johnson has joined our staff as a Grief Counselor. Her educational background, professional experience and understanding manner can be particularly helpful.

We are the first funeral home in New England to offer the service of a Grief Counselor.

Mullen, Sheets: City Holding Own In Crime Fight

as early as this spring.

In addition, there are plans to beef up the manning levels of the entire department later this year. Currently, there are 132 patrol officers and 40 superiors officers (11 lieutenants, 26 sergeants, four captains and the chief).

Mullen said 17 new recruits should join the force in August or September after undergoing the necessary training.

The force is also supported by 25 civilian staffers and 25 supervisors. "All the men and women here do a great job," Mullen said. "I think they're committed employees regardless of their assignments. I think they all work together."

"I like to think we don't have any all-stars, just a team effort."

Besides adding officers, Mullen said the department will likely expand its crime prevention program. Last year, the department made 120 appearances on special crime prevention programs and seminars, including visits to the schools, churches, senior citizen housing and neighborhood watch.

He said alerting and educating the public on their surroundings can have a profound impact on reducing crime.

"We have been proactive as far as crime prevention. This encourages citizens to be involved in solving crime problems and helping their community."

"We've worked with the elderly and other factions," the chief said. "We've been in all the neighborhoods and we'll continue to provide education. We also intend to enforce all our traffic and motor vehicle laws for safety."

Newport Ave. Used Car License Request Filed

By MICHAEL WHALEN
The Quincy License Board Tuesday placed on file a request from Hang Sing Trading Co., 299 Newport Ave. for a Motor 2 License.

Kim Chen, who owns the company with her husband, said the couple wanted to export used cars from the United States to China and Hong Kong. She noted that her husband originally is from Hong Kong and there is a large demand there for used cars.

Chen added that the State of Massachusetts informed her that she would have to obtain a Motor 2 License to run such a business even though she would not be selling cars in the United States.

Building Inspector Matthias Mulvey, however, told Chen that she would not be able to run the business from the site in question for two reasons: because the site is not zoned for the sale of used cars, and because there is no space there to park cars even if it were zoned as such.

Mulvey added that Chen would need a variance from the Board of Appeals before she could appear before the License Board a second time with the request.

Fire Chief Thomas Gorman suggested that Chen consult an attorney on the matter.

"You should get an attorney that understands this thing, something that could guide you through this," said Gorman.

City Clerk Joseph Shea told Chen the board would place the matter on file.

One city official estimated 1000 cars were stuck by snow piles which froze to ice after temperatures fell late Sunday and early Monday. The city towed about 60 cars which were parked on the wrong side of the street, hampering the cleanup.

Blizzard Or Hurricane, Quincy Still Lucky

While many have referred to last week's major snow storm as the Blizzard of 1993, one local meteorologist says a more apt term is "winter hurricane."

"Winter hurricane is a term used to talk about a major circulation, a cyclone, especially along the Eastern seaboard," said Rob Gilman, a Quincy meteorologist with New England Weather Science.

"A hurricane is a warm weather storm so when we use the term, 'winter hurricane,' we're using the term euphemistically. A winter hurricane has the same affect as a hurricane with winds over 74 mph, effects a large portion of the country and creates storm surges which may lead to coastal flooding."

On the other hand, Gilman said the definition of a blizzard is merely a storm which produces falling or blowing snow with winds sustained at 35 mph for near zero visibility.

"A winter hurricane is a much more potent storm," Gilman said, pointing out the weekend storm claimed some 175 lives from the southern states to Maine. No deaths were reported in Massachusetts.

Last weekend's storm was characterized by heavy and rapid snowfall, tremendous winds and extremely low barometric

(Cont'd on Page 16)

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

The major winter storm which blanketed Quincy with nearly a foot of snow over the weekend will cost the city an estimated $100,000 in snow removal costs, Mayor James Sheets said Tuesday.

If that estimate proves accurate, this winter will cost the city as much as $500,000 or more in snow and ice removal. That would be the largest sum since the winter of 1977-78 which included the Blizzard of 1978, said Auditor Robert Foy. Before the storm hit Saturday, the city had spent approximately $400,000 on snow and ice removal. Sheets said he expects the cleanup costs associated with the weekend storm to bring that total to $475,000 to $500,000, more than 50 percent higher than the budgeted $300,000.

"I say we'll max out at $500,000, certainly no less than $475,000. We'll take the extra money out of free cash. That's why we have free cash, for emergencies," the mayor said.

According to Meteorologist Rob Gilman of New England Weather Science, 11 and a half inches of snow fell on Quincy during the storm, the most from one system since 10 inches fell in February, 1983. As of Tuesday, about 62 inches of snow have fallen locally this winter.

Gilman characterized the weekend storm as a "winter hurricane." He said system was accompanied by 85-mph winds, low barometric pressure, and rapid snowfall which resulted in "white out conditions."

However, the storm spared local residents along the city's shoreline from flooding. In previous storms, the coast was pounded with heavy surf and high tides, causing thousands of dollars in damages.

DPW Operations Manager Lester Gerry said 100 municipal employees and private contractors and 100 pieces of equipment worked around the clock beginning Saturday and Sunday to make roads safe and accessible again. The cleanup was expected to be completed by DPW workers and the National Guard by the end of the week, Sheets said Tuesday.

Gerry, who coordinated the DPW in place of Commissioner David Colton who was out of the city on a pre-scheduled vacation, said the city's cleanup effort was hampered by two major factors: cars parked on both sides of the street and snow drifts as high as four feet.

However, city officials agreed the proper planning and cooperation among city departments and Emergency Management volunteers helped the city weather another winter storm without any major problems.

Mayor James Sheets said, "All the departments worked extremely well. I think they did an outstanding job."

"Every body we had available was out on the streets," Gerry said

Toland Assistant Clerk Vote Reset For April 5

By MICHAEL WHALEN
The City of Quincy is still without an assistant city clerk.

The City Council Monday night postponed its vote on the appointment of the assistant clerk's position, which is expected to go to former City Councillor Patricia Toland, because Council President Charles Phelan was out of town and unable to attend the council meeting.

Ward 2 Councillor Theodore DeCristofaro, who presided over the meeting in place of Phelan, said that Phelan requested that the vote be postponed because he wanted to be present when the subject was again brought before the council.

The vote will take place at the council's April 5 meeting.

Toland, chosen for the position by City Clerk Joseph Shea, has at least five of the nine councillor votes needed to be appointed to the position.

Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers, Councillor Timothy Cahill, Ward 3 Councillor Lawrence Chretien, Ward 4 Councillor Thomas

Fabrizio and Phelan have all expressed support of Toland in the matter.

Councillor Michael Cheney has voiced his opposition of Toland's appointment to the position because, he has said, the city could save money by either reducing the position to part-time status or eliminating it altogether.

Cheney objected to the order that would have allowed the council to appoint Toland to the position at its March 1 meeting, causing the matter to be delayed for two weeks.

DeCristofaro and Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson have also expressed reservations about Toland's appointment. Councillor Joseph LaRaia, who was appointed by the council March 1 to the councillor-at-large seat Toland vacated to pursue the assistant clerk's position, has said he is undecided about the issue.

Public Hearing March 22 Non-Political Board Recommended For Quincy College

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The Quincy College Governance Committee is considering recommending an 11 to 15-member board of trustees that would replace the School Committee as the governing body at the college.

A public hearing will be held March 22 at 7 p.m. in the City Council chambers at City Hall so residents will have a chance to express their opinions on the subject.

School Committee member Linda Stice, who serves as chairman of the governance committee, told the City Council Education Committee Monday night that "tentative" plans for the board of trustees include the following:

•Board members would serve six-year terms. Stice said that initially, however, the board could have some members serving two-year terms, others serving four-year terms, and the rest six-year terms. That way, Stice said, terms would be "staggered" to avoid the "turmoil" of having all terms expire at once. Still, she noted that "six years is what we're shooting for."

•The board would be made up of both Quincy and non-Quincy residents, reflecting the fact that the majority of the college's students are not city residents. However, Quincy residents would make up the majority of the board.

•Local politicians would be excluded from the board. Although it has not yet been determined who will select the board, Stice said she personally favors a combination of City Council and School Committee members and Mayor James Sheets as those involved in the selection process because "that way we'd see a real balance of talents."

•The board would select, advise and evaluate the college president and have the power to hire and fire the president. The board would make the policy at the college and the president would implement it.

Stice said that another recommendation for the college the governance committee came up with was that the school maintain ties to the city by having faculty members and staff continue as city workers and by paying city services rendered at the college. She also said the committee would like the college, which derives its income from student tuition, to maintain its financial independence.

Stice said Tuesday that she hoped to have a complete proposal on the board of trustees on Sheets' desk by April 1.

The 13-member Quincy

College Governance Committee was appointed by the mayor in January, Stice said, for two reasons: to determine what the relationship between the city and the college will be and to decide how a new governing board of trustees at the college will be selected.

Stice said the committee's main concern is that those appointed to the board of trustees maintain the integrity entrusted in them.

"The job of the trustees, first and foremost, is the interest of the school," she said. "Their first priority is to the college."

Several city councillors praised the work done by Stice and the governance committee in coming up with the proposal.

"You're doing a great job," said Councillor Michael Cheney. "I look forward to seeing something in writing."

"I am surprised we're going to get here this soon," said Councillor Timothy Cahill. "I'll be looking forward to the (written) draft, and I congratulate you. It wasn't an easy job you were given to do."

Ward 3 Councillor Larry Chretien, who serves on the governance committee with Stice, echoed similar sentiments and invited the public to attend next week's hearing on the matter.

City Street Sweeping Could Save $696,000

By MICHAEL WHALEN

A Department of Public Works proposal for a city-owned street sweeping program that could save the city as much as $696,000 has received initial approval from Mayor James Sheets.

Sheets said Tuesday that he is in full support of the proposal by DPW Operations Manager Lester Gerry.

"I think his (Gerry's) numbers are correct," said Sheets. "I think it's an excellent way to save money and I support it. We have to go for everything that will save us money."

Gerry made the proposal during Monday night's meeting of the City Council Public Works Committee, at which he said the program could save the city $696,000 over a six-year period.

Gerry told the council that the City of Quincy spends $345,000 annually to pay American Street Sweeping Corp., the company that currently handles the city's street sweeping services.

The new proposal calls for the purchase of two street sweepers totalling $234,000, as well as two employees to operate the sweepers, fuel, parts and other expenditures that would total $371,000 in the first of the program's six years.

Gerry added, however, that in the subsequent five years, only $60,000 would be put aside annually for the purchase of new sweepers at the end of the six year period. The cost of the remaining expenditures would remain virtually the same, although slight increases would be allowed in some cases because of circumstances such as overtime, additional parts, increased fuel costs and others.

Therefore, subsequent costs in the plan would be $197,000 for the second year, $199,000 for the third, $201,000 for the fourth and $203,000 for the fifth and sixth years for a total of $1,074,000.

Subtracted from $2,070,000—the $345,000 the city currently pays American Street Sweeping Corp. multiplied by six—Gerry's proposal amounts to a $996,000 surplus for the city.

After subtracting the amount of money put aside in the last five years of the plan for new street sweepers—$60,000 annually, or a total of $300,000—the net savings for the city totals $696,000.

Sheets said Tuesday that he felt the commitment to replace the sweepers at the end of the six-year cycle was crucial to the program's success. The mayor also noted that in addition to financial savings, the program could be a benefit the city by providing additional street sweeping coverage.

"It would allow us to set up our own schedule, which would result in more sweeping time," said Sheets.

Several councillors Monday night spoke favorably of Gerry's proposal. Councillor Michael Cheney said he felt the city, and not a privately-owned firm, should be in charge of the street sweeping program.

"This is a dramatic step," said Cheney. "I think it clearly shows that when you privatize something, it's a form of mismanagement."

Deprivatization means you are re-taking control."

"This is the right step, the right direction," agreed Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson. "I for one will be voting in favor of it."

"Anything that saves us $696,000, I'm in favor of it," said Ward 2 Councillor Theodore DeCristoforo.

Councillor Timothy Cahill said although he still felt "privatization is the way to go" with the street sweeping program, he added that Gerry's plan is "a good proposal that will put pressure on the private company" to come to the city with a fair bid once its contract is up.

Gerry thanked the council for its support, adding that since American Street Sweeping Corp. still has one year left on its contract with the city—it will expire March 1, 1994—he was not certain when his plan could come to pass.

In a separate issue Monday night, Cahill questioned Gerry on the towing of cars throughout last weekend's blizzard, noting that he had received complaints from residents whose vehicles had been removed from city streets during the storm.

Cahill also told Gerry that people were being charged $70 per vehicle towed.

"Why is it so much, and can people get their money back?" asked Cahill.

Gerry said the rates are determined by the Massachusetts Department of Public Utilities, adding that he was not aware of any way for those whose vehicles are towed to be financially reimbursed.

He also noted that while he personally did not enjoy towing residents' vehicles, it sometimes is unavoidable.

"It's not a pleasant thing, having to tow people's cars," said Gerry. "But if you don't get rid of cars (during a storm), the snow stays in the middle of the street. I think it's a necessary part of the snow removal for public safety purposes."

Cahill said that after listening to Gerry, he was confident that the towing was, in most cases, a necessity.

"I'm confident that you did what you have to do," he said. "It's a tough call, and you have to make that call. People always complain when the streets aren't swept (of snow)."

UNDERSTANDING ORAL CANCER

It might start as a swelling noticed one day while brushing teeth, or a dentist could detect a lump during a routine exam. However, if a lump is detected, an abnormality in the oral cavity must be biopsied (a portion removed surgically) to determine whether cancer cells are present. Warning signs in oral cancer include a sore in the mouth that doesn't heal, a lump or thickening in the cheek, a feeling that something is stuck in the throat, difficulty chewing or swallowing, difficulty moving the jaw or tongue, numbness in the tongue or mouth, swelling of the jaw that causes dentures to fit poorly, or a red or white patch on the gums, tongue or mouth lining. Pain is usually NOT a symptom of oral cancer. P.S. Early detection is the key to successful treatment. Contact your doctor immediately about any troubling symptoms. If you are experiencing any of the symptoms described above, it is important that you see your physician as soon as possible. Oral cancer, like all other forms of cancer, is most easily treated when diagnosed early. If you would like to learn what you can do to stay healthy and ward off the dangers of heart attacks, feel free to call COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE at 472-2550. If necessary, we will refer you to another medical professional. Office hours are by appointment at 101 Adams St., Suite 24, in Quincy. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals.

At 18, Politically Serious

Mike D'Amico is 18 and seriously thinking of running for the City Council.

It's not a whim or a lark, he says. He's running, he says, because he believes he can be a good city councillor.

"Right now I'm 60 per cent sure that I will run," he says. "I'll decide right after Easter."

And if he does run, he will make an official announcement in May.

D'Amico, who lives on Willard St., in West Quincy, has his eye on the Ward 4 seat now occupied by Tom Fabrizio.

D'Amico says he has nothing personal against Fabrizio.

"I want to give the neighbors a choice," he says, noting that Fabrizio was unopposed for a second term two years ago.

D'Amico, son of John and Jane D'Amico with deep West Quincy roots, will be graduating this year from Xaverian Brothers High School and plans to enter Stonehill College or Boston College in the fall.

For an 18-year old, he has been pretty active politically with both Democrats and Republicans.

He is a founder, executive director and a councillor at-large in the Quincy City Youth Council program that was launched three years ago, and gives Quincy young people a voice in city government.

He is serving his third term on the Massachusetts Juvenile Justice Advisory Committee to which he was appointed by Governor William Weld. He and the other members delegate national funds state-wide for juvenile programs.

He's been a delegate to the Massachusetts Student Government Day two years in a row.

He attended the 1990 Democratic state convention and was active on Frank Bellotti's gubernatorial campaign committee.

He was a member of the inaugural staff for Governor Weld and Lt. Gov. Paul Cellucci. He was on the staff to help coordinate events for President Bush when he came to Boston.

Issues needing to be addressed, D'Amico says, include overdevelopment in Ward 4, traffic, crime and safety, and promoting local business.

He says he would establish a strong communication link with residents by forming a Ward 4 Advisory Committee, publishing a monthly newsletter, and by spending three or more hours daily at City Hall.

D'AMICO

Sounds like he is serious.

If you're wondering whether an 18-year old can run for City Council, he can. He's checked that out.

And who was the youngest councillor ever elected? Tom Burgin in 1924 at age 22.

OVER 600 ARE expected to attend the friendship dinner for former City Clerk John Gillis Saturday at the Bryan VFW Post, Broad St.

Gillis retired last year after 33 years as city clerk to run successfully for Norfolk County Commissioner.

A social hour will start at 7 p.m. with dinner at 8 p.m. Tickets are $25 and a few are still available—if you hurry. See Josephine Carnali or Bill Draicchio at City Hall.

GILLIS

A FUNDRAISER FOR Ward 3 Councillor Larry Chretien is set for Thursday, March 25, 7 to 9 p.m. at The Common Market, Willard St., West Quincy. Tickets are $15 per person, $25 per couple, and are available by calling Caryn Smith (770-0536) or 472-1400.

WITH ALL THAT snow out there, golf might not be on your mind. But a caller wanted us to know that the 1992 North Quincy High School golf team which won the Old Colony League tournament was not the first North golf team to win a championship, as reported by the Sun sports department.

The 1937 team, coached by the legendary Jack Donahue, won the Norfolk County title and advanced to the quarter-finals of the state championship.

DID YOU KNOW that according to statistics, 60 per cent of those married in the 1970's will be divorced by the 1990's? So reports Martha Arthur at Mass Bay Counseling of Quincy.

Mass Bay, she advises, will address the problems created by divorce at a free symposium April 3, 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Sheraton Tara in Braintree.

OBSERVATION via the Quincy Kiwanis Club newsletter (and from wherever they got it): "Don't grumble if you don't have what you want. Be thankful you don't get what you deserve."

Storm Response, Aftermath On QCTV

Local programming for Continental Cablevision, Quincy Community Television Channel 3, was scheduled to broadcast a special on last week's storm Wednesday at 8 p.m. Host Randall King will have dramatic footage of Quincy at the height of the storm. He will be joined by Police Chief Francis Mullen, Fire Chief Thomas Gorman, DPW Operations Manager Lester

Gerry and Quincy Emergency Management Director Tony Siciliano, who will discuss how Quincy managed during one of the most powerful storms to hit the East Coast.

Monday morning. Plows and numerous sanders, dump trucks and loaders helped clear major streets and secondary roads Saturday night.

The effort was eased when the temperature inched above freezing and the snow changed to rain mid-Sunday morning. "That helped a lot. The snow and ice was eventually melting," Gerry said.

However, the removal effort was hampered after the temperature fell again around 5 a.m. Sunday. "We had to switch gears," Gerry said. "We got out of the plowing and put everyone on sanding," he said, noting the wet streets and sub-freezing temps created black ice on many streets.

However, the biggest obstacle was cars parked on both sides of secondary or residential streets, Gerry said. About 60 vehicles that were parked on the even side of the streets were towed.

During snow emergencies, vehicles are allowed to park on one side of the street only, depending on the year. Therefore, because this is 1993, parking is allowed only on the odd-numbered side of the street during snow emergencies.

However, Gerry said many residents failed to remember the parking ordinance before the storm hit.

On some major streets, some towing was avoided as city workers went into area businesses before the brunt of the storm hit Saturday and requested patrons parked on the street remove their vehicle with many obliging, Gerry said.

Other hurdles were three-to-four feet snow drifts and large snow banks in intersections of secondary roads. Gerry said drifting was a problem on Quincy Shore Drive and on side streets from Fenno St. to East Squantum St.

More than 24 hours before the storm hit Quincy, the city was coordinating and planning its response.

At 9 a.m. on Friday, Mayor met with public safety heads, including fire, police, school, public works, emergency management and health and building departments to prepare for the impending blizzard.

Later in the day, a team of municipal employees and volunteers circulated information flyers to residents in the peninsula locations advising them to seek higher ground.

The notice was translated by Asian residents on WJDA radio.

At 9 a.m. Saturday, the city opened eight emergency shelters for residents. No evacuations were ordered but about 25 residents sought shelter at Snug Harbor School, Atherton High School, Center for Technical Education, Adams Shore Library, Squantum Community Center, Manet Health Center, North Quincy High school and Atlantic Neighborhood Center.

The shelters remained open until noon Sunday.

To keep people informed, six volunteers began manning an emergency storm hotline, 376-1234, Friday at midnight at the Emergency Operations Center, 55 Sea St.

At 10 a.m. Saturday, Mayor James Sheets declared a local state of emergency. The mayor requested assistance from the Army National Guard which provided four five-ton trucks in event evacuations were needed.

The mayor advised the public to stay indoors during the storm so that crews could clear roads.

The city put extra fire, police and public works personnel in low-lying areas in anticipation of coastal flooding. Norfolk County-Bristol Ambulance also had extra emergency units ready.

The tides and winds were not as high and forceful as expected, sparing coastal areas from severe flooding.

"We didn't get the anticipated flooding," Emergency Management Director Tony Siciliano said.

Clean up efforts were hampered by bitter cold temperatures Sunday and Monday (a record low 8 degrees Monday morning) which hardened the snow. To help clear frozen snowbanks and cars covered with snow and ice, the city requested Army National Guard front end loaders and five ton dump trucks. They arrived Monday afternoon.

Siciliano, who estimated a 1000 cars snowed-in on city streets Monday morning, said there were snow drifts as high as three to four feet in Quincy.

One hundred and 50 volunteers assisted the city from Friday through Saturday, including 50 elementary, middle and high school students who are part of VEST (Volunteer Emergency Services Team).

"We had extremely good cooperation from all city departments and public safety personnel who worked under the Emergency Operations Center. We were able to disperse key personnel to areas where the public need assistance," Siciliano said.

Council Approves Loan For QCH Addition

The City Council passed loan orders totaling $1,525,000, which, in effect, gave its stamp of approval to a proposed $1.2 million addition to City Hospital.

A loan order for $850,000 along with an expected $400,000 in federal aid was earmarked for construction of an X-ray department, a nursery and a special care unit at the hospital.

Councillor George G. Burke opposed he hospital order, saying that the city had more pressing needs, like a new City Hall.

Also included in the $1.5 million loan order was $225,000 for a North Quincy branch library, $150,000 for a new Atlantic fire station, $150,000 for streets and $150,000 for sewers.

Nancy's Shrimp, Dill Pot Pie

The other day our daughter Nancy brought us a taste of a new shrimp entree she put together and needless to say, it was delicious. Especially during the lenten season when some of us have to abstain from eating meat on Fridays.

Nancy's Shrimp, Dill Pot Pie

3/4 pound fresh shrimp
3 fresh carrots
2 medium sized potatoes
3 fresh carrots
1 small can of corn
1 teaspoon dill
a dash of crushed mint
1/4 cup grated cheese
1/4 stick margarine enough pie crust for top (prepared is fine) cream sauce
1 cup milk salt and pepper to taste
2 tablespoons butter or margarine

1 cup milk
Make the cream sauce by melting the butter, adding the flour and the milk. Set aside.

Par boil the shrimp, peel and set aside. (Nancy used a half bottle of beer with a little water to do this, but that is optional).

Par boil the cut up potatoes, and carrots.

In a casserole dish, pour the cream sauce first, then add the shrimp and the vegetables and stir. Add the dill and the mint, the grated cheese, the corn and the 1/4 stick of margarine until blended. Top it with the pie crust and bake in a 325 degree oven for 25-30 minutes. Let cool for 5 to 10 minutes and then serve. The next day it's even more delicious heated in the microwave. And it's something you can make in the morning, refrigerate and then pop in the oven.

Solomon Willard Topic At Historical Society Meeting

Prof. James Cameron of Eastern Nazarene College will be the guest speaker at a meeting of the Quincy Historical Society Thursday, March 25 at 7:30 p.m. at the Adams Academy, 8 Adams St., Quincy.

Solomon Willard, one of the most dominant figures in Quincy history and a major force in American architectural history, will be the topic.

In designing the Bunker Hill Monument, Willard proposed to use unprecedentedly large blocks of stone. Making the design a reality required that architect Willard move to Quincy and become as well, as builder and industrial innovator and manager.

The result was a permanent change in American architecture and a permanent change in the nature of Quincy. Willard's success began the large-scale granite industry that was prominent throughout the 19th and the first part of the 20th century. Willard also designed Quincy City Hall, known now as the James R. McIntyre Government Center.

Dr. Cameron is a professor of history at ENC and past president of the Historical Society. An authority on many aspects of local history, he will bring a well-informed and insightful perspective to Solomon Willard's story.

The meeting is open to the public. Refreshments will be served.

Our Policy On Engagement Photographs And Wedding Announcements

The Quincy Sun will continue to publish photographs with engagement announcements as it always has.

The Sun will also continue to use in wedding announcements the names of all members of the wedding party including maid or matron of honor, best man, parents, bridesmaids, ushers, flower girls and ringbearers, etc.

We invite engaged couples to submit their photos with their announcements and when submitting their wedding photo to include a complete listing of the wedding party.

Black and white photos are preferred. The Sun can convert most color photos to black and white for publication but the photo loses some clarity in the process.

We suggest that when you have your engagement photo taken, you request the studio to send a copy to The Sun with the reminder that The Sun is continuing its policy of publishing engagement photos.

The Sun also publishes articles and photos of wedding anniversaries beginning with the 25th anniversary.

And, as in the past, there is no charge.

Celebrating its 10th anniversary season in the Cove Fine Arts Center, the Communication Arts Department of Eastern Nazarene College will present as its spring production Larry Shue's comedy, The Nerd, March 25-27.

The Nerd is a farcical romp that begins when Rick Steadman invades the life of Willum Cubbert, whom Rick saved in Vietnam. What Willum thinks will be a short visit by the man to whom he owes his life, turns out to be an overextended stay that turns the lives of Willum and his friends upside down.

The Nerd is being produced by Dr. Ronda Winderl and directed by Senior Communication Arts major Tom Sharpes. The realistic circa 1980 set which transports the audience into the recent past is designed by Michael Ballard with costumes humorously reminiscent of the era coordinated by Tracy Fannin.

For tickets and information write The Nerd, Eastern Nazarene College, 23 East Elm Ave., Quincy, MA., 02170, or call the ENC Box Office at (617) 773-6350 ext. 262.

"Between the Mountains and the Sea: Finding My Grandfather's Ireland," was scheduled to air Wednesday, St. Patrick's Day, at 7:30 p.m. on QCTV-3.

Like many Irishmen who settled in Quincy, Foley's grandfather was from the Connemara region of Galway. A boatbuilder on the island of Inishnee, the elder Foley emigrated to Quincy where he worked at the Quincy shipyard through the two World Wars.

The video journey across County Galway in search of Foley's grandfather features travel by bike across the Ireland in the springtime. The soundtrack is traditional Irish music, recorded by Galway musicians.

Spotlight On HEALTH AND FITNESS

Fitness Facts

On A Treadmill? Good, Say Experts

When it comes to staying physically fit, if you're on a treadmill, you're on the right track, experts say.

The reason?

Running or walking on a treadmill gives you more freedom to exercise at any time that fits your schedule no matter what the weather. A workout on a treadmill is often easier on the legs than a pounding workout on an uneven road surface. Simply put, today's treadmill provides a smoother and more natural workout than walking or running out of doors, in addition to the added security of exercising in your home.

Better treadmills today range in price from $2,000 to $5,000, but the benefits provided by high-end treadmills are considered well worth the price. What do you look for when you go treadmill shopping?

As in all mechanical equipment, safety is essential. A treadmill should be able to start at a very low speed and gradually accelerate to the desired speed. Computer balanced motors, flywheels and rollers assure quiet and smooth operations for long term satisfaction.

The greater the user comfort, the longer one may exercise without damage to joints. One top treadmill manufacturer, True Fitness Technology, is considered the leader in low impact, shock absorbing technology. Its treadmills have a patented S.O.F.T. (for Shock absorbing, Orthopedically-correct, Footplant Transfer) system, designed for comfort and a natural feel.

An increasingly popular exercise is walking or running on a treadmill such as this from True Fitness.

Of special interest to those who like to listen to music or watch television while exercising is that when a True Treadmill is in service its mechanical sounds are virtually undetectable. The quiet and smooth performance make a True ideal for the home.

A recent National Sporting Goods Association study reports treadmills rank first among home exercise equipment in continued use after purchase. This makes a treadmill the perfect equipment purchase for home exercise.

smoking and see your doctor.

Is the female smoker at added risk? According to statistics from the National Institutes of Health, she may be. In fact, the percentage of women who smoke is declining much more slowly than is the percentage of male smokers. The smoker rate for women (27.8 percent) nearly equals that for men (32.8 percent).

The smoking rate for women nearly equals the smoking rate for men.

During the past 20 years the death rate from lung cancer in women in the U.S. has been steadily increasing, and, in 1986, lung cancer surpassed breast cancer in mortality rates for women. Because nicotine is an addiction, it's not easy to stop smoking. Each year, however, three million Americans do. Fortunately, help is available. Doctors can prescribe a medication in gum form that releases small amounts of nicotine into the mouth. This produces nicotine blood levels sufficient to reduce withdrawal symptoms.

The important thing to do first is to make your decision to quit

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Someone once said that the strength or weakness of our country lies in the homes because the home is the beginning point of everything. Honesty begins at home. Respect for law and order begins at home. Love begins at home. A sense of duty begins at home. Respect for people of other colors and creeds begins at home. And religion has its first beginnings in the home.

Yes, a home is far more than a residence; home involves the character of living that goes on inside the house.

"A house is no home unless it contains food and fire for the mind as well as for the body."-Margaret Fuller Ossoli

"Homes are like banks-they go broke if you take out more than you put in it."-Author Unknown

"It takes a heap of living and a lot of loving to make a house a home."-Edgar Guest

All comments or thoughts from your home to our home are always appreciated...

Lose 4-3 Heartbreaker To Matignon Champs

For North Quincy: Oh, So Close!

By TOM SULLIVAN
The North Quincy hockey team's dream season came to a disappointing end last week when the Raiders suffered a heartbreaking last-minute 4-3 loss to Matignon in the state South Div. 1 semifinals at Boston Garden.

The loss was especially frustrating as North, in its first trip to the Garden, led Matignon, which makes a habit of making the Garden, 3-2, with 4:29 left in the game, thanks to Jim Sapienza's second straight hat trick and another excellent game by goalie Sean Connolley.

However, Matignon then scored two goals in 10 seconds to put an end to the Raiders' dream of making the championship game.

"We should have won the game," said a disappointed North coach Tom Benson, who brought North into the tournament for the second time in three years as coach and to the semifinals for the first time ever. "We outplayed them three-quarters of the way, but (Jerry) Keefe and (Chris) Masters (who scored the tying and winning goals) made big-time plays at the end."

"I thought we were going to be this year's Framingham (last year's Cinderella state champion.) I wanted to play for the state championship. We came so close."

Benson had already brought North farther than any team had gone when it won its first two tournament games. The 12th-seeded Raiders, who finished with a 16-6-2 record, had knocked off fourth-seeded Walpole and fifth-seeded Everett.

After Sapienza's third goal had given North a 3-2 lead with 4:29 to play, Matignon's Keefe scored his third goal at 11:35 and Masters scored the game-winner just 10 seconds later.

Matignon had taken the early lead at 1:43 of the opening period on Keefe's first goal.

North's Mike DesRoche, North's top scorer (he finished with 59 points) missed a swipe toward an open net and Brendan O'Brien hit the post.

North finally tied it at 11:27 on a power play as Sapienza, North's number two scorer, rifled a slap shot past goalie Shane Ronan.

Sapienza added his second goal less than a minute later at 12:22, faking Ronan to one side and firing a wrist shot to the right corner.

North continued to beat Matignon to the puck in the second period but came away empty-handed as Sapienza hit a post as DesRoche again missed an open net.

Matignon tied it 13 seconds into the final period on Keefe's second goal.

The momentum swung Matignon's way, but Connolley made two brilliant stick saves on Keefe. At 10:07 North went on the power play and Sapienza scored his third goal, taking an Andrew Vermette pass and firing a 45-foot bullet past Ronan for a short-lived 3-2 lead.

"North Quincy played hard and deserved to be here," said Matignon coach Marty Pierce. "In the tournament you have to have the bounces, and we got a few late in the game to pull it out."

The Raiders, who kept up the winning tradition

Andrew Vermette. Back row, coach Bob Doyle, Jay Evans, Lee Hughes, Kevin Boylen, John Gladu, Bob Flannery, Josh Wingate, Jim Sapienza, Dennis Pateras, Mike DesRoche, Jim Kelly, A. J. Carthas, Brian Kelly, Ralph DiMattia, and coach Tom Benson.

set by the undefeated football and girls' volleyball teams, had a seven-game unbeaten streak (six games and a tie) going into the Matignon game.

Benson will lose six seniors, including DesRoche, but had several fine juniors and sophomores and the Raiders should have another competitive season next year.

As usual, the Catholic schools dominated the tournament. Catholic Memorial won its third straight Div. 1A Super 8 title, Matignon won the Div. 1 crown and Bishop Connolly won the Div. 3 championship.

As long as the parochial schools, which draw from many surrounding communities, continue in the tournament, the public schools have little chance of winning a state title.

However, despite the complaints of many public school coaches, it doesn't appear the MIAA will put the parochials in a tournament of their own.

NORTH QUINCY forward Jim Sapienza moves in on Matignon goalie Shane Ronan for a shot on net during the state South Div. 1 semifinals at Boston Garden. North lost a heartbreaker, 4-3.

RED RAIDER teammates Mike DesRoche (No. 16) and Jim Sapienza (15) pursue a loose puck in front of four Matignon defenders during the state South Div. 1 semifinals at Boston Garden. Sapienza scored his second straight hat trick in the tournament but was not enough to advance as Matignon prevailed, 4-3.

pressure, all indicative of a winter hurricane.

Gilman said snow fell at a rapid clip, up to three inches an hour during the height of the storm Saturday afternoon. Those "white-out" conditions were accompanied by hurricane gusts clocked as high as 85 mph from the east-northeast.

Similar winds, measured at 70 to 80 mph, gusted Sunday morning, he said.

The barometric pressure fell to 28.65 in Quincy, one of the lowest readings ever. Saturday's pressure was lower than the pressures of Hurricane Gloria and Hurricane Bob, Gilman noted.

In all, 11 and a half inches of snow fell during the storm. Most of that, 10 and a half inches, fell Saturday and another inch fell around 4 a.m. Sunday, Gilman said.

The meteorologist said in Quincy the snow changed to sleet around 5:30 p.m. Saturday and then to rain around 6:30 p.m. The rain stopped around 2 a.m. Sunday morning.

Because of the storm's fast movement and a wind shift from east to west, Gilman said the coastal areas did not experience major flooding. The storm, clocked at 40 to 60 mph, moved from the Gulf of Mexico to Eastern Maine in approximately 24 hours. That velocity and the more westward track did not allow sufficient time for heavy winds and tides to develop off shore.

In comparison, Gilman recalled the Blizzard of 1978 which flooded many low-lying areas. That storm completely stalled for 24 hours, resulting in heavy tides, winds and 27 inches of snowfall during a two-day period, Feb. 6-7, 1978.

The weekend storm brings this winter's snow fall to 62 inches in Quincy, the most since 1981-82. The last time the city received more than 10 inches of snow was Feb. 10-12, 1983, when 15 inches fell, Gilman said.

And, for those who have had with the white stuff, consider this: Quincy was dumped with 18 inches of snow April 5-7, 1982.

"We have plenty of snow season left," Gilman said.

Walk For Hunger To Help Six Local Food Agencies

Six local emergency feeding programs will benefit from Project Bread's 24th annual Walk for Hunger to take place Sunday, May 2, with registration from 7 to 9 a.m. on the Boston Common.

The Walk raises millions of dollars annually to fund 424 soup kitchens, food pantries and homeless shelter feeding programs across the state. The agencies include six in Quincy: Atlantic Neighborhood Center, DOVE, Protestant Social Service Bureau, Quincy Community Action Programs, Quincy Interfaith Sheltering Coalition/Father Bill's Place; and the Salvation Army.

It is estimated that more than 500,000 people in Massachusetts are hungry. Mary Brelsford, director of Quincy Community Action Programs Emergency Food Center, said she believes the hunger situation is worsening.

"The number of people coming to us has gotten so large that we have had to say no to some families," Brelsford said. "Things are getting desperate here, and we need everyone in the community to help."

"The Walk for Hunger is an essential part of our Center, and the success of our Center relies heavily on it."

This year's Walk begins on the Boston Common by Charles Street, and the 20-mile route weaves through Boston, Brookline, Newton and Cambridge, before returning to the Common. For walkers who choose to walk fewer than 20 miles, free bus service is offered from various points on the route back to Boston Common.

Individuals interested in walking or volunteering should contact Project Bread at 617-723-5000.

Safety Checklist For Apartment Folks

Let's Look At The Building

Is there some kind of control over who enters and leaves the building?

Are entrances, parking areas, hallways, stairways, and laundry rooms well-lighted?

Are fire stairs locked from the stairwell side?

Are laundry rooms and storage areas kept locked?

Are mail boxes in a well-traveled area? Do they have good locks?

Have any apartments been burglarized recently? If so how did the thieves get in?

Your Own Apartment

Does the entry door have a deadbolt lock and a peephole?

Are sliding glass doors leading to balconies secured by pins in the frame or a wooden rod in the track?

Does the management permit tenants to change locks when they move in?

Do you leave a radio playing and a light on while you are gone?

Do you alert your neighbors or your building manager when you leave for a trip or vacation?

Get To Know Your Neighbors

And Work Together

Think about organizing an apartment watch so neighbors can look out for each other.

In large complexes and buildings, consider volunteer tenant patrols to watch for crime in and around the building, provide escort services for the elderly and people who may be out at night, or sit in the lobby to monitor people entering the building. Teenagers can be great resource for these efforts.

Work to insure that management provides adequate building security.

If someone had been the victim of a crime, be a good neighbor. Lend an ear and lead them to others who can help.

If you would like to organize an Apartment Watch Group, please contact Officer Bob Hanna, Crime Prevention Officer, at 479-1212 ext. 349. He will help you get started.

Housing Affordability Reaches 18 Year High

Housing affordability conditions are at the highest level in 18 1/2 years.

"The combination of mortgage interest rates, family income and home prices are the best we've seen since the second quarter of 1974," says Betsy D. Tretheway, President of Quincy & South Shore Board of Realtors.

Assuming a 20 percent downpayment and standard lending requirements during the last quarter of 1992, a family earning the national median family income of $36,837 had 129.6 percent of the income required to purchase a median-priced existing home, which was $103,400.

"The numbers are different for first-time buyers making smaller downpayments, but for many people, today's conditions present the opportunity of a lifetime," Tretheway says.

For example, an income of $20,000 can afford a house priced at $72,800.

On average, purchasing power has increased 9.4 percentage points during the last year for the typical family.

"In real dollars, a median-income family can afford a home costing $14,900 more than a year ago," Tretheway explains.

A challenge remains for many renters trying to make the transition to homeownership. A typical renter, between the ages of 25 and 44, earns $27,847. "This is only 84.9 percent of the income required to purchase the national median starter home, costing $87,900. However, with a downpayment of ten percent at that level, a first-time buyer can afford a home costing $74,600," Tretheway adds.

For first-time buyers, conditions are the best they've been since 1977.

"To put it in perspective, an entry-level buyer can afford a home costing $7,400 more than a year ago," she explains.

The driving force behind improved affordability conditions is the drop in mortgage rates. During the last quarter of 1992, the average effective rate for loans on existing homes was 7.74 percent, the lowest in almost 20 years, she says.

"The good news is that mortgage rates should be pretty stable this year, and the thinking is they'll come down a little further," Tretheway says. "This will help offset modest increases in home prices, and keep these excellent affordability conditions on an even keel," she adds.

Sober Friends Granted Non-Alcoholic Club License

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The Quincy License Board Tuesday granted a request from the fraternal organization Sober Friends of Tammany, Inc. for a Non-Alcohol Club License at 92 Sagamore St.

The license was given a 90-day trial period.

The matter had been continued from the board's March 9 meeting because Police Chief Francis Mullen said he wanted to personally view the site before making a decision on the license.

Building Matthias Mulvey had also told Atty. Steven Fleming March 9 that the board would need specifics on the exact square footage of the site (currently an abandoned building), as well as the planned hours of operation and parking procedures for the club, before the request could be granted.

Although Mullen was unable to attend Tuesday's meeting because he was out on a police call, City Clerk Joseph Shea said that he had spoken to the chief and that Mullen observed the site and "saw no problems there."

Mulvey also said Tuesday that full plans for the site had been submitted and that the total square footage at the site is "approximately 1,800 feet, if that."

Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers told the board that a community meeting on the matter was recently held and presented a list of conditions that residents complied which they wished to be observed if the license were granted.

Chief among the residents' concerns were two that Mulvey had questioned: parking and hours of operation. Atty. Thomas Barrett, sitting in for Fleming, said there were nine available parking spots at the site.

Mulvey said that according to the zoning bylaws of the city, one parking space covers four occupants of a particular site. He then suggested that the nine spaces be allowed and that the maximum number of members at the club at one time be limited to 36. Both Ayers and Barrett agreed this was reasonable.

Ayers said residents wanted the club, which will open daily at noon, to close nightly at midnight. Barrett said the members of the club were hoping for a 2 a.m. closing.

Mulvey suggested to Ayers that he agree to the 2 a.m. closing, since the license is to be reviewed within 90 days. He added that Sober Friends could be summoned to appear before the board at any time if residents see fit.

The board granted the license under the stipulation that all of the residents' conditions be met. Other conditions included: that a set of bylaws be provided from the club, that the club meet all of the building inspector's requirements, that the parking area behind the building be repaved, that area residents may be eligible for membership, that club members agree to participate in community activities, that the building and grounds be maintained in good condition, that the license be reviewed after 90 days, and that when the lease of the building expires with the owner, the club license will also expire.

OUR THREE-POINT STANCE

Drivers of older model cars should check their rear seats for the presence of lap-and-shoulder belts. Not all automobiles manufactured before 1992 have the safer three-point belts in their outboard backseat positions. Instead, they may only be equipped with rear-seat lap belts. If so, the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA) recommends replacing lap belts with the lap-and-shoulder belts.

Nearly all automobile manufacturers offer inexpensive retrofit kits for this purpose. To maintain the reliability of these restraints, they should be installed by the dealer. Federal regulations require all cars made after September 1, 1992 to have three-point belts in the outboard backseat positions. Cars made prior to that date are the responsibility of owners in this respect.

HINT: According to the NHTSA, replacing rear-seat lap belts with 3-point belts could save 25 to 165 lives a year.

NPS Enters Agreement To Conduct Tours At United First Parish

Hailed as an historic occasion which will help attract 35,000 visitors to Quincy Center during the tourist season annually, a "Memorandum of Understanding" was signed among the National Park Service, United First Parish Church and the Adams Temple and School Fund Tuesday.

The agreement was signed by Charles Francis Adams, sixth generation descendant from President John Adams and chairman of the Adams Temple and School Fund; Marianne Peak, superintendent of the Adams National Historic Site; and Brenda Powers, chairwoman of the United First Parish Church Board of Governors.

Representing his family, Adams expressed his enthusiasm for the new agreement. "It's taken a long time and a lot of work on the part of the mayor and his staff, Marianne and her people to make this event possible."

"I am very grateful to those of you who have agreed to support this activity."

The signing was witnessed by Mayor James

Sheets who has been influential in negotiating this partnership to insure that the crypt of the Adams presidents and their wives is available to the public.

Officials said the agreement ushers in an exciting new era for Quincy tourism.

"This is a very historic moment, in not only the history of this church but also the history of this city," Dr. Rev. Sheldon W. Bennett, minister of United First Parish Church said as signatories signed

Clinton Invited To Run In Quincy PAL Road Race

One of the country's best known runners, President Bill Clinton, is being invited to take part in the Quincy Police Athletic League 3.5 mile road race here Sunday, May 16.

The invitation went out this week in a letter signed by Mayor James Sheets, Dist. Atty. William Delahunt, Police Chief Francis Mullen and Officer Robert Hanna.

Delahunt is chief executive officer of Quincy PAL, Hanna is president and race director and Sheets and Mullen are board members.

PRESIDENT CLINTON

The race raises funds to benefit underprivileged youth in Quincy.

Clinton was informed that the race raises funds to benefit underprivileged youth in Quincy.

The letter also noted:

"The City of Quincy, Massachusetts is rich in history and is known as The City of Presidents. John Adams and John Quincy Adams were both born and raised in the City of Quincy."

"The road race course, mostly flat and fast, passes such historic landmarks as the Church of the Presidents; John Adams and John Quincy Adams are both buried here. The course will also pass The Adams Academy, and the Dorothy Quincy House,

23 Of 30 Precincts Realigned 10,000-12,000 Voters Affected By City Redistricting Plan

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

The state has approved a redistricting plan for Quincy which affects some 10,000 to 12,000 registered voters or 20 to 25 percent of the city's electorate, according to City Clerk Joseph Shea.

The new plan means approximately 50 streets have changed wards and/or precincts.

The plan, okayed by the City Council and Mayor James Sheets earlier this month, was approved by the state Local Election Districts Review Commission March 17. A public hearing on the plan was held Feb. 25.

Shea said all registered voters whose precinct or ward has changed will be notified by mail before the Sept. 14 primary, probably in August. In addition, legal advertisements listing the street-by-street composition of each of the city's six wards and five precincts will be published in The Quincy Sun before the primary, the clerk said.

Shea emphasized the new plan, which is required by federal law, does not mean whole-sale changes in the city's ward-precinct make-up. Rather, the changes are minor due to shifts in population and growth since the last redistricting in 1985.

"Many changes are from precinct to precinct within the same ward. There are some streets that changed from one ward to another but we didn't change significantly," Shea said.

The bulk of the changes occurred in Ward 5 Precinct 1, Ward 3 Precinct 1 and Ward 3 Precinct 2 in the areas of Hospital Hill, Quincy Square and Wollaston Hill.

Under the "one-man, one-vote" guideline of the U.S. Constitution, the city must redistrict so that each city official represents the same amount of people as close as possible. To redistrict, communities must apply federal census figures.

According to the 1990 federal census, Quincy had a population of 84,985. With six wards, each ward must be comprised of approximately 14,164 residents. With five precincts in each ward, each precinct must have 2,833 residents (or within five percent or 144 of that figure, up or down).

Using that formula and natural boundaries such as bodies of water and city-town lines, precincts are "built up." Quincy, like communities across the United States, redistrict to

Cites Personal, Family Reasons Cahill Will Not Challenge Sheets

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

City personal and family reasons, Councillor Tim Cahill announced Tuesday he will not challenge Mayor James Sheets this fall.

Instead, the third-term councillor-at-large will campaign for re-election.

"I choose not to challenge Jim Sheets for the mayor's seat. The time is not right for me. Jim Sheets is very popular and I don't think that it's a good time for me to challenge him at this time," Cahill said in an interview Tuesday.

Cahill, 34, said he thought he would attempt to unseat Sheets "at one point this year" but after some serious consideration and discussion with key supporters, he realized the time is not right.

"First of all, it would be a very tough road to try to beat Sheets. Second, it's not the right time as far as my family and personal life goes to take such a risk.

TIM CAHILL

"Third, I'm young and as much as I believe I'm ready for the office, I could use a few more years of seasoning and the experience that goes with it."

In announcing his decision, Cahill said he felt "a little awkward because I gave the impression I was going to run this year. And I honestly believed at one point this year I was going to run."

"But after selling my business (Hand Shakes cafe in February) and talking with key supporters, I realize it's not in the best interest of Tim Cahill or the city of Quincy to challenge Jim Sheets."

For one thing, Cahill said he believes Quincy citizens are not ready for a new mayor.

"People are not ready for change and I represent that and I can't force my beliefs and positions on the electorate. They don't want change right now and they don't need a divided government. The city needs to be unified to be governed efficiently."

Cahill also said his family, which would have supported his campaign, was a key factor in his decision.

"My family comes first. The reason I'm in politics is to make Quincy a better place. It wouldn't have been in my best interest to make a run at this time."

Cahill, who is looking for a full or part-time job

Cahill Will Not Challenge Sheets

after selling his business last month, said a full-blown run for the mayor's office may have strained his family's finances. He decided against taking that risk.

"To challenge (Sheets), I would have had to campaign full-time and I can't afford not to work for the rest of the year," he said. With his decision not to challenge Sheets, Cahill said he will now focus on finding work to help support his family.

Cahill had been considered the most likely opponent to run against Sheets this year. Other potential candidates, including Councillor Michael Cheney, took themselves out of consideration late last year or earlier this year.

Save for a token candidate, it appears Sheets will be uncontested for a second straight term. If that happens, he would be the only Quincy mayor to win two consecutive terms without opposition in the city's 105-year history.

Three mayors have been re-elected without opposition once: Thomas Burgin in 1940; Francis McCauley in 1983 and Sheets in 1991. Sheets was first elected in 1989.

A Sheets-Cahill contest would have been a mighty clash, some observers think, featuring contrasting campaign styles and techniques. Sheets' popularity and consensus-building approach to government versus Cahill's maverick, competitive and outspoken demeanor could have made a "nasty" matchup.

That, Cahill said, is not the type of campaign he wants to run.

"I think it would have gotten nasty and I don't have any personal animosity toward Jim Sheets. I didn't want to go out of character and go negative."

"When I run, I want to promote my own perceptions. I couldn't have done that in this race."

Before making his decision, Cahill said he conducted his own informal poll to gauge his chances. "I found I would have had a lot of support but I also found a lot of unwillingness to commit to my campaign and abandon Jim Sheets."

"People were upfront and honest with me and I took that as constructive, not criticism and that helped in my decision. It was people outside the political spectrum who said it wasn't the right time for me.

"I'm still interested in being mayor but not at this time."

Cahill, leaving the door open for a 1995 mayoral bid, said he will concentrate on his council re-election bid. "I think I can be effective speaking out as a city councillor and still be a voice in city government."

Cahill said his decision was reinforced by the wide open Boston mayoral fight triggered by Ray Flynn's decision to become the U.S. ambassador to the Vatican.

"The mayor's race in Boston takes a lot of attention away from Quincy. To unseat a popular incumbent, it would have to be the race of the state and that won't be," Cahill said.

"The odds would have been stacked against me."

Cahill could become part of another mayoral campaign. He said he will get involved in Brian Donnelly's bid for mayor of Boston if the former congressman gets in the race.

"I think he (Donnelly) would make a great mayor of Boston. The campaign would be good experience as well."

Hearing Held On College Governance

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The Quincy College Governance Committee Monday night held a public hearing to allow residents to voice their opinions on its plans to submit a recommendation of an 11 to 15-member board of trustees at the college to Mayor James Sheets.

The 13-member committee was appointed as a task force by Sheets in January for two reasons: to determine the future relationship between the city and the college, and to decide how a new governing board of trustees at the college would be selected.

School Committee member Linda Stice unveiled the committee's proposal for the new board of trustees, which would replace the School Committee as the governing body at the college, at last week's City Council meeting.

Although several questions were raised at the public hearing, no concrete answers were offered. Stice, who serves as chairman of the governance committee, said the purpose of the meeting was simply to allow the public to speak.

"Our purpose tonight is to listen to you," Stice told the audience. She added that written answers to the questions raised at the hearing could be offered after the governance committee's meeting "as a whole" today (Thursday).

Several members of the governance committee were unable to attend the public hearing.

Two city councillors spoke at the hearing. Ward 2 Councillor Theodore DeCristofaro commended the work done by the governance committee, saying he had only one concern: that at least one city councillor be made a member of the college's board of trustees. DeCristofaro noted that the experience of a councillor could strengthen the board.

[Two councillors currently serve on the Quincy College Governance Committee: Ward 3 Councillor Lawrence Chretien and Ward 4 Councillor Thomas

Fabrizio. Both attended Monday night's hearing.]

Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson agreed, saying that he could "see some benefit" to a councillor being on the board. He added that his main concern was whether any guidelines and bylaws would be set up by the board of trustees.

School Committee member Margaret King voiced similar sentiments, saying it would be beneficial to the board if at least one former or present city councillor and one former or present School Committee member could be included.

King raised several issues to be considered by the governance committee, among them who would have control over the contracts of college employees, the fair treatment of non-union employees, and the "accountability" of the new board of trustees.

"Accountability is the main concern," said King. "If none of the trustees are elected, who will they be accountable to?"

Judy Brams of 107 Atlantic St. disagreed with DeCristofaro, Kolson and Fabrizio, saying that no elected officials should be allowed on the board of trustees.

"As a citizen of Quincy and part-time student of the college, I think for once we should form an organization where politics is taken out," she said.

Patricia McDermott, a faculty member at the college, said she wondered what good the implementation of a board of trustees would do for those attending the school.

"I appreciate the committee's concern about the faculty, but how are the students going to benefit?" she asked.

Bob Waywood, another faculty member, said that the governance committee should "have open minds" in implementing the board, suggesting that the city add one new seat apiece to the School Committee and the City Council. The new School Committee member and councillor, Waywood reasoned, could spend most of their time on their board duties.

"There ought to be some elasticity here," he said.

Former School Committee member Jane Powers said her two concerns were what would happen to the school's present employees and how their grievances would be handled, and who would have fiscal authority over the warrants issued by the new board of trustees.

Powers serves on the college's current board of trustees, which serves as an advisory group to the School Committee, but stressed after Monday's hearing she was speaking only as a public citizen at the hearing.

Stice also read a letter from Citywide Parents Council President JoAnn Bragg, who was unable to attend the meeting. In the letter, Bragg stated that at present "twice as much time" is being spent on college matters as those pertaining to Quincy elementary and secondary schools, and although "the task force (governance committee) is heading in right directions...there are many more questions to be answered."

Among the governance committee's major recommendations for the board of trustees unveiled last week by Stice were that the board would be made up of both Quincy and non-Quincy residents, that members would serve six-year terms, and that the board would make the policy at the school and have the power to select, advise, evaluate and fire the college president.

Stice said after Monday's hearing, however, that it is not the intention to exclude local politicians from the board, as was reported last week by The Quincy Sun, The Patriot Ledger, and WJDA. Stice said that although no such officials would be required to serve on the board, they would be allowed to if they so desired.

Stice also reiterated her statement from last week's City Council meeting that she intends to have a complete proposal for the board on Sheets' desk by April 1.

License Board Denies Request For Sports Bar

By MICHAEL WHALEN
The Quincy License Board Monday unanimously denied a request from KNK Enterprises, Inc. for permission to open a sports bar at 78A and 78B Sagamore St., the site of the former Sagamore Inn.

The board made its decision after Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers and several area residents voiced opposition to the request. No one from the North Quincy neighborhood spoke in favor.

Atty. Mark Fitzsimmons told the board that the applicant, Pembroke builder John J. Keefe, wanted to open a neighborhood tavern "with a sports bar-type theme." Keefe, who wanted to run the establishment under the name O'Keefe's Sports Pub, was requesting Common Victuaries-All Alcoholic, Pinball and Pool Table Licenses.

Fitzsimmons said he wanted Keefe's request to be "judged on its own merit" and not by the problems caused in the past by the presence of the Sagamore Inn.

"You don't mind dying for your own sins, but not for the sins of others," said Fitzsimmons. "We are not the Sagamore Inn." The License Board closed the Sagamore Inn five months ago, according to police, because informants contacted the police department about alleged drug dealing inside the bar.

Despite Fitzsimmons' presentation, however, Ayers and the residents in attendance at the License Board meeting were adamant in their opposition to the request.

Ayers said the main concerns of residents voiced at a community meeting on the matter March 18 were public safety, parking, the past problems at the Sagamore Inn, and the need for a bar at the site.

On this last concern, Ayers noted that there already "plenty of them" (establishments selling liquor) in the area.

Ayers said in addition to the residents, Councillors Timothy Cahill, Michael Cheney and Joseph LaRaia were in opposition to the request. City Clerk Joseph Shea also read letters in opposition sent to the board from Cheney and the Atlantic Neighborhood Association.

Ayers also presented petitions and other letters from residents to the board request that the license be denied.

Several residents, including Linda Lund of 14 Billings St. and Neil Sartell of 50 Young St., voiced their opinions at the meeting.

"I'm in opposition," said Lund. "My children were unable to play at the (nearby Welcome Young) playground, and it was very congested down there (while the Sagamore Inn was open). It's been very enjoyable the past few months."

"Since it's (Sagamore Inn) been closed, it's been great," said Sartell. "There's less noise, less traffic and less clutter, and I've seen children playing at the playground."

"I'm sorry, but I don't think that establishment belongs in the area. I just don't see the need for it."

After hearing all of the opposition to the request, board members responded with similar sentiments.

"I don't think there's a need for another bar there," said Police Chief Francis Mullen. "I'm not for it."

"I concur with the chief," said Building Inspector Matthias Mulvey. "Since it has

Urges Youngsters To Get Involved In Youth Council

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

The Quincy City Youth Council has announced the establishment of a new Youth Council, this new Council shall be established by the writing of an 250 word essay telling the Quincy City Youth Council Directors why they should be selected to hold an office in the Quincy City Youth Council for a two years term. Applications may be obtained at City Hall City Council Office. Deadline for essays May 17, 1993.

I urge the youth, the students of Quincy's schools to take advantage of the opportunity being advanced by the Quincy's City Youth Council. I do believe this concept (Youth City Council) being offered to be unique in this Commonwealth.

The Mayor and City Council in their wisdom have made available to the youth a vehicle where by in formal sessions (quasi official) their needs can be expressed in open debate, ward by ward in the City of Quincy. No greater form of expression, communication pertaining to their welfare can be than in writing of the essay suggested by the Youth Council Directors. The age gap has shrunk so rapidly in the past several years it may be time for the youth to become more involved in dialogue (partisan) amongst themselves to prepare themselves in making adjustments, preventing or mitigate serious happenstances that are bound to occur in life.

Operating this organization with their peers on a parochial level, education brings on a meaning different for it is personal, ego struck non-sense approach dedicated to procedure prescribed by an agenda.

This age of communication, the amounts of information available to students are not presented or articulated fine enough for their comprehension, under their relationship to the Youth Council this failure may be corrected with dialogue and research available in their committee assignments. I challenge the youth to take their rightful place in this time of transition. Their invitation to write an essay of 250 words would be an inspiration to the people who made the Quincy City Youth Council a reality.

NOTICING A WARNING TREND

Auto makers are increasingly turning to separate sets of temperature controls for both drivers and passengers. Far from being redundant, the climate control separation is based on the differing needs of those who must remain alert enough to drive safely and those who simply want to be transported comfortably. In fact, most passengers prefer higher cabin temperatures than drivers. This difference may stem from the fact that the act of driving does generate some heat. In addition, a study by one auto manufacturer shows that cabin temperature has an effect on drivers' alertness levels. Specifically, after one hour of driving, drivers in warm cabins (80 degrees F.) missed 50 percent more traffic signals and displayed 22 percent slower response times than drivers in cooler cabins (70 degrees F.).

HINT: The longer drivers in warm cars (80 degrees F.) drive, the more their alertness levels dropped. Let the professional service team at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO check over every system in your car. Your car is probably one of your most expensive possessions, so doesn't it make sense to have it serviced by the best technicians around. Come by 258 Quincy Ave., E. ## Laura Bids Fond Farewell Laura DeCristofaro, like the parking meter, will soon be gone from the Quincy Center scene. One of Quincy's four original meter maids, she will retire April 2 after 21 years of tagging cars for parking violations.

A familiar figure—and a popular one despite the nature of her work—she has been a meter maid (now known as parking control officer) since Feb. 1, 1972.

She was appointed with Dolores Silva, Bertha Massey and Joan Sturgill to take over tagging duties from regular police officers. The other three hung up their books of tickets sometime ago.

Laura recalls the days when a meter violator merely took the ticket to the police station and squared things by dropping a nickel or a dime into a jar.

"It was pretty simple back then," she remembers. "There were fewer violation categories."

So, she issued fewer tickets then.

"Maybe 10 or 12 a day," she says.

And, today?

"Maybe 50 or 60."

How many tickets does that add up to for her in those 21 years?

"Not a million as some people might think," she laughs. "But thousands, I guess."

She says there is no truth to wide speculation that meter maids work on commission or are given a daily quota to fill.

"If I were on commission I'd have retired wealthy a long time ago," she says.

And, she says, there is no truth to the general suspicion that meter maids hide in doorways ready to pounce out as a meter expires.

"We make our rounds and if we find a meter expired, we tag the car," she says. "We don't hang around waiting for it to expire."

She has had her share of abuse through the years—usually from chronic violators who think they are privileged characters and don't have to put money in a meter.

Among them are the "gamblers" who figure they will get back before their car before the meter maid gets there. They get abusive when they lose.

Then there are the ones who claim the meters are running fast.

The most popular refrain from motorists who return as a meter maid is decorating the windshield with a parking ticket: "I only ran into the store for a minute."

"We don't know whether they were in there for a minute or an hour," says Laura. "We make our rounds and if we come by and find a meter expired, we tag the car. If they ran into a store for only a minute without putting money in, it won't save them from a ticket."

She covered a lot of ground. From Hancock and Granite St. to the Central Middle School area, Adams St., Whitney Rd., Woodward Ave., Russell Park and back.

Laura's decision to retire has nothing to do with the fact the parking meters are being removed. She could have stayed on enforcing other parking violations.

"It's time to go," she says. "Time to take it easy. But I'm going to miss the business people in downtown. They've been wonderful."

"I made a lot of friends on the job. They appreciated that I had a job to do and that I tried to do it as fairly as possible. I think they respected me for that."

She has no special plans for retirement except to spend more time with her husband, Jim, who is retired. They are parents of five grown children.

"We'll probably get in some walking together and get away for awhile."

Laura hopes to see the downtown area prosperous once more and the vacant store fronts filled with specialty shops.

"I've always shopped in Quincy first," she says. "I really don't like the malls."

So, she'll be back as a loyal shopper.

You know, with that friendly smile, it made getting a ticket from her seem a lot less painful.

Spring Is Here And If You Can't Contain Yourself, Contain Your Plants

You can plant not only a nice selection of small shrubs in buckets, tubs and decorative cement containers, but also a wide variety of flowers, herbs and vegetables. Some seed companies such as Shephards Seed Co. even list particular varieties that will do exceptionally well in containers.

Many perennials will also adapt well to these situations and provide you with many years of blooms and foliage.

As with any other type of gardening, planning helps. However, with container planting, if it doesn't look good here, move it over there.

Containers should have drain holes or drainage material and a good quality soil mix in them. Fertilizing is best with a weaker mix than normal but on a more frequent basis and watering has to be watched more closely. The good news is that weeding is minimal. And insects are more easily controlled.

See our selection of containers and statuary available in early April.

NPS Enters Agreement To Conduct Tours At United First Parish

the agreement.

"I want to thank all of you here present, and the citizens of Quincy, for your support and encouragement. We hold, as community, as a city and as this church, a priceless heritage, a heritage that goes right to very spirit of our nation, a heritage of liberty, a heritage of just government under the rule of law, a heritage that the rest of the world looks to as a model for their own efforts and as an inspiration."

Beginning April 18, the Adams National Historic Site and the UFPC will provide public access and interpretive programs at the Church of the Presidents, including the church sanctuary and the crypt of Presidents John Adams and John Quincy Adams, and their respective wives, Abigail Adams and Louisa Catherine Adams.

Tours will be given Monday through Saturday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., and Sunday 1 to 5 p.m., from April 18 through Nov. 10. Tours will be conducted by National Park Service rangers and volunteers beginning in the vestibule.

The program will provide continuity to the Adams story, from the birth of the two Presidents in the Adams Birthplaces on Franklin St., through their presidential years in the Adams Mansion or "Old House," to their final resting place at the church located at 1306 Hancock St.

The church will retain its autonomy and is not a part of the National Park Service. Public access is subject to reasonable restrictions for religious services and church programs, such as Sunday morning services, wedding and memorial services. The church will retain full title to and control of its property.

To accommodate the anticipated influx in visitors, a UFPC site manager will be stationed in the vestibule to welcome guests.

An admissions program separate from the National Park Service will be instituted at the church. Adult visitors will pay the church $1; children 16 years and under will be admitted free.

Admission fees will help fund building rehabilitation and other services brought on by increased visitation.

Bennett noted the Adams Temple and School Fund was established prior to the building of the church by John Adams. The proceeds of the fund helped build the sanctuary. The fund also holds the title to the crypt.

Sheets said Quincy is blessed because it has one of the richest histories of any city in this country.

"It has been the objective of my administration since the first day I took office to indeed emphasize the importance of that rich heritage and make as much of that heritage available to the people not only of this city and of this state but to the people of this country.

"As a city, and working together with the United First Parish Church and National Park Service and others we are beginning to open up our great treasure of history to many, many people."

The mayor thanked all of the signatories who were part of the agreement for their work over the past 18 months.

Sheets was also successful in acquiring corporate sponsorships to help make the partnership possible. BFI, Inc., Aslanis Seafood Company in Quincy, and Stop and Shop have each contributed $5000.

The fourth corporate sponsor will be announced at a later time.

Gus Aslanis of Aslanis Seafood, and Missy Greeley and Bill Grize of Stop and Shop attended Tuesday's ceremony.

The $20,000 supplied by corporate sponsors will cover utilities, custodial services and greeting services.

Peak anticipated 35,000 visitors to the church annually.

"This is a magnificent historic resource that allows us to tell the Adams story," the superintendent said. "It is a final resting place and it does allow us to think about the strength and integrity of the Adams family, their contribution to America and our government."

"Although it is the final resting place, it isn't the end of the story. It is just the beginning of all of us to provide interpretation throughout our community, to our community, to visitors all over the world," she added.

Lewis Named City Manager At $10,000

The City Council elected Edward T. Lewis to the $10,000 a year post of city manager, replacing Donald H. Blatt who was leaving April 9 to accept a similar position in West Hartford, Conn.

The Council interviewed four candidates — Lewis, George W. Yarrington, executive secretary of the Quincy Taxpayers Association, William H. Mitchell, an engineer, and William A. Gilede of Weymouth.

Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa said the vote for Lewis was 6-0 with one councillor, Mrs. Edna B. Austin, vacationing in Florida at the time.

Lewis, 50, who held a city job since 1925, had been Blatt's administrative assistant at $5,600 a year. He was to serve as city manager until Jan. 1, 1958, when Plan A was due to replace Plan E.

COSTLY SNOW STORMS

Department of Public Works officials said that three snow storms in eight days had cost the city $175,000 in snow removal expenses, raising the total since the first of the year to $264,000.

The first storm on March 16 cost $42,000, the second $98,000 and the third on March 24 cost $35,000. It was believed to be the most costly series of snow storms in the city's history.

Mayor Della Chiesa said it would mean $1.64 on the tax rate.

BUSINESS UP

The U.S. Census of Business showed that retail sales in 863 Quincy stores was up 33 per cent from 1948 to 1954 and store parlors were up 28 per cent over the same period.

"These increases are due fundamentally to our parking program," said William A. O'Connell, executive vice president of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce

Amego, Inc. To Participate In Walk For Hunger

Amego, Inc., a Quincy-based educational, vocational and residential program for autistic adolescents and young adults, will join thousands of other Massachusetts volunteers who support Project Bread in its annual Walk for Hunger.

This year will mark the first time that students, clients, staff, family and friends of the private, non-profit Human Services provider will participate, on an agency-wide bases, in the yearly fund-raiser whose purpose is to feed the hungry.

In previous years, Amego has supported the project through individual involvement of teachers and behavior therapists, and by sponsorship of individual walkers. This year, however, the agency has made an effort to develop and sponsor a corporate team. Some of the monies raised by this very worthwhile project will find their way back to Quincy in the form of funding for local food pantries and homeless shelters.

Quincy residents who would like to participate by sponsoring an Amego walker are urged to contact Fran Meade, Amego health services coordinator, at 471-2345, or Lil Greene, administrative, coordinator, at the same number.

Our Policy On Engagement Photographs And Wedding Announcements

The Quincy Sun will continue to publish photographs with engagement announcements as it always has.

The Sun will also continue to use in wedding announcements the names of all members of the wedding party including maid or matron of honor, best man, parents, bridesmaids, ushers, flower girls and ringbearers, etc.

We invite engaged couples to submit their photos with their announcements, and when submitting their wedding photo to include a complete listing of the wedding party.

Black and white photos are preferred. The Sun can convert most color photos to black and white for publication but the photo loses some clarity in the process.

We suggest that when you have your engagement photo taken, you request the studio to send a copy to The Sun with the reminder that The Sun is continuing its policy of publishing engagement photos.

The Sun also publishes articles and photos of wedding anniversaries beginning with the 25th anniversary.

And, as in the past, there is no charge.

John Spada Candidate For School Committee

John Spada of Forbes Hill Rd., Wollaston announces his candidacy for one of the three School Committee seats in this fall's city election.

A Business Unit Manager for Fidelity Investments, he will be making his first bid for public office.

A captain in the U.S. Army Reserve, he was called to active duty during Operation Desert Shield and received the Army Commendation Medal for his services as the Logistics Officer for the 1173d U.S. Army Terminal Transportation Unit.

He also received a Certificate of Appreciation from Fort Stewart, Georgia for his contributions to the U.S. efforts in the Middle East.

Spada is a graduate of the University of Massachusetts at Boston. He is married to Marie Phaneuf, a long-time employee of State Street Bank in Quincy.

JOHN SPADA

Spada has been a strong advocate of homeless and economically disadvantaged people. He has coordinated several food drives for the benefit of Father Bill's Place, The Boston Food Bank and St. Mary's Church in West Quincy. Spada has also volunteered as an office manager for the Citizen's Tax Aid Program, a group that prepares tax returns free of charge for low income and elderly people.

As a candidate, Spada said he is looking forward to the upcoming campaign and addressing many of the complex issues that are facing the city's school system. In particular, he said he will focus on the economic and social issues surrounding the Educational Reform Act. Spada also feels that the increasing specialization of the global job market should guide the academic and vocational curriculum of our schools in order to give our students an advantage in college and job placements.

Spada's Campaign Committee Chairman, Brian Mulken requests that Quincy residents interested in participating in focus group discussions of issues related to the Quincy School System, or volunteering to work as part of the Spada Campaign Committee to call 770-9694.

License Board Denies Request For Sports Bar

been closed, there has been a lot less congestion and kids have been out playing. For me, public safety is the number one issue down there, as with the chief."

Health Commissioner Jane Galloway said she saw a "sincere, genuine fear of similar patterns of problems" in the neighborhood coming from the residents.

"No one should have to live like that," said Galloway.

Fire Chief Thomas

Gorman also voiced opposition.

"The concerns of the neighbors in that area are justified," said Gorman. "It (the sports bar) will have a big impact on the neighborhood. The North Quincy people have put up with a lot (already)."

Fitzsimmons, sensing that the board would deny the licenses, said he wished to withdraw the request. Mulvey, however, said because of the residents' concerns, the board should deny the request for withdrawal and take immediate action.

The board voted 4-1 in opposition of the request for withdrawal, with Shea being the lone dissenter. The request for the licenses was then voted down by the unanimous 5-0 vote.

Over 600 At 'A Special Evening With A Special Friend'

—City Hall Legend John Gillis Honored—

JOHN AND VI GILLIS are joined by their family, daughter Pam DeGennaro and her husband, Peter DeGennaro; grandchildren, Laura DeGennaro, Derek DeGennaro and Mark Gillis, Jr.; son Mark Gillis and his wife, the former Diane Brabazon. Over 600 attended the dinner tribute at the Bryan VFW Post.

WARD 2 COUNCILLOR Ted DeCristofaro presented a City Council citation to John Gillis, a life-long Ward 2 resident. From the left are councillors Tim Cahill, Michael Cheney, DeCristofaro, Gillis, Councillors Peter Kolson, Larry Chretien and Tom Fabrizio and Mayor James Sheets.

A QUINCY HIGH School cap and seat cushion were presented to John Gillis by Coach Jack Raymer for his contributions to Quincy High football. Gillis is a member of the Quincy-North Quincy Football Hall of Fame.

FORMER ASSISTANT City Clerk Tom Burke, committee chairman, presents a facsimile of a plaque honoring John Gillis that will be placed in the City Council chamber.

MAYOR JAMES SHEETS in praise of John Gillis said "his heart was always big enough to encompass all of mankind."

ROBERT LA FLEUR, committee member, representing the Quincy Veterans Council, presents John Gillis with a plaque citing his long service to Quincy veterans.

JOSEPH SHEA, who succeeded John Gillis as city clerk, said he could not really fill his shoes. He said he also couldn't fill his chair so he presented Gillis with a Northeastern University captain's chair.

PUBLISHER Henry Bosworth presents a special Page One of The Quincy Sun to John Gillis, commemorating the special tribute to him. The headline reads: "Mr. City Hall" John Gillis: Someone Very Special." Extra copies were distributed to those attending.

10,000-12,000 Voters Affected

satisfy the "one-man, one vote" provision, Shea said. "This goes on across the country, from Congress to local officials. Everybody in all of the land does this," he said. Shea, with the help of Data Processing Director Bob Brennan, drafted 14 plans before sending the final plan to the state for approval. Shea said 23 of 30 precincts had to be realigned to meet the federal guidelines.

The precinct the most out of balance was Ward 6 Precinct 3 which had 918 more people than the requirement. As a result, four streets off the causeway were removed from 6-3 and placed in 6-5: Heath St., Deerfield St., Lansdowne St. and Essex St. Registered voters on these four streets will now vote at the Squantum School, Shea pointed out.

Other changes highlighted by the clerk are:

•Portions of Baxter St., Union St., Pond St., a small portion of Washington St., Glynn Terrace and Walpole St. have been removed from Ward 2 Precinct 1 and placed in Ward 1 Precinct 3. This is essentially the area of upper Quincy Point along Washington St. to McGrath Highway.

•Hancock St. now fully divides Ward 3 and Ward 5. All of Ward 3 is located east of Hancock St.; all of Ward 5 is west of Hancock St.

"That's a logical border," Shea said. "Hancock St. used to bounce around a bit, now it doesn't."

•A portion of Quincy Square formerly in Ward 3 Precinct 1 is now in Ward 5 Precinct 1, and Ward 5

Precinct 3.

•Quincy Hospital, formerly in Ward 3 Precinct 2, is now in Ward 5 Precinct 1. In addition, Grenwood Rd., Colonial Dr., Heritage Rd., Sturtevant Rd. and a portion of Adams St. have also moved from 3-2 to 5-1.

•All of Avon Way, Dixwell Ave., and Roselin Ave., and portions of Presidents Lane, Dimmock St., Glendale Rd., and Thomas Burgin Parkway as well as portions of Quincy Square around City Hall have been removed from Ward 3 Precinct 1 and added to Ward 5 Precinct 1.

•Wollaston Hill (portions of Lincoln Ave., Warren Ave., Belmont St., Highland Ave., South Central Ave. and Beale St. and all of Prospect Ave.,

FORMER MAYOR Francis McCauley presents John Gillis with a framed list of the seven mayors and 38 city councillors he served with during his 35 years as assistant city clerk and city clerk.

SENATOR Michael Morrissey presented John Gillis with a special Senate citation.

NORFOLK COUNTY Sheriff Clifford Marshall recalls how John Gillis helped him start his political career 30 years ago as a successful candidate for the Ward 2 City Council seat.

FORMER MAYOR Walter Hannon paid tribute to Gillis "as a wonderful man and loyal friend to everyone here." Hannon also brought the house down as he ribbed Mayor James Sheets and former Mayors Frank McCauley and Arthur Tobin.

GUIDO PETTINELLI, emcee, presents a special auto license plate V-G1 to VI Gillis.

A HOUSE OF Representatives resolve congratulating John Gillis was presented to him by Rep. Ron Mariano (left) and Rep. Steve Tobin. It was also signed by Rep. Michael Bellotti.

Photos by Sky

JACK BEATON, committee member, presents to John Gillis the 50-year-old adding machine Gillis used as a state auditor and as city clerk.

BILL DRAICCHIO, committee member presents corsages to Laura DeGennaro and to her mother, Pam Gillis DeGennaro.

NORFOLK COUNTY COMMISSION Chairman William O'Donnell of Norwood said he was chairman only because John Gillis, who was also elected to the commission last year, didn't want to be chairman. He said "running against John Gillis would be like running against God."

d By City Redistricting Plan

Grand View Ave., Winthrop Ave., and Marion St., formerly in Ward 5 Precinct 1 are now in Ward 3 Precinct 2.

Myrtle St., Walnut St., Oakridge Rd., and Spruce St., formerly in Ward 6 Precinct 1, are now in Ward 3 Precinct 3.

Residents of the Drohan Apartments, 170 Copeland St., West Quincy, are now part of Ward 4 Precinct 1 instead of 4-2. Also, the Drohan Apartments is the polling precinct for Ward 4 Precinct 1.

Before this change, Drohan apartment residents had to vote at the Lincoln-Hancock Community School instead of the apartment complex. Now, the residents are part of 4-1 and can vote where they live.

"Under this plan, we have changed the boundary lines of Ward 4 Precinct 1 and Ward 4 Precinct 2," Shea said, "so that residents of 170 Copeland St. will vote there and the location will be known as the polling precinct for Ward 4 Precinct 1."

The Lincoln-Hancock School will serve as the polling precinct for Ward 4 Precinct 2.

"Three streets in Ward 4 Precinct 5 are now part of Ward 3 Precinct 1: Marsh St., Stevens St. and a portion of Pleasant St.

Ward 5 Precinct 3 now contains a portion of Quincy Square formerly in Ward 3 Precinct 1. Also, Whitney Rd., Russell Park, Huntley Rd., Faxon Ave. and Saville Ave. have been changed from Ward 3 Precinct 1 to Ward 5 Precinct 3.

In Ward 6 Precinct 2, State Street South complex and Enterprise Dr. and Heritage Dr. have been removed and placed in Ward 3 Precinct 3.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

SCOTT DEWARE

Are you an impulsive person? We all know that some people are more impulsive than others. Some people think twice before doing something; some people don't.

Sometimes it's fun to do things on the spur of the moment. They even seem more exciting and fresh because we didn't have time for pre-conceived ideas of what to expect or how we might feel.

But the really important events in the lives of mature people are not entered into on the "spur of the moment". Events such as marriage, a job change, a trip, an investment, an obligation and other numerous decisions made on the spur of the moment can cause unhappiness - as many people have found out to their sorrow...

Your views and comments are welcome as always and will be appreciated...

Don't Lose A Friend To Drugs

Has a friend become moody, short-tempered, and hostile lately?

Does he/she seem spaced out and always short of cash?

Is he/she suddenly failing courses and running around with kids you don't trust?

Stop and think about it. Your friend may have a drug or alcohol problem.

What You Should Do

Talk to your friend and try to help. Many teenagers get deeper into drugs and alcohol because their friends, teachers, and parents either pretended there wasn't a problem or didn't know what to do.

Learn about the effects of drugs and alcohol and share the knowledge with friends. For example, smoking pot makes it hard to concentrate and remember things. Heavy pot smokers can become psychologically dependent and develop respiratory problems. PCP and LSD can cause permanent brain damage. Sniffing glue, and other substances, can produce heart failure or suffocation. Cocaine is more deadly and addictive than most people realize, and cocaine deaths have jumped dramatically in the past few years.

Get the names and phone numbers of local hot lines and drug abuse counseling services. They usually are listed in the telephone directory under crisis services, alcohol abuse information and treatment, or drug abuse information. Other sources are community and school bulletin boards, libraries or local newspapers. A local hospital or the Drug Control Unit of your local police department may be able to refer you to an outside counseling agency.

Remind your friends that buying or possessing pot, cocaine, LSD, PCP, and other drugs is against the law. Being arrested and getting a record may not seem like a big deal now, but could be when applying for a job or college.

Don't Let Drugs Ruin Your Neighborhood

Get involved! Report suspected drug abuse to your local police department. Even if you don't give you name, turn in drug dealers in your community or school. These people are bringing crime to your neighborhood and ruining the lives of many of your friends. The police need your help to catch them.

QUINCY POLICE DRUG HOT LINE: 328-4527. You will not be required to identify yourself, but it could help.

Spotlight On HEALTH AND FITNESS

Surprising facts on exercising and eating right

Does one serving of tortilla chips go straight to your thighs? Can five minutes of exercise possibly help? With all the noise these days about exercise and eating right, it's hard to figure out fact from fallacy.

The Aerobics and Fitness Association of America has done some legwork to help dispel a few common myths. The following facts should help you get started on the way to total body fitness.

*Fallacy: A calorie is a calorie. One hundred calories of nacho-flavored tortilla chips is the same as 100 calories of Quaker nacho corn cakes.

*Fact: All calories are not created equal. Almost half the calories in nacho chips come from fat, which is more likely to be stored as body fat.

Rice and corn cakes are comprised primarily of complex carbohydrates, which are converted easily into body energy. At 40 calories, Quaker's new nacho corn cakes feature the taste and crunch of nacho corn chips, but with one-third the calories and no fat.

*Fallacy: Cellulite is the most difficult type of fat to lose.

*Fact: The word cellulite was coined to refer to dimpled fat; however, it is just plain fat. The only way to get rid of it — dimpled or not — is through regular aerobic exercise, combined with a reduced-calorie, low-fat diet.

*Fallacy: Exercise can turn fat into muscle.

*Fact: You can't turn apples into oranges, and you can't turn fat into muscle. They are two different types of body mass that can change in volume, but not in substance.

*Fallacy: Exercising only twice a week is wasted effort.

*Fact: A sedentary individual who begins a well-rounded fitness program will benefit from exercising, even as infrequently as twice a week.

*Fallacy: Repeated leg-lifts will eliminate saddlebags.

*Fact: Leg-lifts help strengthen thigh muscles. "Flab" and excess fat is reduced by doing aerobic exercise, and by decreasing fat in the diet.

*Fallacy: The only reason to do sit-ups is to flatten the stomach.

*Fact: By toning abdominal muscles, sit-ups help create a supportive, girder-like effect. Left untuned, abdominal muscles may not provide adequate support for internal organs, which in turn can contribute to lower backache.

The benefits of a healthy lifestyle reach far beyond fat loss — to improved stress management; better overall health; and increased energy, flexibility and strength.

These benefits make exercise and eating right a valuable, life-long pursuit. And warming up to the right snacks is a great way to start. ## What's New In Home Health Care

In 1991, America's health-care bill was close to $750 billion, more than twice what the country spent on defense or education. Of that total bill, Americans spent more than $7.5 billion on home health-care products.

Helping to meet the growing demands of health-conscious consumers is the 1992-93 Health Care Catalog from Sears, which offers a comprehensive selection of home health-care products at competitive prices.

New in this year's catalog is the Allscripts pharmacy prescription service, providing home delivery of more than 10,000 brand name and generic prescription maintenance drugs at a cost savings. Also new are such products as a 24-hour-a-day national medical alert response system with a wireless transmitter, talking clocks, phones and calculators for the blind, easy-access clothing and a selection of mastectomy products.

A staff of telephone consultants trained to answer product questions and file Medicare reimbursement forms for qualifying customers makes ordering quick and easy. Free copies of the Health Care Catalog are available by calling toll-free, 1-800-326-1750.

A Blessing To Patients: Sonographers

If someone told you that they were a diagnostic medical sonographer, what would you think they do for a living? If you're like many Americans, you might confuse it with someone who takes shorthand. Actually, these professionals use ultrasound to assist a physician in making a diagnosis.

In 1991, there were more than 31 million ultrasound examinations performed in the United States. An ultrasound scan, also known as a sonogram, is a diagnostic procedure that uses high frequency soundwaves to image organs, masses, and fluid accumulations within the body. The majority of these are not performed by medical doctors but by professionals known as diagnostic medical sonographers. Although there is no mandatory licensure for sonographers, many choose to prove their competency by passing a comprehensive certification examination in their specialty area and in physics and instrumentation. The Society of Diagnostic Medical Sonographers reports there are currently over 20,000 sonographers in the United States who have successfully completed these exams.

What does a sonographer do?

Though many people are familiar with the obstetrical use of ultrasound, (to ensure that the fetus is healthy) it isn't used only in pregnancy. Because ultrasound is particularly useful in imaging soft tissue organs and masses, it's used in many areas of the body, including the blood flow and contour of arteries and veins; studying the heart and its structures; imaging the soft tissue organs of the abdomen; examining the eye; and evaluating the contour and inner structures of the newborn brain.

Simply put, sonographers collect and integrate data to help the physician make a diagnosis. Though ultrasound exams are very common place today, the professionals performing them are far from ordinary. They're a vital part of the healthcare team.

THE GALLBLADDER

It's hard to find anything good to say about the gallbladder. Ages ago, the three-inch pear-shaped organ was used in food digestion, as the human race eked out a hunter's kill-or-be-killed lifestyle. These days, however, with a balanced diet readily available, the gallbladder as a store-house for digestive bile is probably obsolete. Unfortunately, that doesn't stop it from being a pain. Gallstones, formed from bile inside the gallbladder, are the most common problem. When gallstones obstruct the flow of bile into the small intestine, the result can be excruciating pain, nausea, fever and chills. The good news is that improved treatment options, including new surgical techniques and drugs, are available. P.S. Americans spend over $1 billion a year to care for trouble-making gallbladders.

Lyndon B. Johnson suffered so greatly from gallstones that he at times had to interrupt his campaigning for a stay in the hospital. Fortunately, treatment options for this problem are greatly improved over those in LBJ's time. For more information on this topic or on the prevention and treatment of heart disease, call COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE at 472-2550. We focus on treating the patient, rather than the disease.
